For Just Ten More Days I Will Play Havoc With the Boston Store Stock

WHAT I tell you on this page isn't a marker to what I am going to do in the store. I believe in performance, rather than promises—besides this page isn't big enough anyway to tell you all. Even while I am dictating this, my agents are going through the store with great big blue pencils and marking goods down TO A HALF—TO A THIRD—TO A FOURTH of the regular Boston Store prices—and goodness knows—the Boston Store prices are low enough at any time. Tomorrow will be a banner day of this banner sale.

Yours truly, DAVID LION, Manager

CORPORATIONS TO PAY FOR VALUABLE RIGHTS

Franchise-Grabbing Combines Cause Agitation of Scheme Whereby Common People Shall Secure Benefit from Public Gifts.

By John E. Lathrop. Washington, Aug. 22.—In every state in which a national forest is bound to arise the issue as to whether or not private corporations shall pay for the land privileges procured through the appropriation of water for power in the government forests. The subject is at this time not well developed, and the forest bureau refuses to be quoted in any respect. Privately, however, some of the officials discuss it, and the trend is towards the holding that such corporations should pay something for the land privileges among those officials who are regarded as more or less expert interpreters of the basic law involved. The growing disposition to take advanced ground, such as municipal economists have marched forward to the dismay of those who have heretofore always appealed successfully to the courts on the ground of vested rights. Vested Rights in Plea. It is a fact familiar to all that the "vested rights" plea has been the harbor of refuge for every franchise-favored corporation that ever was brought face to face with modernized demands for recognition of popular rights. Street widening, when asked to submit to municipal regulation, control of fares, enforced increase of service in the form of more cars and extended lines, larger taxation, and other phases of the new franchise regime, have resorted to the courts, and the contention has been that it was "proposed to take away our property," as was argued last winter here in Washington, when congress showed signs of adopting a law for "no state" fares. But it has become one of the accepted doctrines of court interpretation in recent years that "vested rights" must give way partly to the rights of all the people, and, based on this doctrine, courts have swept many of the bulwarks once utilized by the franchise corporation.

proprator rest to resist the second appropriation? Certainly, title must rest on consideration. What consideration did the first man render for his 100,000 horse power? It has come to the knowledge of certain federal officials that more than $50,000, perhaps, 1,000,000 horse power has been appropriated on the Pacific coast during the past five years. The power sites have been located by the syndicate industry and streetcar lines in most of the larger cities. Previously immense numbers of units of power had been appropriated similarly. "As we have looked into this phase of the utilization of water and land," a well versed official said, "we find that hills and have not they years ago, dictates simply have walked into the western states and laid their hands on the people's water power, acquiring without payment invaluable privileges; that they are in a fair way to command the industrial situation of the future; that they will soon be in a position to levy heavy tribute on the people, utilizing as their chief asset the water power which they took from the people, paying absolutely nothing therefor. "Have not the states slept on their rights? Have they not sat idly by, witnessing the monopolization of the magnificent resources of the mountains by the federal government, as compared with the state governments, if there seems to be so-called encroachments by the federal government on the state's rights? Shall the federal government be derelict because the states have neglected the rights of the people of their commonwealths? "This is the trend of thought among many federal officials, some of whom are high up in the administration. As we study the relationship of the government lands to the individual, often we run up against lax conditions such as direct giving away of the people's property and we are expected to conform our policies to such unsatisfactory state policies, or rest under the imputation of federal usurpation." So, while no official utterance may be obtained now, it is safe to assume that before long some sort of change will be made by the federal government for the use of lands in national forests. Governor Hughes Takes Hand. Governor Hughes of New York, who has fallen into the habit of attacking these problems in a rather practical manner, has added to the discussion by recommending the amending of the New York state law governing the use of water power owned by the state, as illustrated by his private corporation on the St. Lawrence river. The amendment as to compensation provides that during the first year of its existence the company shall pay $10,000, the second year $15,000, the third year $20,000, by which time the company expects to be in operation. After that, the company is to pay the state at the rate of 75 cents per horse power for the first 25,000 horse power developed, 50 cents per horse power for the next 75,000 developed, and 25 cents per horse power for all over 25,000 developed but a minimum of $25,000 must be paid to the state. The state engineer has power to prescribe the kind of books and records to be kept by the company. It is estimated that when the works are in full operation the company will pay the state $20,000 a year. Presuming that this law were to be adopted in Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, California, Arkansas and other southern states, what sums would be paid to the states for the use of water power now given freely by those states? Must Attack Problem. Governor Hughes has put up to the states a problem from which close observers here believe there is no escape; that it must be attacked and that the inevitable result will be that radical alteration will be accomplished in some of the statutes of the states, and that power now given freely by those states will be paid for. OYSTER BEDS ARE SUBJECT TO TAXATION (Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Salem, Or., Aug. 23.—J. H. Lutz, tax assessor for Lincoln county, writes Attorney-General Crawford asking what action to take in the private oyster beds in the Yaquina river, the owners of which claim the beds are not assessable. The opinion is given by Assistant Attorney-General Van Winkle that the beds are private property and have no particular right which frees them from taxation. DONT BE BLUE and lose all interest when help is within reach. Herbine will make that liver perform its duties properly. J. B. Vaughn, Elba, Ala., writes: "Being a constant sufferer from constipation and a disordered liver, I have found Herbine to be the best medicine for these troubles, on the market. I have used it constantly. I believe it to be the best medicine of its kind, and I wish all sufferers from these troubles to know the good Herbine has done me. Sold by all druggists."

