

COLUMBIA'S THIRD MATE HERE TO SEEK EVIDENCE

Looks for Persons Who Were in His Boat on Night of the Sea Tragedy and Will Later Sue for Damages.

Robert Hawes, third officer on the Portland-San Francisco liner Columbia when she was lost in collision with the steam schooner San Pedro, off Shelter Cove on the morning of July 21, is in the city today on important business. He arrived here on last night's train, having given up the sea for good. Hawes is about to bring suits against half a dozen newspapers and a number of Columbia survivors who accused him of inhumanity and brutality in handling the shipwrecked who had sought refuge in the lifeboat in his command. Some of these suits will be for as large an amount as $100,000 and others will be for $50,000 and $75,000 each. It is understood that some of the leading San Francisco papers will be made defendants in the large suits.

Hawes was accused of everything from eating opium to beating cripples who were lying on the bottom of his boat and abuse, ridicule and contempt heaped upon him through the press when he appeared at the investigation before the inspectors so preyed upon his mind that on July 29, while in his lodgings, at 138 Fair Oaks, he became violently insane and had to be taken to the detention hospital by the police. Second Officer Richard Agerup, who was with him at the time, said that Hawes lost his mind as a result of the terrible accusations of the newspapers, because it was while reading some clippings he lost his reason. He was confined to a seclusion room in the hospital for some time and gradually became rational.

Hawes is looking for a number of the survivors who are residents of this city and whom he will ask for affidavits to show that his treatment of the suffering passengers was all that could be expected under the circumstances. That he will secure some affidavits to this effect is thought quite probable unless the people have left the city because three or four persons verified the story of the officer at the time he was denounced as a coward, brute and opium fiend, among them being young Miss Maybelle Watson, the heroine who saved the life of Miss Griesse, of Cleveland, Ohio. Miss Watson said that in her opinion Hawes did all that could be done for the sufferers.

The suits will be filed at San Francisco and if brought to trial the terrible details of the midnight tragedy of the sea will be revived again.

Taken when the girl is developing into the woman they insure, as far as medicine can, the full flower of womanhood, strong and robust.

Neglect of the health at this time means a life of misery and is often followed by a short, dry cough which is the forerunner of consumption.

For months I was under a doctor's care but nothing helped me and my friends thought I was going into consumption. I had been sick about a year when Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were recommended to me. After taking three boxes I obtained relief and several more cured me. The sallow complexion disappeared, I had a good appetite once more and am now strong and healthy in every way."

Why Vanderbilt Vanished.

It is told of Thomas A. Edison that on the night of his wedding, when all of the guests had assembled and he was about to be married, a friend found him at work in evening clothes in his laboratory over a new electrical invention. He had forgotten about being married.

Something of the same kind recently happened to Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, whose sole passion is horses. Mrs. Vanderbilt had arranged a reception to which all the elect of Newport came, and the affair was at its height when somebody called attention to the fact that Mr. Vanderbilt was not around.

"Where is he?" was asked. "He was here a little while ago," said another.

"He can't be far off," said a third. The mystery of Mr. Vanderbilt's disappearance suddenly became the feature of the affair, and search parties were organized to locate him. They sent to his apartment—he wasn't there. A thorough search of the grounds failed to locate him. The lodge keeper was sure he hadn't passed out.

Finally some one had an inspiration. They went to the stable. They found Mr. Vanderbilt. He had removed his evening coat and gloves and with one of his trainers close at hand was unwrapping a minute investigation of the hoofs of one of his favorite prize winners.

"I just dropped over here a minute to look about," he explained.

The international convention of Steamfitters and Helpers will be held in Detroit next year.

The Performances of Other Player-Pianos Become Insignificant When Compared to the Marvelous Renditions Within the Ability of

The Metrostyle-Themodist PIANOLA

STANDARD OF THE WORLD

The Pianola embodies not one, but many, points of superiority over the numerous instruments that its success has inspired.

In the incomparable human-like qualities of its playing, in the wide scope it affords for individual expression, the Pianola stands today, as Rosenthal has so well put it, "in a class by itself."

The Pianola's Supremacy Unassailable

The supremacy of the Pianola is abundantly borne out in the unanimous testimony of the world's foremost musical authorities, who have indorsed this instrument to the practical entire exclusion of any other, and also in the actual verdict of the purchasing public for the SALES OF THE PIANOLA EXCEED THOSE OF ALL OTHER PIANO-PLAYERS PUT TOGETHER.

Now, there must be good reasons why the Pianola has been able to maintain its position as the premier instrument of its type—in fact, to steadily increase its lead, notwithstanding the many other instruments continually being brought out, and claiming to accomplish similar results.

The Metrostyle—Found Only on the Pianola

One of the greatest achievements of the player system was the invention of the Metrostyle, a device enabling even the unskilled performer to play with artistic effect—to put EXPRESSION and SOUL into the playing. This invention was revolutionary, and broke down the last vestige of prejudice in the musical world. Be it noted, however, that no other piano player HAS, HAD or CAN HAVE anything EVEN APPROXIMATING this remarkable device, which is owned and controlled exclusively by the Aeolian Co., makers of the Pianola.

The Themodist and What It Accomplishes

The Themodist will accent a single note, or group of notes, exactly as called for by the character of the composition. It will accent the proper notes, not only when isolated from the accompaniment, but also wherever they may appear, anywhere along the keyboard, picking out the theme, NO MATTER WHETHER IT APPEARS IN CHORDS OR IN THE MIDST OF ELABORATE ORNAMENTATION.

To the performer, however, is left the degree of accent to be supplied, whether a sharp contrast or a mild one, as his taste dictates. For this purpose he still has recourse to the accent-lever and the pedaling, as in former models of the Pianola.

In addition to the Metrostyle and Themodist, the Pianola incorporates more than three hundred other patented and exclusive features, making it at once superior in every detail. After hearing other players or player-pianos, the performance of the Pianola will prove a revelation to you. We shall be pleased to demonstrate its marvelous ability at any time, at your convenience.
