ANCIENT LANDMARK OF OREGON REMOVED FROM HISTORIC SITE

Old Courthouse at The Dalles and Later the Town Hall.

BUILT WHEN WASCO WAS ALL OUTDOORS

World's Largest County Traced Through All Its Dwindlings to Its Present Modest Two Thousand Square Miles.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) The Dalles, Aug. 24.—The old city hall, formerly the first court house in Wasco county, now moved to give place to a modern building, is a historical relic worth possessing. In 1868 the contract for the old building was let, and it was completed in 1869. At that time Wasco county, which was organized by an act of the territorial legislature in 1844 and included that part of Oregon Territory lying east of the Cascade range to the Rocky mountains, and from the Columbia river and the forty-sixth parallel south to the forty-second parallel, was the only political division smaller than a territory between California on the south and British Columbia on the north. Its area, about 120,000 square miles embraced more territory than the British Isles or than any present state of the union with the exception of Texas, California, Montana and more than twice the area of New England.

Whittling Old Wasco Down. The diminution of this immense territory was first begun when Oregon was admitted into the union, February 14, 1859. By that act the territory was divided into three parts, and all that portion east of the Snake river and all that portion west of the Snake river were annexed to Washington Territory. Five years later this became the southern portion of Idaho and in the meantime portions of the old county had been attached to Montana and Wyoming. Then the legislature of Oregon began whittling old Wasco into other counties. In 1862 Baker and Umatilla counties were organized by act of the legislature, with Baker City as the county seat of the former and Pendleton of the latter. Grant county was cut off from Wasco in 1864, and Canyon City was named as the seat of government. In the same year Union county was formed, with Union as the county seat. Then followed Lake in 1874, county seat Lakeview; 1883, Crook, Prineas county town; same year Klamath with Klamath Falls county seat; 1885, Morrow and Gilliam, with Heppner county seat of the former and Condon of the latter; 1887, Malheur, Vale; 1888, Harney, Burns; 1891, Sherman, Moro, and 1893, Wheeler, Fossil being designated as county seat.

Courts and Judges. The first session of district court was held in The Dalles by Justice Cyrus O'Neil, one of the justices of the Oregon territorial supreme court, on August 14, 1864, but after the court house was built and Wasco county was formed into a judicial district, James G. Wilson was appointed judge. This was in 1861, and the appointment was made by Governor A. C. Gibbs. Judge Wilson was the first judicial officer who presided in the old court house. He was elected to and continued in the office until 1870, when he resigned and was the nominee of the Republican party for congress, but was defeated by James H. Slater. In 1873 he was again a candidate and defeated John Burnett. He went to Washington city and on the eve of the convening of congress was invited to deliver an address before the alumni of Marietta college, of which he was a graduate. Arriving at Marietta he went to his room and was found dead the next morning of heart failure.

GHOST HAUNTS MR. NEWLYWED

Bridegroom's Slumber Disturbed Every Night by Athletic Specter.

(Journal Special Service.) London, Aug. 23.—The freaks of a so-called specter are alarming a hamlet some 40 miles from Cardiff. The ghost has been paying unwelcome attentions to a well-known inhabitant of the hamlet who was recently married. The trouble commenced by his finding himself lying on his bedroom floor beside his bed one morning. Naturally, he put this down to nightmare. The morning after, however, on awaking, he found himself on the other end of the room, and he then became somewhat uneasy. His wife on both occasions had slept peacefully. The third night, however, both kept awake, and their vigil was rewarded by a sight of their mysterious visitor, who appeared shortly after the traditional hour of midnight. A trustworthy correspondent ascertained from the victim that the specter took the form of his own mother, who is still alive and well. He says that his mother opposed his marriage with the lady of his choice very strongly, and he thinks that the nocturnal visits are acts of revenge. In order to drive forth the unwelcome intruder, the victim persuaded several of his male friends to remain in his house one night; but, although the ghost appeared as usual to the young man, his wife and his mother-in-law, the other watchers were quite unable to discern the strange presence. The young man's mother-in-law declares that on one occasion she approached the specter, who said quite distinctly, "Well, what do you want?" She also says that she temporarily lost the power of the right side of her body at the meeting. The victim declares that the specter has several times accompanied him part of the way to the village, where he is engaged as a collier. His comrades are greatly perturbed by the frequent appearances of the specter and believe firmly in the victim's veracity. The vicar of the parish and several others have visited the house and tried in vain to elucidate the mystery.

HENCHME OF SCHMITZ SURRENDER O TAYLOR

Former Mayor Will Not Be Politically Dead Until November Returns Are In—Abe Ruef Effectually Muzzled by Fear of Prison Stripes.

