

FULTON SHIES AT USE OF ALBANY COLLEGE CAMPAIGN PHONOGRAPH RECORDS

Senator, Upon Suggestion, Thought Talking Machine and Moving Pictures Would Be Good Way to Conduct Political Fireworks but Changes His Mind.

"No thanks," said Senator Fulton as he threw his shoulders back and cleared his throat. "No thanks. You follow me, I can't steer me up against some things, but you don't cook up anything like that and get me to taste it. I am not hungry enough."

All of which remark had to do with ex-Secretary of State F. L. Dunbar's prescription for the easy election of United States senators, and not with some new culinary concoction. The conversation happened because Senator Fulton mentioned that he was about to set sail for Salem to deliver an address.

Senator Fulton was sitting in the window of the Imperial lobby this morning, nodding pleasantly to the passing throng or that portion of it with whom he has a speaking acquaintance, when Mr. Dunbar came along and spying the distinguished Astorian, came in for a chat.

"Hello, Frank," said the senator.

"Hello, Charlie," said Mr. Dunbar. And then they began to ask about the health of various ancestors, and later members of the two families.

"Are you going up to the fair?" asked Mr. Dunbar at length, and the senator said he thought he would.

Dunbar suggests Talking Machine.

"Come to think of it," he said, "I have an invitation to make a few remarks up there. Guess I will have to dig up my Corvallis speech and hang it on the bulletin board," meaning, of course, that he had been thinking for some few days of what new thing he was going to spring upon the assembled farmers at Salem.

"Why don't you get a phonograph?" suggested Mr. Dunbar. "Then the people could hear your voice and could imagine they saw you. That would beat the bulletin board."

"The senator seemed taken with the idea.

"We have one of them up at Astoria," he said. "Mrs. Fulton got one some time ago, and don't you know they are wonderful. Why, I have heard Melba sing, and now I can sit there, when I am at home, turn on the phonograph and closing my eyes, can imagine I am hearing her sing. It is just as good as one of her concerts."

Mr. Dunbar drew his chair closer to that of the senator and faced him, his knees touching those of his friend.

"Now, I have an idea," he said, beaming upon Senator Fulton through his glasses. "You are going to return to Washington and be gone through the coming campaign. Why not carry your campaign on by means of phonographs and moving pictures?"

Easy Way of Talking.

"No, wait," he hurried on, as the senator started to say something. "My scheme is a good one. Better even than for you to stay here in person. You could think up the speech you wanted to deliver and then give it in front of one of those moving picture cameras, and a phonograph. You could have films and records made from these and ship them out to Oregon, where they could be shown throughout the state. The audience could see your picture on the screen and could hear your voice delivering the speech. Everything from a question to life-infection, gestures and pose."

"I could deliver addresses in half a dozen places at once that way, couldn't I?" questioned the senator, apparently deep in thought.

"That is what you could," said Mr. Dunbar.

"Not for me," said the senator suddenly, after some reflection. "Frank, are you really a friend of mine? No phonograph and moving pictures in my campaign, thank you. Look here, now. Suppose the phonograph and the picture machine got out of harmony and I began to make violent gestures on the screen during a dramatic pause on the phonograph. That would help the effectiveness of the entertainment, wouldn't it?"

"You are," continued the senator, growing eloquent with the horror of it. "I suppose through some mistake I switched the record of a Coos bay harbor improvement speech up to a meeting of the Harney valley farmers. What would you suppose would happen to me? Suppose through some error in shipping the outfit I made a speech praising the Medford valley fruit as the best in the world before a gathering at Hood River? What would you give for my chances to succeed myself? No, Frank, I think I will stick to the old system and appear in person or write. You can try your scheme when you run for office again, but none of your new-fangled experiments on the rural vote for me, and the senator shook hands all round and went to hunt a friend.

NEW CONSERVATORY ADDED THIS SEASON

Education Advanced Through Efforts of Efficient Faculty in Every Course—Individual Effort Makes Itself Apparent in Work.

