HOSTS OF PICKERS GO TO VALLEY HOP FIELDS

Scores of Men, Women and Children Leave on Special Train for Crop-Laden Vines Where Pleasure Is Combined With Daily Task.

It's ho for the harvest fields in every Oregon town and on every Oregon farm. For the fields which yesterday stretched and green with the hop vines today are tinged with yellow and the fragrant "ripe" odor of the hops tells that the 1907 crop is ready for the pickers.

With bags and blankets, bedding and cook stoves, tents and sunbonnets, Portland's contingent of the pickers—500 of them—boarded a special train at the Union depot yesterday bound for their annual outing at Independence. Several years ago the pickers were in the crowd—women so old that their hair was white and their backs bent; children so young that they had to be carried in their mothers' arms.

Many Women and Children. There was a crowd of young men, experienced hands at the "hopping" game, who eyed with keen glances the stranger tidily inquiring for the special train. In one corner stood a group of Scandinavians talking over prospects of the crop. The Germans, who naturally belong in a hop field, were conspicuous by their absence—the average German-American is too prosperous to be able to drop his business and go picking hops for a fortnight. But everywhere, the predominating element in the crowd, were the women and children.

They were far from being unpleasant people, here and there an overdressed woman sat apart from the rest of the jolly crowd and eyed them contemptuously, but the majority were good middle class Americans whose fathers and mothers had formed part of the thousands that went every year from London into Kent for the "hopping."

Y. W. C. A. Gives Attention. Miss Gage is northwest secretary for the Young Women's Christian association. She is a quick moving, pleasant woman with a breadth of forehead and a look about the eyes that promises much for the girls and women pickers in the hop fields this season. For it is the first year that any society has taken enough interest in the army of men and women who live out in the

HENEY SOON TO REACH PORTLAND

Believed Prosecutor Will Arrive Within Month to Try Land Cases.

Now that the Glass bribery trial has been finished at San Francisco, it is believed Francis J. Heney will be able to come to Portland by October 1 to prosecute Oregon land thieves. It has been figured out that Heney will come forth immediately after the trial of Halsey and Schmitz, and possibly before the end of these trials.

Officials about the federal building consider the graft atmosphere considerably cleared in the Bay City with the conviction of Glass and Heney's work there will be much easier in future cases. Both Halsey and Schmitz's trials are expected to take not more than two weeks each, which will give the noted prosecutor one month to finish the work he has cut out for himself before prosecuting Attorney Langdon's reelection comes up.

Speculation in Heney's arrival in Portland is lively because everybody who has watched events connected with the land fraud cases believe that nothing will be done to prosecute the alleged land grabbers until the San Francisco comes to Portland to start the ball rolling. As soon as Heney finishes the cases he wishes to try, namely, the Singer Hermann, R. A. Booth and John H. Hall cases, United States Attorney William C. Bristol is expected to follow with other land fraud trials and wind them up before the holidays.

Conflicts may arise in the trial of criminal cases if Heney arrives in Portland October 1, because of the plan arranged to try prisoners in the county jail at that time. Among these are the counterfeiter from eastern Oregon and Charles Anderson, the tons remaining member of the postoffice gang that

BODY OF HUGE WHALE FLOATS UP ON SHORE AT NETARTS BAY

A monster whale, measuring 55 feet over all, has drifted ashore in Netarts bay, this state, and residents in the vicinity are in a quandary how to dispose of the immense carcass and save themselves from being driven from their homes by the odors that are sure to drift in upon them before long. C. E. Henderson and Benjamin F. Levitt of Tillamook reported the stranding of the whale to The Journal last night. They state that the monster appears to be a sperm whale or cachalot, and must be very old, because the entire body is covered with a dense growth of barnacles. Thousands of whales have been traveling in schools off the Oregon coast for several months past, and every now

FISHERMEN NEED ONLY TO GO TO WILLAMETTE SLOUGH FOR BASS

E. H. Flagg, publisher of the Rainier Review and the St. Helens Mist, was at the Imperial hotel last night where he told of the wonderful increase in black bass in the Willamette slough. "A man went fishing there the other day," said Mr. Flagg, "and caught 15 pounds of black bass in a short time. There were 32 fish in the catch, averaging a half pound. The bass have been increasing at a rapid rate and have proved a great delight to fishermen who love to fish for the sport

PORTLAND TRUNK HOUSES.

Interesting Bits of History Furnished by E. B. Phillips. In speaking of the building up of the Portland Trunk Manufacturing company yesterday, R. E. Phillips said: In the year of 1899, on April 26, I laid the foundation of the Portland Trunk Manufacturing company, having at the time as my capital about $300 and a life-time experience as a trunk maker. Owing to lack of sufficient capital, the work was discontinued at the bench, having for an assistant one boy. Now the Portland Trunk Manufacturing company employs 25 hands, with a capital (cash) of $25,000 and is doing a wholesale business all over the Pacific northwest, as well as in Alaska and the Hawaiian islands. Aside from our wholesale trade, we conduct two of the finest retail trunk emporiums on the Pacific coast, where we have for sale trunks of all sorts, traveling bags, suit cases, and in fact everything for the traveling public in these lines. Our stores are located at the corner of Third and Pine streets, and at 107 Sixth street near children have been sold at rates by dealers in the effort to close out stock.
