

KITTENS IN CHOP SUEY

Inspection in Chicago Lays Bare Incredible Condition of Filth in the Tenement District of That City—To Be Remedied.

(United Press Associated Wire.)
Chicago, Sept. 14.—Spiders, pine splinters and the sweepings of floors are a part of Chicago's daily diet. The chief sanitary inspector turned the light of investigation into the bread and pie bakeries, and the discoveries have aroused compounded sensations of disgust and indignation. The truth was hinted at when the inspector filed his report with photographs of the interior of a number of bakeries. Its full import was not realized until late tonight when additional photographs of dead insects found as fossils in stale bread and other foreign substances were shown in numerous exhibits.

Flies, roaches, bugs of unclassified kinds and splinters of wood were found in bread sold in tenement districts. Pies in cheap restaurants contained an equally varied mixture of substances. Blueberry pies were found to be filled with paste which was found to be dust and berry juice. Mince pies baffled complete analysis but a description of their possible contents caused the aldermen to shudder. Ill-lighted, foul cellars below the water level of the sewers and into which sewage backs during the rains and crowded rooms in dirty Italian quarters where macaroni are cooked and dried were found in many districts. The incidental investigation of Chinese chop suey restaurants revealed nine skinned small carcasses on ice. They were neither rabbits, squirrels or any other edible quadruped.

"What are these?" inquired the inspector.
"They fine eat. They cost ninety cents apiece. Make best suey," responded the proprietor. "They young cats—kittens."

The rich yield of the first investigation has shocked the aldermen. They have instructed the inspector to go and when he gets through to tell them the worst.

ROBERT HUNTER SAYS IRISH ARE OPPRESSED

New York Sociologist Declares Landlordism Is Ruining Emerald Isle and that Conditions Are Brewing Which May Result Seriously.

(Hearst News by Longest Leased Wire.)
London, Sept. 14.—Robert Hunter, the well-known New York sociologist, after many months' study of the industrial and sociological conditions in the chief cities of Europe, returned to London on Thursday. After a tour of Ireland, where he studied conditions closely, especially in the western counties, Mr. Hunter said to the Hearst News Service correspondent:

"The trouble with Ireland is landlordism. The people cannot get land enough to till to make a living. Misery and poverty visible in the western counties of Ireland is stupendous. Depressing conditions are certain to prevail there during the winter. The potato crop has been an entire failure owing to the wet summer. With famine menacing them, there is no telling what the people may be driven to this winter."

"The government authorities are becoming alarmed. They are increasing the police force everywhere. Obviously, the government is expecting widespread trouble this winter."

Strike causes fear.
"Since the strike of the Royal Irish constabulary in Belfast, the authorities have reason to believe that the traditional loyalty of this splendid body of men has been diminished. As remarked the landlord system is the basis of most of Ireland's woes. I saw places where it was impossible for tenants to make a living without fishing. They were paying rents that even New York and Ohio farmers would object to. The soil is so poor that it produced scarcely anything but potatoes."

"I found a demand for home rule greater than ever. There is a spirit of revolt in the air. I was struck by the enthusiasm of the members of various organizations to secure an Irish republic. I found people attending public meetings, where vast crowds showed their deadly earnestness in demanding home rule."

"The Irish have ceased to expect anything from the British parliament. They decline to accept anything but home rule. They are convinced that the time for compromise has passed. Home rule or nothing is their cry. I was amazed to find everywhere young men joining leagues for the economic upbuilding of Ireland."

"I was surprised to find a wave of temperance sweeping over Ireland. Young men everywhere are preaching the moral cause of temperance on political grounds. It is argued that the way to hit England is to stop increasing her revenue from the sale of beer and whiskey. This policy is certain to decrease the bank accounts of the largest Irish landlords who are owners of a vast amount of property."

Conditions improving.
"The conditions in Ireland are generally improving, thanks to the recently improving of the people, especially young men."

"On the agrarian side things are becoming serious. In many counties the people are resorting to violence to prevent the letting of farms for grazing. They demand that farms be let for tilling in order to provide food for many of the families. In one state revolution practically prevails. In several places the people are living on bread, potatoes and tea, while thousands of rich areas nearby which they are unable to rent."

