PUTS LIMIT ON ALL STRUCTURES

Provisions Will Probably Be Accepted as Drafted—New Regulations Not Much More Than Codification of Old City Ordinances.

Portland's proposed new building code, which was recently drafted by Building Inspector Spencer in conjunction with a committee of local architects and builders, will be introduced into the council at its next meeting, September 25. The usual procedure in the council will require that the ordinance be referred to a committee with the result that it will be at least a month before final action can be had on the measure.

In drafting the new law every effort was made to harmonize all the conflicting interests and theories without in any way impairing its efficiency. The main difficulty that confronted the committee was in arranging a satisfactory classification of buildings and in agreeing upon a limit of height. The law now in force, known as the Shepherd ordinance, limits the height of ordinary brick and mill constructed buildings to four stories but puts no limit to the height of class "A" or fireproof structures.

Provides for Mill Construction.
A formidable opposition has arisen to the classes in the Shepherd ordinance limiting the height of mill constructed buildings to four stories. The opposition was based upon the theory that this provision would seriously interfere with the building development in the wholesale districts, where this class of construction is largely employed. Under the head of mill construction the new ordinance contains the following provisions:
The term "mill construction" shall apply to all floors and roofs in which no wood floor, roof beam or girder shall be less than six inches in cross section, and no post or other timber shall be less than six inches in either of its cross dimensions. The top of the beams shall be covered over with plank not less than 3 inches in thickness, spliced or tongued and grooved, and for floors there shall be laid on the top of the plank in a crosswise or diagonal direction boards not less than 1 inch in thickness, tongued and grooved, and properly secured between the floor boards and the planking there shall be placed two thicknesses of carefully laid waterproof material, and this material shall be flashed at least three inches around all walls and posts or columns and openings with moldings or base boards. If wood posts are used to support mill constructed floors and roofs, none shall be of smaller sectional area than 100 square inches, nor be less than 10 inches in either dimension, except for posts in the top story, which shall not be of smaller sectional area than 64 square inches, nor be less than 8 inches in either dimension. Wood posts shall have cast iron caps or boxes so constructed as to form a base for the post above. The ends of the girders shall be secured to the cap or box in such manner as to be self-aligning.

Limit on Brick Buildings.
The height of future mill construction is limited to six stories, not to exceed 80 feet, except when buildings of this type are equipped with an automatic sprinkler system, in which case the limit of height shall be seven stories, or not to exceed 95 feet.
The provisions in the old law limiting the height of ordinary brick buildings to four stories is not changed. The only changes made in class "A" buildings are in limiting the height of the former to 30 feet and of the latter to 80 feet. Reinforced concrete buildings are limited to height of 150 feet and shall not contain more than 10 stories.
It is generally believed that the council will accept the new measure practically as it was drawn. Except for the changes noted above and a few minor amendments the new measure is practically a codification of all the existing ordinances affecting building.

BIG PROFITS CAN EASILY BE MADE

Tillamook County Marshes Offer Incentives for Men of Small Means—Picking is a Pleasure and Pests Do Not Thrive Here.

"Cranberries raised in Oregon" is the new slogan for the commercial bodies to cry out to the world at large now that the fields in Tillamook county are producing large quantities of the berries that round out the Thanksgiving dinner. B. O. Snuffer of Tillamook arrived at the Imperial hotel last night with the first box of the delicious berries picked from the marsh in Tillamook county. Mr. Snuffer brought the berries to Portland to place on display and to allow Portlanders an opportunity to gauge the quality of the Oregon product with that of the eastern berries. Mr. Snuffer last night, in telling about the new industry said:
"The vines from which these berries were picked have not been touched for eight years except to pick the berries. Because the berries require so little care and attention the profits are very large. Not an acre from the patch these berries came from has ever produced less than 800 bushels and with good yield 800 bushels. The berries sell for $2 a bushel. W. C. King picked 1,000 bushels an acre from a tract he owns here."

RECORD PRICE PAID.

New and Wonderful Hood River Apple Brings $8 a Box.
(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Hood River, Or., Sept. 16.—While the contest as to who raised the biggest apple in Oregon may go merrily on, Hood River man settled any dispute that may arise this year as to the highest price by announcing that he has sold a box of 48 boxes of apples at $8 a box. The fruit will go to Seeley, Mason & Co. of Portland, and was grown on the fruit farm of Oscar Vanderbilt, known as Beulah Land, a few miles from this city. The apples are of such large size that they will average the buyer about 11 cents apiece without the freight charges.
When ripe the Winter Banana emits such a strong flavor of the tropical fruit that it is named after that fruit. Where it cannot be seen a box of them conveys the idea that there is a bunch of bananas hanging somewhere in the vicinity.
Several samples of the fruit were shown in display in the window of a store here today and weigh very close to a pound apiece.

"The Love Route" a Winner.
"The Love Route," which opened at the Baker yesterday has proved a delightful surprise. No one knew much about it, but now it is a safe guess that those two immense audiences of yesterday and last night have most thoroughly advertised it through the city.

Wednesday Matinee at the Empire.
The midweek Wednesday matinee at the Empire are very popular affairs. This week "The Little Prospector," with the bright and charming actress "Chick" Perkins, will be the attraction. It is sure to please large audiences at every performance.

"The Geisha" Tonight.
The Californians tonight will sing "The Geisha" at the Marquam. As the title indicates, this is a Japanese musical comedy and it is one of those British creations which has been popular for years. Whenever seen "The Geisha" has achieved success, for it has a number of beautiful selections. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

"All for Gold" at the Lyric.
A powerful new melodrama with a semi-military atmosphere, will be the second offering of the new Lyric stock company, which has already made such a wonderful success in its last week's bill. Tonight the new organization will meet with an even greater favor than it did last week.

