G. O. P. CLUBS WRANGLE AND THROW THICK MUD

Eruption Between Portland Republican Organizations Again Breaks Out—Trouble Is One Supposed to Be Dead, Is Alive and Now Announces Smoker.

Internal dissension and verbal war have again broken out in one of the periodic eruptions between the Republican club of Portland and the Union Republican club. Naughty things are being said back and forth between the two headquarters and some interesting scraps are possible before the end of the coming political campaign is in sight. Much of the trouble arises over the fact that the Republican club of Portland is currently supposed to be dead and all its heretofore existing vitality absorbed and assimilated by the Union club. Contrary to this assumption, however, Charles E. Lockwood, secretary of the corpse, has performed a miracle of resurrection by making the announcement that the Portland Republican club had elected officers, would give a smoker and had endorsed the second elective term idea. These announcements have been taken by the officers and members of the Union club as being very unbecoming in a corpse.

Two Clubs Merged.
 The whole cause of dissension, however, dates back more than a year when the Union club was formed out of the membership of the Beaver and Portland Republican clubs. Away back in 1906 an effort was made to merge the two, but the negotiations failed and it was not until just prior to the last municipal election that the plan succeeded. At that time W. P. Keedy of the Republican club bore the proposal of the merger to the Beaver club, and after much discussion it was planned to combine with equal representation upon the official list chosen from the members of each of the old clubs. When it came to selecting the executive board, however, there was a deadlock upon the election of Lockwood, and it was decided not to place him upon the consolidated board. Lockwood and some of his friends balked at this and said the merger should not go through. Lockwood refused to yield up the books of the old club when they were called for and maintained that the Portland Republican club was still in very active existence. After the campaign when a large part of the membership had gone into the Union club it was thought the strife was at an end.

To Hold Pacifying Smokers.
 Last week announcement was made that the Republican club of Portland had elected new officers and was going to take the leading part in things political. Following this, the retaliatory announcement was made that the Union club had planned for monthly smokers in order that all good Republicans could become acquainted. It is further announced that before the campaign is over every county in the state will be organized on the block plan until each precinct within the Oregon boundaries will be in direct touch with the central organization, the Union club here in Portland.