An Albany college graduate was entering Rush Medical college two years ago. "It's unfortunate, Wallace, that you haven't had better preparation—such as you'd get in a large school," said the dean.

Two years passed. The dean called Wallace into his office. "You're to appear on the commencement platform and receive the sophomore honors," said the dean. Wallace (Russell Wallace of Albany) asked the dean to recall a former prize-winner at Rush Medical and another brilliant student—both from Albany college.

"How about your preparation, doctor?" "It must have been good," announced the dean.

A small college is, like a small bank, frequently safer and better because it is small. The college should be small enough to do its very best for every individual. Books, buildings, equipment—all are well; it is personality, however, that educates, and personality is felt where intimacy exists.

Albany college has a good faculty of a dozen men and women. Collegiate, normal, commercial, academic and musical courses are offered.

A new conservatory of music is to be installed this year. Music has formerly been taught, but not so completely or with such good plans as it is to be henceforth.

Twice a year the college invites teachers to spend six weeks with her faculty. Old students tell yet of six weeks' work will be offered in the common branches, with two recitations a day in literature, physical geography, Latin, algebra and other high school subjects. In June a similar term will be conducted for teachers whose preparation is insufficient or who desire to take high school or college work. The conservatory and the teachers' terms are new things.

Town of Good Morals.

Albany will enter intercollegiate athletics this fall. Old students tell yet of the year Albany defeated "the big ones." An alumni council of athletics and the faculty agree that the college will not tolerate professionalism or unsportsmanlike conduct.

The town of Albany is provided with railroad advantages superior to those of any other Oregon college town. Citizens are of a superior class, believe in the college, have voted out saloons and have refused to attend saloons. The town and the college are both enjoying a steady growth and are both destined to be leaders in the state's development.

The Realm of the Hat

Fads and Fashions.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—A new hat pin shown has two heads, the end going through the hat having an adjustable ball to put on after the hat is securely pinned.

These balls are made alike.

Oyster-white silk stockings embroidered in white daisies and with a wreath of them around the top are the daintiest things seen in hosiery.

Blue promises to be the favorite color for the fall and winter suits.

Many these waists in colors are made of silk, satin, crepe and light-weight cloth, and may be elaborately trimmed, thus making a dressy adjunct to the costume.

A dainty guimpie to be worn with a jump dress with the kimono sleeve is made entirely of ruffles of narrow lace sewed on a white foundation.

Some styles in the new fall jacket are the Prince Chap, Prince George and the Eton. The pony coat is still a favorite, and the hip-length slightly fitted ones are growing more popular.

The latest hairpins, which have two prongs, are decorated on the top with a gold ball set with jewels. This is found a great addition in dressing the hair.

A parasol that may be carried up to October dress with a pale blue handle, and has the monogram worked in pale blue on one side. This is very effective with many costumes.

It is rumored that on the new shirt-waist the trills are to be left off the front of the box plait, also from the waist to the pavement. However, for many this style is too becoming to be abandoned so quickly.

The fall bride should have her wedding dress of ivory, and her traveling dress of gray. The popular shades in autumn are pavement, and tan, granite, silver gray and steel gray.

For office and store wear, china silk waists are very important accessories. They are also less expensive, as they should be preferred to be laundered continually.

The preferred style in cuff links is the oblong one set with a single stone having three facets. The old-fashioned buttons, joined by a stiff gold link are not as popular as those having one or two stones.

A handsome petticoat shown among the smart styles was of blue silk trimmed with ruffles of yellow lace and embroidered medallions in color.

Many fashionable women have abandoned the dressy stock made to match the rest of the outfit. The wearing of linen collars exactly like the men's that have the white "wings" turned back in front. These are worn rather loose and not very high with a dainty cravat and a diamond or pearl horse shoe pinned in the center.

and that a girl be taught to cook and stand and wash dishes and darn socks than that she study Greek, Latin, literature and music.