Youths are salvation.
"Ireland's salvation depends upon her youth; that they will not fall her. Ireland's grievances are real. Misgovernment and landlordism are at the bottom of them. From 1871 to 1907 2,000,000 sturdy immigrants left Ireland. In 27 years the population has decreased 20 per cent, while England's population has increased in the same ratio. In 1871 there were 5,821,000 acres under cultivation. In 1907 only 4,727,000; nearly 1,000,000 acres of land have gone out of cultivation in 40 years. That is where the Irish shoe pinches."

"While it is becoming more difficult for people to get land yet taxation is increasing and population is decreasing. In 1871 taxation in Ireland was $25,000,000 and in 1906 it had increased to nearly $50,000,000."

The per capita taxation has nearly doubled in 40 years. To sum up economic conditions, within 40 years the population has decreased 20 per cent, the land cultivation 17 1/2 per cent, taxation has increased 71 1/2 per cent. And pauperism has increased 54 per cent. Do you wonder that the Irish should clamor for home rule?"

Since the optimum act came into force in 1871, the population of the United States has increased 50 per cent, and other large cities have been making big money by selling alleged cures for the optimum habit.

Salmon Packer Driven on Alaska Shore—Men Suffer Terribly.

(Hearst News by Longest Leased Wire.)
San Francisco, Sept. 14.—Men coming back to port from Alaska on the salmon packer H. P. Cheney brought details of the wreck of the big gasoline schooner Rita Newman, which was driven ashore on the bleak coast of Simionoff island May 25 last following a storm and thick fog.

The Rita Newman had 18 men on board and was laden with supplies for the stations of the North Alaska Salmon company in British bay. She was almost at her destination when storm and fog enveloped her destruction. Fortunately for all hands the schooner ran through the surf before swamping and Captain Matheson and his crew were able to walk ashore. They were now able to get only a small quantity of provisions and starvation threatened from the first.

The men saw all around them only death on the rocks. Signals were put up on sticks and close watch was kept on passing vessels, but it was not until a week had passed that the schooner Spray appeared. They had subsisted the entire week on a few crackers and a small quantity of canned stuff.

Captain Matheson and the other men, after reaching Unga, spent an entire month in jail—not as prisoners, but because it was the only available habitation. The steamer Dora later took them to Valdez.

MAIL SERVICE IS PROTESTED

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Astoria, Or., Sept. 14.—A protest has been made to the postal department regarding the mail service between Seaside and Astoria in the mornings. Since the winter schedule on the Astoria & Columbia road was into effect the evening train from Portland does not run through to Seaside and as a result there is no mail clerk on the morning train from there.

In place of sending a sealed pouch to Astoria the postmaster at Seaside makes up but one letter pouch and it is opened by the railway mail clerk, who boards the train here. As a result mail coming from Seaside in the morning and destined for Astoria is carried up the line until the down train from Portland is met and is then brought back, arriving here at noon. This is what is objected to. It is contended the closed pouch should be kept here and not allowed to pass out of Astoria. The delay in delivering mail is five hours.

McCarthy is held in jail in default of bail. It is understood he admits the charge but claims he was intoxicated at the time and did not realize what he was doing. He is 30 years of age.

SLEEVE HOLDER

Ingenuous Contrivance for Preventing Crumpling of the Sleeve.

If it were permissible many a young lady would be tempted to use a cue word every time she puts on her coat. We have all watched her struggle in the attempt to tuck the big balloon sleeves of her waist into the armholes of the coat. Naturally it must be uncomfortable to have the inner sleeve bunched at the shoulder. An ingenious English woman has invented a simple contrivance which does away with all those trying perplexities, and she thinks so highly of the device that she has had it patented in the United States. As shown in illustration, it comprises a narrow elastic band, having on each and a ring, one being larger than the other. Attached to the hand is a double cord. In using this device the band is formed into a lasso (by slipping the smaller ring through the larger one), which is slipped over the end of the sleeve of the waist. The fine end of the band is then secured to the thumb by the ring. The cord is attached to the little finger. After slipping the arm into the sleeve of the coat the ring on the thumb is released and the band pulled out of the armhole by means of the cord.

Clyde Fitch's Tribute to Mansfield.

From the Detroit News.
Clyde Fitch, the playwright, said of Mr. Mansfield's death:
"Mansfield did not have a lovable or affectionate personality; he was intellectual achievement, but he had his own magnetism, which made the few who did love him, love him first and last. But he would have loved to have been loved. He was too big a man to stoop to little tricks to win affection."

