

NEW PASTOR AT TAYLOR STREET CHURCH SUNDAY

Rev. Benjamin Young Comes to Portland From Salt Lake City Highly Recommended—Rev. Wilson and Rev. Heppie Exchange Pulpits This Week.

It is expected in Methodist Episcopal circles that Rev. Benjamin Young, D. D., will deliver his first sermon as pastor of Taylor Street Methodist church next Sunday morning. He is expected to arrive in Portland Saturday morning. Everything is being arranged by members of the First Methodist church to receive the newly appointed minister and his family. In discussing Rev. Mr. Young today at the M. E. parsonage, Bishop Moore said:

"He is a grand character with delightful social qualities, superior pulpit oratory and highly successful in the management of all business necessary in connection with general church work. He is a man in the very prime of life, and I am positive he will do things in Portland as he has in other places. Rev. Mr. Young will come to the Koss City accompanied by his wife and children."

"For five years Mr. Young occupied the pulpit of the First church in Salt Lake City, and during that time he is one of the finest places of worship in the entire intermountain country. He is between 35 and 40 years old, and in my opinion one of the ablest ministers in our church."

Thrived in Mormon Stronghold.
"His success in Salt Lake City, the stronghold of Mormonism, has been something phenomenal. The Methodist church there is one of the wonderful sights of the city, and only lately he completed payment on a newly installed $5,000 pipe organ. It was with the greatest difficulty that his transfer to this conference was accomplished, and his congregation did not want the change made."

"Rev. Mr. Young is a graduate of the old U. S. Grant university, known as Chattanooga university, and he is ably assisted by his wife, whom I deem one of the most Christianly women I ever met. They will do a great work in this city, and he will be welcomed by all. He is a natural leader in any community, and he is a broad minded and fearless personality, taken from every viewpoint."

Bishop Moore also said many complimentary things regarding the transfer to University Park church of Rev. W. R. Jeffery. The latter is a graduate of Iowa university. For the past five years he has been engaged in missionary work on the Black Hills mission.

South Dakota. At this point is located one of the largest normal schools in the state.

Satisfied with Change.
Dr. Clarence Truitt Wilson looks upon his transfer by Bishop Moore from Grace church philosophically. Dr. Wilson admits that perhaps if the congregations of each church had their way no changes would have been made. He feels quite certain that Rev. W. H. Heppie's congregation was most pleased with his removal, and he would have made determined effort to retain him had it been understood that the conference contemplated changes.

"The same thing holds true, I firmly believe, with regard to the congregation of Grace church with regard to my removal," said Dr. Wilson. "I believe what I state and while of course I am sorry to leave the splendid congregation to which I have been so pleasantly attached, it is the duty of every other minister in the service of God in our church to do the exact bidding of the Lord."

"Rev. Mr. Heppie is a scholarly man," said Dr. Wilson. "We have much work ahead of us and I have noticed during my term of pastor at Grace church that 114 families have removed from my field of labor to the east side. On the other hand I fail to note a single family where any family has removed from the east side to the west. Naturally I expect with all these things to be accomplished in the next annual conference with a largely increased membership. More, I shall strive to bring to the gathering the largest increased membership of any church in the Oregon conference."

Dr. Wilson announced today that he will remove from Grace church, north this week and Rev. Mr. Heppie and family will do likewise from Centenary church. Each will preach in the pulpit of his new appointment next Sunday. The social end of the conference ended last night with a large temperance rally at Grace church. A large number of delegates were in attendance and Rev. D. H. Trimble and Rev. Asa Sleeth delivered addresses.

Many of the delegates departed for home last evening and those who remained over last night left Portland this morning. At the M. E. parsonage at 21 Eleventh street Rev. Hill, who was transferred to Spokane, is packed and will depart Thursday. Bishop Moore will remove tomorrow to the Hobart-Curtiss apartments, this city.

It's a Fair Question

Why don't you order your clothes from the Columbia Woolen Mills Company?

It would seem to us that there was only one answer—that you have never looked into the merits of Columbia tailoring.

You certainly could not ask for a finer line of fabrics from which to choose—nor can any other tailor in this town show you as good a selection as that carried here.

You cannot secure, except from a very few of the highest-price tailors, as fine workmanship or as satisfactory fit as turned out by the Columbia's staff of experts.

And, last but not least, you cannot duplicate the Columbia's popular prices. Convince yourself—investigate.

NEWSBOYS TONIGHT WILL FEAST EYES ON SPLENDORS OF STAGE

It's The Journal's treat. Two hundred of the happiest boys in all Oregon will march proudly away from The Journal offices tonight and will turn west on Morrison street.

There won't be any hesitation about the next move of the column of happy laughing youngsters—they know where the Marquam building is, and that if one goes up the long bright corridor with its shining lights and can see by the blue-uniformed, brass-buttoned fellows at the swinging doors, a world of wonder will open up within—a fairy land with beautiful ladies who are so happy that they sing their joy and of brave men who wear lovely blue and yellow and red and purple velvet clothes.

For tonight comes The Journal's big theatre party to its newsboys. At the fellows, from the little chaps who get mixed up with your legs when you are in a hurry to get home and who call out "Journal tonight—about the big explosion," in curiously trembling voices, to the big fellows who have been with The Journal ever since it was a little paper and who have grown up with it and seen it become the biggest paper and best seller in Oregon, will be the hand.

The boys are to meet in The Journal business office at 8 o'clock, and there the circulation department of the paper will take charge of them and see that they all get within the magic doors and see "Mariana."

Some of them have never been in the theatre before, and when Miss Cecilia Rhoda steps out before the footlights with her castanet in hand and starts to sing for the king of Spain, the big fellow with the black moustache and the velvet suit, it will be their first glimpse of that wonderful land of music and fine clothes.