"Blinky the Jailbird."
Budd Ross and company will present "Blinky the Jailbird" as the headline feature on the new vaudeville program at the Grand, which begins today. This is a comedy sketch, with enough plot to make the jokes and dialogue the more pungent. Sing Fong Lee, the only Chinese violinist in vaudeville, is another attraction.

"Queen of the Highway."
Thrilling and sensational is the romance which the French stock company is presenting at the Star this week. "The Queen of the Highway" is a western drama, with some of the exciting bits of frontier life woven into the story. A stage coach is held up by bandits, who are beaten off by secret service detectives and soldiers.

OKLAHOMA VOTES ON ADMISSION

Indications Are That Constitution Will Be Ratified by the People.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Guthrie, Okla., Sept. 15.—Tomorrow the people of Oklahoma and Indian Territory will vote to accept or reject the constitution which, if accepted, will admit these communities to the Union as the state of Oklahoma. At the same time the people will vote for state officers, members of congress, legislators for the county officers, and will also ballot on the question of prohibition. The campaign now closed has been one of unusual interest and has attracted the attention of the entire country. If Oklahoma statehood becomes an accomplished fact before the presidential election next year the result may have an important bearing on that contest. This, combined with other circumstances, has caused the political leaders of both parties to take a keen interest in the campaign leading up to the voting tomorrow. Both parties have sent some of their best campaigners into the twin territories. The list of Republican speakers being headed by Secretary of War Taft and that of the Democrats by William J. Bryan. The indications among these are that the constitution will be ratified by the people. Ever since its final adoption by the constitutional convention the document has been a subject of much discussion, chiefly because of the political controversy over the question of its approval by the president, whose approval was held to be necessary before Oklahoma can be placed on the statehood roll. While partisan bias has caused considerable criticism of the constitution it has not been so much the public without distinction as to political creed, among these are the provisions against child labor, those prohibiting the issuance of watered stocks and making the books of qualified corporations subject at all times to inspection, the employers' liability law, the eight-hour law for state, county and municipal work and the provisions for the construction of railroads and other large corporations.

Well Adapted to Climate.
"I commenced the culture of cranberries in the spring of 1899, and find that the vines are well adapted to this climate. They grow vigorously, and where the bogs are properly prepared, they are enormously productive. While picking my crop one year I measured off some ground and found the profit very large. Not an acre from the patch these berries came from has ever produced less than 800 bushels and with good yield 800 bushels. The berries sell for $2 a bushel. W. C. King picked 1,000 bushels an acre from a tract he owns here."

Oregon Berries Superior.
"I find that the cranberries grown here are of a darker color than those placed on display in the window of a store here today and weigh very close to a pound apiece."
Pleasure to Pick Berries.
"The picking season is usually one of pleasure, for several reasons, to both picker and proprietor. The weather is generally fine, the berries are of good color, and in many cases there is a bright red color, and in many cases there is a four-deep and touching each other, completely hide the vines and ground beneath."
Pests Cannot Live Here.
"In the east the vines are often infested with insect pests, and if the growers have not control of the water the whole crop is in danger. I understand that the pests have been imported here at different times in shipping plants, but they soon disappear, as they cannot live in this climate."
"There is money in the cranberry business and the many bogs of Tillamook county are waiting for men of means and energy to develop them."

DRIVEN INTO EARTH BY FALLING TREE
Terrible Fate Overtakes Chris Johnson Near Clatskanie—Body Is Found Days Afterward.
(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Clatskanie, Or., Sept. 16.—Chris Johnson, a well-known resident of this place, was killed last week about two miles south of Clatskanie by a falling tree. It is not sure when the tree fell upon him but he was seen working in the field Wednesday. He seemed to have been near the larger tree, which was on fire, when it began to fall. Blinded by the smoke from the burning tree he managed to get about 250 feet from it when it struck him on the shoulders and simply drove him into the ground. Decomposition of the body having set in it was taken out and buried immediately.
Johnson leaves a sister, Mrs. Chris Erickson, of this place and other relatives in the old country.

INSANE WOMAN'S FUNERAL PYRE

Mrs. Frances E. McCoy, Near Dufur, Fires Barn Over Her Head.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
The Dallas, Or., Sept. 16.—A most terrible tragedy occurred seven miles west of Dufur a few days ago, news of which reached this city yesterday. Mrs. Frances E. McCoy, whose husband was away from home at the time, sent her two little children to a neighbor's, went to the barn, set it on fire and burned herself to death. Neighbors gathered at the conflagration as quickly as possible, but too late to save the structure. They found her charred remains in the ruins.
The act was no doubt premeditated, and it is supposed she was temporarily insane, as she had been ill for some time. Her husband is prostrated with grief over his wife's tragic death.

ENGINE STARTS WITH ENGINEER IN WHEELS

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Kennewick, Wash., Sept. 16.—W. Sloan, engineer and bridge tender in charge of the Northern Pacific bridge across the Columbia river at this place, was caught in the machinery of the gasoline engine used to swing the draw span and was terribly injured. That he was not instantly killed is considered almost a miracle. The engine had stopped, and for the purpose of examining the machinery to locate the cause of the trouble Sloan leaned through one of the large wheels. While in this position the engine suddenly started up and Sloan was caught in the revolving wheel. He managed to extricate himself from the machinery, but not before he had sustained several ugly wounds on his head. The engine was completely torn off, and one gash in his scalp is six inches long. He was also very severely bruised about the shoulders.
Sloan has been handling machinery and gasoline engines for 15 years, but this is his first serious accident.
