3 MEN'S EXPERIENCES

When a Man Follows Up an Advertisement and It Pays Him, He Is Ever Afterward the Best Advertisement for the Firm.

Three men entered the "greater store for men" of Robinson & Co., 289-291 Washington street, before 10 o'clock Monday morning and demanded a look at the new brand "Cambridge Correct Clothes." Two bought a suit each, and the third took a cravat and a waistcoat.

All were delighted with the extra quality of the goods and the moderate prices, and all week it seems they've been sending their friends. The stock is by no means exhausted—it was large and new goods are constantly being opened up. But it's made a slump in advertising—it doesn't seem so necessary.
