ONCE BORROWED TO LEAVE THE TOWN

Now Rated at Twenty-Seven Millions by Sober Commercial Agencies and Trundles in on His Fine Auto. Not Puffed Up by Good Fortune.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Lakeview, Or., Aug. 24.—George Wingfield, the Goldfield millionaire mine owner and promoter, arrived at his old home Friday last for a few weeks' visit.

His home coming was like the ending of a good story. He left here with less than nothing, having borrowed $20 with which to travel to Reno, with no influential friends and no prospects.

His reception was cordial. His own manner was courteous and kindly to all and some whose met were formerly not over friendly to the then gambling rover.

Seven years ago he visited Lakeview and again five years ago. At the time of the latter visit he assured his friends that he would soon be a millionaire, but his hearers were incredulous.

Wingfield is interested in many enterprises in Nevada, including clubs, resorts and resorts in Nevada. He far the greater portion of his wealth consists of interests in valuable mining property, such as the Mohawk, Standard and others.

With regard to the attitude of Police Magistrate Cameron, and his family turncoats. The claim is made that when the campers first came to Corvallis, his domicile he and his wife were registered attendants. At times, it is alleged, Cameron was very loud in his praise of their efforts.

"Somebody must have switched him," said one of the women. "I guess he'll never be saved."
