OREGON LAND FRAUD PROSECUTION ENDED BRISTOL WILL BE REMOVED FROM OFFICE

DISTRICT ATTORNEY IS TO BE DROPPED AT NEXT CONGRESS

Open Hostilities Between President Roosevelt and Senator Fulton Will Cease—Hundred Defendants Who Are Still Untried Will Never Be Brought to Bar—Huge Political Deal

Prosecution of the Oregon land frauds is at an end. With over 30 indictments still pending and over 100 defendants still untried, the government has tacitly called off the dogs of war.

United States District Attorney William C. Bristol, upon whose shoulders the mantle of Henry was to fall in the further conduct of the prosecutions, is slated for removal from office and his political foes are already eagerly debating the choice of a successor.

When Bristol was placed in office it was with the distinct understanding that he would continue to hold it until the land fraud prosecutions had been disposed of in the trial courts and to this plan President Roosevelt was supposed to be definitely committed.

It was not easy to jar loose the bulldog grip of Frank Henry, but this, too, has at last been accomplished.

Henry stripped of power. The explanation as it last came to light, though willing and anxious to resume the prosecutions, Henry found himself suddenly stripped of the means to carry on the fight.

Evidence is badly scattered. Much of the evidence upon which pending indictments were based has been scattered to the four winds of heaven.

Among the more noted of the men who were indicted by Henry are ex-Congressman Binger Hermann, accused of complicity in the Blue Mountain frauds; R. V. Booth, formerly president of the Booth-Kelly Lumber company, and John Hall, former United States District Attorney.