It is my belief that such accomplishments do not win the admiration of man—men don't like brilliant women—clever girls—girls who are ambitious for worldly success.

The way to win a man is to know how to cook three square meals a day for a man and make his home a haven of rest.

Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish says: "I certainly disagree most emphatically with Mr. Schwab's idea. It is my belief that nature intended woman to be man's equal in business or the professions, or to say that they should abandon every ambition except that of becoming wives and housekeepers implies that the feminine brain is inferior to the masculine. I shall never admit that, for I do not believe it."

That is all wrong. A girl should be taught first to develop the best in herself—her mind. No woman should be ashamed to be called an old maid. Far better to be an old maid than marry a man who is not an equal, one who is not companionable.

Laundry Hints.

Don't throw clothespins on the ground when taking down the clothes. Either have a laundry apron with a pocket into which you can put them as fast as removed, or have a bag opened on one side, the opening having a wire run through its hem, and push this ahead of you on the line, suspended from a heavy piece of wire curved like the letter S. One curve hooks over the line, the other holds the bag.

Sleeve irons are a treasure that no woman who does her own shirtwaists can afford to be without. They are narrow with sharp points that fit into ruffles and gathers. They have adjustable wooden handles, and cost not more than 40 cents.

If a duster is to be carried in a trunk with wearing apparel when going on the summer's outing, tuck it down so it will not roll and crush the contents. Be sure every time its position is reversed.

A thin cheesecloth cover, kept especially to spread over the trunk, is a wise precaution.

Keep another piece of clean cloth in the bottom of the trunk, and a second for a cover.

Soap should always be brought in quantity, put in convenient packages and spread out to dry. In this way it will go much farther than when used from a bar.

Keep a bit of beeswax tied in a cloth for rubbing off fat stains.

Alcohol removes grass stains.

In dampening clothes for ironing use water as hot as the hand can bear. In it. It will not be necessary to use as much water as when cold is used.

RUSSIAN RAT KILLER FEEDS RODENTS DEATH DEALING VIRUS

A Zaik, who for years was the public rat catcher for the city of Odessa, Russia, and who has gone through many campaigns against bubonic plague in the Russian city, is going after the waterfront rats of Portland. Zaik has been over the Front street district carefully in the last few days and says that he can kill all the rats around the warehouses and docks within two or three weeks.

In 18 years Zaik, who is a Russian, has devoted himself to catching rats. He started in as a boy in Odessa and invented a compound which he claims spreads an epidemic among the rats, causing them to leave the buildings and die in the streets.

In Russia the rat catcher is a person of importance in the larger cities and is paid a regular salary every month by the municipality. Two years ago Zaik came to America and was employed for some time killing rats on ships in New York harbor during a time of plague scare in New York City. The best thing about this secret virus of mine is that it causes the rats to go out into the open air, so that they die in their holes.

Zaik worked for some time at the City park this summer and successfully rid that place of the hundreds of rats that were receiving attention employed by Swift & Co., of Seattle, by the union depot and other companies in Portland in killing off rats.

FARMERS INSTITUTE AT SCIO EXPOSITION

Dr. Withycomb Will Conduct Meeting of Ranchers at Fair in October.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Albany, Or., Sept. 14.—The promoters of the Scio Stock and Agricultural Fair association are actively at work in preparing the grounds for the reception and entertainment of the guests that are expected to gather for this occasion. In connection with the exhibits of stock and agricultural resources, a farmers' institute will be conducted on October 4 and will be in charge of Dr. James Withycomb of Corvallis.

The officers of the fair are enthusiastic over the prospects for a large and enthusiastic gathering of the residents of Linn and adjoining counties. The space for the exhibits will be enlarged and increased to double the capacity first decided upon. It is expected to see one of the finest gatherings and exhibits of pure-bred stock ever brought together in Linn county, and for those who excel in these lines cash prizes are provided.