By John Taylor Waldorf. San Francisco, Aug. 24.—Following the decision of the supreme court declaring Edward Robeson Taylor mayor of San Francisco, the number of officials who still called Eugene Schmitz chief dwindled to a negligible quantity. Even Sheriff Tom O'Neill hastened to remove his hat in the presence of Dr. Taylor and say cheerily, "Good morning, mayor." Pete Fanning, who as the policeman detailed to the mayor's office looked on Schmitz as his boss and refused to serve the choice of the graft prosecutors, sighed heavily and retired in reporting to police headquarters for duty. Other faithful retainers turned their backs on the setting sun, and so far as influence in the affairs of the municipal government is concerned Schmitz is now only a memory. Despite the scamp from the sinking ship the former mayor cannot be declared politically dead until the returns are in for the November election. Before and after the election conversion labor leaders will consult with him, partly because of past favors and partly because of the influence he can exert on the other side. He will not wholly cease until he has been numbered and striped and caged in San Quentin prison. There is some talk of a non-partisan ticket made up of Republicans, Democrats and Union Laborers. Judge McArthur, who reports to Schmitz, speaks approvingly of such a combination. Tom is chairman of the Union Labor county committee, and would agree to take the patronage places and give the two old parties the rest. Therefore it can safely be concluded that his talk of joining hands with reformers is only a bit of diversionary preparation to go into battle.

Merchants Want Taylor. Meanwhile, the Republicans and the Democrats are playing at the game of cross purposes. Mayor Taylor is a Democrat, and therefore many Republicans would prefer to see him out of the party. This group, however, does not include the merchant class. The merchants want Taylor, and in the hope of accomplishing their purpose are influencing all their influence to urge Republican delegates away from Daniel A. Ryan's name. Ryan, who reports to his side of the house all to himself. Now the Taylor loomers claim a third of the vote, and the Republicans would have them all before another week passes. Ryan's friends laugh, but are decidedly uneasy. Advocates of Taylor say Ryan is being compelled to put Taylor in nomination. If this happens it will be a tragedy of politics.

He has worked hard for it; the prize is at his finger tips, and if he does not clutch it now he may never have another opportunity. His following is decidedly mercurial in temperament and two years makes a heap of difference in politics. Ryan's friends have been hoping that Taylor would stick to his declaration that he would not run unless there was a unanimous vote. This apparently meant two nominations, but it didn't. Taylor has revised his former statement, and says he will run if he is nominated by any recognized party. This spells trouble for Ryan and now his fate depends on whether he can hold his forces together. Taylor has the better of the situation at present, for if he gets the Republican nomination he is sure to get the Democratic. Ryan has to fight for both, and the Democratic leaders do not take kindly to his candidacy.

Langdon Was Troubled. District Attorney Langdon, who has been the nominal head of the graft prosecution, is having a more troublesome time than Ryan. He is used to be a Democrat, but the Democrats cannot forgive him for taking the Independent League nomination for governor last year and giving a sufficient number of Democratic votes from Theodore A. Bell to enable Ryan to win. He is now being asked to appear as a prosecutor in the graft case, and has made a record likely to appeal to reformers. The Republicans think more kindly of Langdon and will probably nominate him. If they fail him he will have to go on the ballot by petition. There is no independent section party this year. For this Langdon and Francis J. Heney are blamed by the Examiner, and that is why the local organ of William F. Hearst seldom lets a day pass without sneering at or criticizing or denouncing both Heney and Langdon. The Examiner occasionally turns its batteries on Detective William J. Burns, even going so far as to belittle his ability.

Why the Eilers Plan is Best for Piano Buyers

It's best because it's fairest. Because it gives you highest quality at least cost. The Eilers methods are based upon principles that are proven most successful. These methods have built for the House of Eilers the greatest piano business in America. And now, to demonstrate to you, let us illustrate a fact or two.

Out of every 100 pianos sold in this territory railway statistics show that the Eilers Houses sell 72 3/4 per cent. All other firms combined sell the remaining 27 1/4 per cent.

For simple comparative purposes let us suppose the other dealers make a profit of $1 on every piano they sell. Out of every 100 pianos sold, then, these other dealers would make a total profit of $28.

Cutting the other dealers' profit square in half, the Eilers Houses, selling at a profit of only 50 cents a piano, would show a total for the 72 pianos sold by the Houses of Eilers of $36.

It is thus plain that while we would sell at one half the profit of the other dealers we would still show a decisively larger profit for the total business handled. Small profits, large sales—and business supremacy!

Not only this, but we save materially on every piano we buy, on account of the very fact that we can handle and sell three times as many as all the other dealers combined. We save in wholesale cost as much as the profit of the smaller dealers.

It is readily apparent then to any one that our claim to save every piano buyer from $50 to $150 is based on absolute fact.

The cost of handling this greater business is but little more than required to handle a smaller amount. Modern facilities, a perfect shipping and distributing system—all combine to decrease the marketing expense below that necessary for the smaller dealer.

Sharp tactics are unknown in Eilers Houses—they're not allowed. Strictly one price, plain statements as to the merits of each individual make, a definite guarantee—all contribute to satisfaction to the buyer at Eilers. "Money Back" is our promise that leaves no chance for dissatisfaction.

The pleasant flavor of the currant, which adds so much to its pleasantness as a food, is derived from the valuable percentage of tartaric acid which the berry contains.