"He was a real actor, a real artist and big in both. We cannot compare him with anybody. There was no emotion that he could not express. He has helped raise the standard of the stage. The noble place he made for himself in the theatre must stay empty. Richard Mansfield's glory will always remain his own."

Daniel Frohman, the theatrical manager, who, some years ago, signed a three years' contract with Mr. Mansfield, which terminated in exactly three weeks, said:
"A man possessed of Mansfield's gifts, but without his intellect never would have reached the stage. Even Shakespeare never saw one of his female characters enacted by a woman. His Portia, Juliet, Desdemona and Ophelias were taken by boys. Professor Raleigh ascribes to this fact the miraculous development of the poetic drama in the days of Elizabeth. Archie Bell, a writer in the Theatre magazine, brings out another aspect of the same question less favorable to boy actors. Some of them, we are told, were 40 years of age and a jolly old chronicler informs us that real kings were sometimes kept waiting for the performance to begin on the stage because the stage-queens were delayed in shaving. Today this state of affairs is reversed. Nowhere has woman's emancipation been more complete than on the boards. Woman, Mr. Bell declares, has done more for the theatre than any other single force. The theatre in return has done more for woman than any other institution, and at present her supremacy is almost unquestioned in the theatrical world."

Nordy contends that the future of poetry belongs to children and women. Nordy the same is true of the stage? Mr. Bell evidently holds the belief that it will, which he bases upon the fact that not content with overshadowing man, woman even takes his best part from him, and in place of the boy-actor of former days, we have the woman appearing in masculine parts. Adelaide Kuhn as Hamlet, Maude Adams as Peter Pan and L'Algon, of this generation, and several women of the past century have given ample satisfaction in masculine roles. The complete monopoly by the "weaker sex" of everything dramatic is not one of the impossibilities of the future. Likewise Sarah Bernhardt's recent announcement that she may add the role of Mephisto to her vast repertoire, is not without significance in Mr. Bell's opinion. The chorus man, he concludes, is already counted the representative of the lowest caste in theatricdom, and his more fortunate brothers are merely hanging on the thread of custom, which is likely to snap at any moment and leave them relics of the day when there were men actors on the stage of the theatre.

How Easy.
From the New York World.
There will be 992 delegates in the Republican national convention of 1908, with 497 votes necessary to a choice. Of these 992 delegates 332 will come from southern states where the Republican organization is in the hands of federal office holders, 158 will come from states west of the Mississippi, where Mr. Roosevelt's anti-corruption policies are most admired and where

MARVELOUS GROWTH OF AN EAST SIDE STORE

The new building of the W. H. Markell & Co., East Side Department Store, pictures the progress of this section of the city more readily than would thousands of honeyed words about the attractions of the East Side. The growth of this establishment from one of the usual beginners' sites to the present elegant and well-equipped store—measuring its up-to-date facilities with any other and carrying stock enough to make one marvel at the rapid increase of the city's population—must make the owners feel proud of the business they have built up. This is the fifth move this firm has made, each move being necessitated by the demands for additional space. The new store is located in his lingo battleship demonstration is most popular. These three groups will represent 614 votes in the convention—a safe working majority.

How easy it would be for Mr. Roosevelt to control that convention! How easy to renounce himself if that happened to be his purpose.
With the southern, western and territorial delegates solidly behind him Mr. Roosevelt would not require the vote of a solitary delegate from any state north of Mason and Dixon's line and east of the Mississippi river!

The Nature of Taft.
From the New York American.
Since Secretary Taft has been talking it is apparent why he has been selected by the present government to become the government that is to be.

If Mr. Taft has any original ideas or sentiments he keeps them carefully to himself. His speeches all say in effect: "If you like what I say, reserve your applause. I'm only the humble phonograph which delivers to you the great Voice. If you want me for president, you won't get me; you will get the owner of the Voice, of which I am the meek and lowly echo."

A candidate for the highest office in the land who will thus demean himself is not the sort of candidate that the people want.
The president of the United States ought to represent the people, not any individual; and an aspirant for that office must make his canvass as a man and not as a phonograph.

If Taft is willing to be Mr. Roosevelt's man before the people he would never be his own man or the people's man in the White House.