SMITH APPOINTED NEW STATE WARDEN

Rumored That Ex-Representative Rudio, an Ankeny Man, Wants the Job.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Walla Walla, Wash., Sept. 14.—J. D. Smith, captain of the guards, was yesterday appointed warden of the state penitentiary to succeed Warden Kincaid, who has resigned to take a position with the north bank railroad. Smith will fill the position until Kincaid's successor can be named.

It was rumored yesterday that ex-representative William Rudio, a strong Ankeny man, is making an active canvass for the wardenship of the prison. Rudio lives near Wabburg, owning considerable farming interests in that vicinity. He was in Walla Walla yesterday conferring with political leaders but would make no statement as to whether he was after Kincaid's job.

J. H. Davis, chairman of the state board, was in Walla Walla yesterday and appointed Smith temporary warden. Davis was reticent as to who would probably land the job.

CONVICTS WILL HAVE BAND AND NEWSPAPER

Plans for Publishing a Newspaper at the Penitentiary Will Be Made.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Walla Walla, Wash., Sept. 14.—Instruments for the band that is to be organized among the convicts at the penitentiary will be received yesterday and the band will immediately begin to practice. There are several excellent musicians confined in the prison and the new band is expected to develop into quite a musical organization.

Plans for publishing a newspaper at the penitentiary will be made. Those interested in the movement expect soon to be able to raise sufficient funds to purchase a plant.

KLAMATH FALLS SCHOOLS OPEN MONDAY

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Klamath Falls, Or., Sept. 14.—Klamath Falls public schools will open Monday, September 15. An up-to-date system of plumbing has just been installed, and other finishing work done in the building, including an additional room, which now gives Klamath Falls a public school second to none.

UNDER BOND FOR CRIMINAL ASSAULT

Clarence Ries of Mount Hood Settlement Must Stand Trial at Hood River.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Hood River, Or., Sept. 14.—Charged with attempting a criminal assault on Mrs. H. C. McKamey of Mount Hood settlement, Clarence Ries, aged 39 years, is under heavy bonds and will have a hearing Monday. Ries went to the home of Mrs. McKamey last Sunday evening while her husband was absent and gained admittance by telling her that one of the members of his family was in the house.

After talking with him some time and advising him what to do, Mrs. McKamey told Ries he had better go home. As he did not do so she became resolute and told him he must go. Ries then assaulted her. Her loud cries for help aroused her children, who were in the house, and they ran into the room to assist her. When they appeared Ries rushed from the house and disappeared.

On the return of Mr. McKamey, which was several days later, his wife told him of the assault, but was averse to having it made public. In order to keep McKamey from going in search of Ries, who had been absent for six weeks, McKamey had his wife and children arrested and brought him to this city Thursday night.

The latter is the brother of Frank Ries, who was tried for the murder of William Foss about a year ago and acquitted. Foss lived near the Ries family and his trunk and other effects found on morning in the ashes of his cabin, which had been set afire. The mystery of his death has never been explained.

HORSE THIEVES CAUGHT BY SHERIFF ELKINS

Prineville Officer Arrests Young Men Who Are Wanted at Junction City.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Eugene, Or., Sept. 14.—Sheriff Flisk has received a telegram from Sheriff Elkins, at Prineville, stating that he has captured H. Armstrong and H. W. Haines, young men who hired two horses from the Komp livery stable at Junction City and were found six days away with them. The fellows were traced to the summit of the Cascade mountains on the Santiam road and Sheriff Flisk wired the sheriff at Prineville to go out and meet them. He found them without any trouble and placed them under arrest. Deputy Sheriffs Bown and Jenkins left this morning for Prineville to bring the prisoners to Eugene for trial.

LEWIS COUNTY BANKS ARE VERY PROSPEROUS

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Chehalis, Wash., Sept. 14.—The statements of the various banks of Lewis county show a remarkably prosperous condition. Chehalis two banks, the firm of Coffman, Dobson & Co. and the Security State bank have total deposits aggregating $1,531,896.49. Central two banks, the United States National and the Union Trust company, have total deposits of $1,319,591.92.