NOONDAY MINE UNDER OPTION

Herbert Leigh of Eugene Gets Hold of That Property and the Knott.

AMONG THE BEST OF BOHEMIA DISTRICT

Roadbuilding and Rehabilitation the Program on the Noonday—Work on Vesuvius, Golden Slipper and Others—Mineowners Meet. (Special Dispatch to The Journal.) (Bohemia, Or., Aug. 23.—Herbert Leigh of Eugene has succeeded in securing options on several mines on Grouse mountain, in this district, including the Noonday and the Knott properties. He has clients who are considering the advisability of going to work to make those properties productive. At the Noonday there is a 20-stamp mill driven by a steam engine of 120 horsepower. This machinery has not been operated for several years, but it has been taken care of and can be put in commission in a short time. Miners interested in these properties, together with others near the Ridge hotel, are repairing the Noonday road. It will be ready for wagon travel in a few days. The Noonday is considered one of the best properties in the camp and has been a rich producer, but the owners got into litigation and tied the mine up with the red tape of the courts. It is understood that all litigation has been terminated and there is nothing to hinder enterprising miners from going ahead and milling the great body of rich ore that is already blocked out. It is claimed that there is ore enough in sight to pay all repair expenses and leave a handsome surplus for dividends. At the Vesuvius and Knott. One thousand feet of heavy steel rails are at the station on the O. & S.

E. railroad awaits teams to haul them to the Vesuvius mine, where they are much needed. The big tunnel being driven on this property is showing good ore, with values increasing as the tunnel penetrates the mountain. The new lodging-house at this mine is about completed and is built on a solid foundation, rock having been blasted away to allow place for the building. Martin Shea the contractor at work on the Golden Slipper group of mining claims in the Bohemia district, has completed his contract in the Dewey tunnel and uncovered quite a rich vein of ore five feet wide. The tunnel is now in on the ledge a distance of 217 feet. The White Wing tunnel is now being worked. The latter ledge is the favorite of the group and the work is making a good showing there. Herbert E. Smith of New Haven, Connecticut, vice-president of the West Coast Mines company, was in camp for a few days. He was at the mine formulating plans with Superintendent Eade touching future operations. The conclusions reached have not been made public as yet. Mineowners' Meeting. There was a good attendance at the Mineowners' association meeting. A communication from the commissioners of Douglas county was read, stating that surveyors would soon be here from Roseburg to look out a wagon road into the Bohemia district from the steamboat side, commencing at Rock creek. The association appointed W. S. Long to act as guide to the party at the camp of the association. F. J. Hard, president of the association, W. H. Shane and A. P. Churchill were selected as delegates to attend the American Mining Congress to meet at Joplin, Missouri, in September. George C. Knowles, president of the association, having resigned, F. J. Hard was selected to fill the vacancy. George McQueen was made chairman of the committee on enterprises in place of John M. Peterson, deceased. The association will probably establish headquarters at the Vesuvius mine instead of at Bohemia, where the meetings have been held since the organization in 1902. Preferred Stock Cannot Goods. Allen & Lewis' Best Brand. TWO NEW BUILDINGS FOR STATE FAIR (Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Salem, Or., Aug. 23.—Among the many improvements at the state fair grounds in Salem being made is a new building for the exhibition of fine-bred dogs at the fair, September 16-21. It will be erected back of the entry building, and will be 20x40 feet, and equipped with entirely modern fixtures. Another addition which will be made to the appropriation from the state holds out is an office building. The officers and directors have always been located in the pavilion, but this arrangement is inconvenient, and the space might well be used for exhibits. The new structure will be built on the bungalow plan. It will be placed on a site northeast of the pavilion, formerly occupied by a restaurant. This point is the most central on the main walk from the entrance gate, the pavilion, concessions, racetrack and livestock exhibits.