So those who happen to be in the Marquam tonight needn't be surprised when 200 excited urchins file into the playhouse and proceed to enjoy themselves in their own way.

If they hate Don Jose and fall in love with pretty Mariana and laugh very loud at the Marchioness de Montefiore and her homely red face, remember how Sir Roger de Coverly went to the play and how he believed in what he saw and heard and was happy for it.

If they jump up and down by their seats with excitement and cause someone to miss a note, try and remember that first time you saw Little Lord Fauntleroy or Cinderella, or Sarah Crews.

For it's the newsboys' night.

COUNCILMAN WILLS

prior to the opening of the Lewis and Clark exposition. He has been proven a spy and traitor by the unions with which he affiliated, and was first reported to the board of directors at the meetings. He has been thrown out of the meetings with women here, there and everywhere about the lower class saloons of the lower city. He has been made his proposition to discredit the mayor with the aid of a woman had been an occasional visitor to a saloon in company with Mrs. Waymire, his companion and accomplice in the badger game attempted last Thursday.

The story told by Councilman Wills bears out the statement of C. M. Habry, organizer of the Painters' union, who told of Radding's statement that he was to receive $1,000 for a deal to be pulled off last Wednesday and in which a woman and a prominent man were implicated.

CALLED BELL HER HUSBAND

Mrs. Waymire Later Called Him Her Brother-in-Law.

Six weeks ago Mrs. Waymire accompanied by some other woman, inquired at the home of Mrs. Charles M. Kiggins, 358 Fourteenth street, concerning the whereabouts of her husband, Mrs. Kiggins held the keys for Alvin Hawk, a printer, who held a lease on the house. She showed the cottage to Mrs. Waymire who told her that she thought she would take it.

Later she saw Mr. Hawk in his office and told him that she wanted to rent the house with her. According to Mrs. Hawk there were no others living in the house and although she asked him if he objected to her taking roomers and he told her he did not, she did not take any to his knowledge.

Soon after establishing herself and the young watchmaker in the cottage Mrs. Waymire approached Gibson J. Burns, a grocer at the corner of Eleventh and Montgomery streets and asked him to give her credit.

"Husband" Was a Myth.

"She told me that she and her husband had just moved into the house at 358 Fourteenth street," said Mr. Burns, "and she wanted to establish credit and pay her bills at the end of each week."

"I looked up Bell and found that he was getting $20 a week at the jewelry shop so I gave them credit. She never ordered much at a time, and always paid it promptly at the end of the week. The bills were made out in the name of her 'brother-in-law,' Bell."

Not a Good Housekeeper.

The delivery man at the grocery said that he frequently saw Mrs. Waymire at the house, but seldom saw anyone else around it. He said that she was not well, he said, "the porches were dirty and cluttered-up, and the kitchen was always in a messy and untidy condition."

Next door to Mrs. Waymire lives George W. Carpenter. Mr. Carpenter saw little of the couple excepting that there were only two people living in the house and now and then other men—seldom if ever any women—would visit them. Mr. Carpenter understood that the couple were man and wife—he had never heard anyone speak of anything else in connection with them.

Downstairs in the same house Mrs. Riley lived—she, too, supposed that the couple were man and wife—there was everything to indicate that they were. When Mrs. Waymire went to the Marquam rooming house on the day of the attack on the mayor she told D. M. Pingman, the proprietor of the place, that she and her husband wanted to live there and that they would also have a friend with them.

"She said that her husband was to live with her," said Mr. Pingman, "and I thought nothing of the matter."

setting forth that $750 cash would be taken in lieu of bonds.

Mrs. Waymire was then brought down in the elevator by Matron Simmons. Quietly, without uttering a word of comment or expressing any pleasure or displeasure, she entered her name to the receipt book for her property and after putting on her rings, stowing a few articles in a reticule, hastened from the building with the lawyer.

Despite the fact that Mrs. Waymire preserved a silence, she was a dangerous, slyly glitter in her big, expressive eyes.

Not the least sensational feature in connection with the case, is Attorney Fouts' declaration that he believes that his appeal to Mrs. Robertson and Mrs. Day, prominent actresses of the Y. W. C. A., resulted in securing bail for Mrs. Waymire.

"I called on these estimable ladies yesterday," stated Fouts to a Journal representative this morning at headquarters, "and laid the entire matter before them. I asked them to call upon Mrs. Waymire and see for themselves if she was the kind of woman the prosecution is trying to make her out. I pointed out to them that in view of the circumstances surrounding the case business men generally were loath to put up with her."

"Whatever she is accused of she is still a woman," I told them, "and entitled to her liberty. I am not at liberty to give the names of the men who put up the money, but am satisfied that Y. W. C. A. influence played an important part in securing Mrs. Waymire's release."

He has on occasion driven his car at breakneck speed from Madrid to Venia, and he is reported to have done so on his way to the kings of Spain. It is a favorite jest of his to invite one of his nobles who is not particularly fond of going fast to

It was founded in 1878 and has 155 instructors and a library of 12,000 volumes. Its president is Henry B. Brown, A. M.

Temple college is an undenominational and coeducational institution located in Philadelphia. It was founded in 1854.

On the other hand, Princeton and Johns Hopkins, widely known throughout the world for their historical records and advanced educational methods, number in the case of the former, 1,907 students and in the latter only 600 students.

It will be a surprise to many students, even of New York, to learn that Pratt institute in Brooklyn stands eleventh in size among the educational institutions of the United States. But the table shows, perhaps more emphatically than anything else, the great growth of the universities of our western states and the wide distribution of educational advance throughout the country.
