struction of their recently finished building at Spokane. The second and third floors were being lined throughout, ceiling, walls and underfoot with a new composition known as "Sheet Cork Insulation." This is composed of ground cork mixed with liquid asphalt and pressed into bricks or sheets some three inches or so in thickness.

These sheets or bricks are cemented upon the floors, walls and ceilings and are then covered with either cement, pitch or asphalt, making the finishing coat and producing a wall almost impervious to heat or cold. The task of putting this highly inflammable coating upon the two floors of the new building was a particularly one, being the second attempt to be made in the northwest.

The Hazelwood company had taken the task of fitting up the cold storage rooms upon its own shoulders and had imported William Bach, who had done the Spokane work to supervise the task. Bach was at work at the heating apparatus at the time the fire started.

According to the story of Bach and others a small bit of the ceiling, which was being used to line the insulation was dropped in dipping it from the melting wax coming in contact with the flame of the coil heater, sprang into a blaze.

With a roar the whole second floor burst into flame and before the men above knew what had happened their means of escape had been cut off by a sweeping wall of flame. Bach saw what had happened and he rushed to alarm box #2 and turned in the call for assistance. Before the current had roused the big bell into action the flames were shooting through the roof and from every window of the newly constructed building, making a solid wall of flame from the second story to the roof and high above.

Men Make Narrow Escape. When the fire started there were 15 men employed on the roof at the time the alarm was given by those below. The men on the second floor hurried themselves through the windows to safety, but those above that were driven above by the upswelling flames. Walter Welch, one of the men to escape, rushed to where a hoist rope was dangling from the top of the building and, seizing the lower end, drew it out and away from the flames shooting through the second story windows. Calling to those who had not yet made their escape he dipped the rope in while the men grabbed it and slid down to safety through the fire. Hardly had the last man reached the ground before the fierce heat burned the rope away. Three men—Robert Moore, Thomas Ford and Charles Reed—made their escape down the rope from the third floor.

Chris Salmose, a foreman employed by the general contractor, was at work on one of the upper floors at the time of the alarm and for a time was thought to have perished in the flames. Later it was learned that he had jumped from one of the windows and escaped without injury.

Women Avoid Operations

When a woman suffering from female trouble is told that an operation is necessary, it, of course, frightens her.

The very thought of the hospital, the operating table and the knife strikes terror to her heart. It is quite true that these troubles may reach a stage where an operation is the only resource, but a great many women have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after an operation has been decided upon as the only cure. The strongest and most grateful statements possible to make come from women who by taking

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made from native roots and herbs, have escaped serious operations, as evidenced by Miss Rose Moore's case, of 307 W. 26th St., N. Y. She writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured me of the very worst form of female trouble and I wish to express to you my deepest gratitude. I suffered intensely for two years so that I was unable to attend to my duties and was a burden to my family. I doctored and doctored with only temporary relief and constantly objecting to an operation which I was advised to undergo. I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; it cured me of the terrible trouble and I am now in better health than I have been for many years."

This and other such cases should encourage every woman to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before she submits to an operation.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. From the symptoms given, the trouble may be located and the quickest and surest way of recovery advised.
