

UNITED RAILROAD BOOKS ARE PRODUCED IN COURT

Court's Orders Complied With in Connection With Trial of Tiley L. Ford—Honey Became Exasperated When Traction Cashier Failed to Tell What He Knew.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
 San Francisco, Oct. 2.—Complying with the court's orders, the books of the United Railroads were produced in court this morning when the trial of Tiley L. Ford was resumed.
 The first witness, Secretary Wilcutt, was called. Wilcutt was followed by an office boy bearing a huge stack of the corporation's books. Prosecutor Honey did not immediately delve into the books, but began by showing that many of the directors of the railroad company have not been attending to the direction of the company and have been out of the state for some time.
Bank Accounts Examined.
 The bank accounts of the corporation were next gone into. Wilcutt stated that the company's accounts had been kept in the Wells-Fargo National bank and with the Mercantile Trust company. Wilcutt denied having any knowledge of the large sums of money that had been transferred from New York to the mint and placed to the account of Thornwall Mullally. Every question in regard to the books was objected to by Attorney Rogers.
Clerk Who Knew First.
 He then asked for the accounts in which the money would have been entered had it been entered at all. A clerk named Bowlin had made the entries for April and May, 1906, at the time the money was sent here from the east. He had been discharged in the latter part of last year and Wilcutt was unable to tell of his whereabouts at the present time.
 The journal from which the entries were made were then produced and inspected by Honey. The journal also showed that no entry of the money had been made.
 A. M. Dahler, cashier of the United Railroads, was the next witness.
 "Did Mullally turn over $3,000 to you shortly after the first?"
 "Yes."
Dahler's Memory Defective.
 Dahler's memory was defective. He recovered later, and Prosecutor Honey inquired if he had any memoranda. It developed that the entries had been made in the cash book, which had been sent to New York last November after the grand jury had begun its investigation. Dahler could not tell the amount of money nor the size of the sacks. He could not even tell what he had done with the money that he had received. To every question asked the witness had the one unflinching reply:

 "I don't remember."
Honey Became Exasperated.
 "Well, where did you get the money to pay your men with?" exasperated the failure of the witness to tell what he knew.
 Attorney Rogers here interrupted and admitted that the $30,000 received from the mint had been used to pay off the men. He also promised to see if the money received by Mullally had been deposited in the Wells-Fargo National bank.
 "Did you ever receive $50,000 from Tiley L. Ford after the fire in currency?"
 "No, sir."
 "Did you later receive $100,000?"
 "No, sir."
 "Did you ever receive $100,000 from Ford or anyone else in currency of small denominations?"
 "No, sir."
 "Take the witness," concluded Honey, in a tone of satisfaction.
 Dahler was excused without cross-examination.
Boss' Sister on Stand.
 "Call Miss Ruef."
 A "murmur" arose from the crowd which caused the bailiffs to call for order.
 "You are the sister of A. Ruef, and have been doing his stenographic work for several years?"
 The application of the United Railroads for a franchise was shown to her, and she was asked if she had typewritten it.
 "No, sir."
 "Do you see it before?"
 "Not till yesterday when you showed it to me."
 "That's all," declared Honey and Attorney Rogers motioned for her to leave the chair, which she did and immediately left the courtroom.

TAFT-CORTELYOU CLASH ON AGAIN

President Roosevelt Advised Latter's Lieutenants Are Too Industrious.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
 Washington, Oct. 2.—Fresh reports of a clash between the Taft and Cortelyou presidential ambitions are afloat. They emanate this time from Canton, where it is said Arthur I. Voorles, Secretary Taft's manager, had a long conference with President Roosevelt and made it clear to him that the Taft men did not like the "political behavior" of Secretary Cortelyou and his lieutenants. Especially was it made plain that the friendliness shown to Cortelyou by the eighth Virginia district was distasteful to the Taft men, as was also First Assistant Postmaster General Hitchcock's activity in the south and the constant rumors that Cortelyou was laying plans to bag the New York delegation. Voorles is said to have urged on the president the need for a better understanding among the Roosevelt men.

 tained all his former dealers and operators.
No "Direct Evidence."
 When the agitation was first begun to close the gambling houses Sheriff Beattie explained that he couldn't act without "direct evidence." District Attorney Hedges, whose brother, State Senator Hedges, is attorney for the Milwaukee club, also declared that he could do nothing without evidence.
 Former Sheriff Tom Word of Multnomah county who closed gambling in Portland in just one hour, declares that direct evidence is merely an excuse—that common reputation is enough to warrant closing such a resort.
 The recent residents of Milwaukee are up in arms over the reopening of the club, although the city government as before is in favor of allowing the hell to operate freely. Mayor Schindler of Milwaukee who built the clubhouse, has said that it is a benefit to the town as it pays a big license for gambling and liquor selling.

CANADA WANTS ITS PULPWOOD

Government Requested to Stop Indiscriminate Exportation of Material.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
 Ottawa, Oct. 2.—The government is taking into consideration the question of the exportation of pulpwood, and it is expected that at the next session of parliament a measure putting a stop to the sale of such wood outside the country will be passed. The matter has been forced upon the attention of the administration owing to the tremendous imports that have been made upon the pulpwood resources of the country in recent years. The drain for both the home market and for the foreign market has become so great as to alarm those who are thoroughly alive to the situation. If it should continue on its present scale it will be a serious matter in the near future. The government has been urged from many quarters to take action to prevent the absolute decline of the pulpwood resources, and it is convinced that something ought to be done, and that without delay.
 It is understood that the state of affairs is somewhat analogous to that which prevailed in Ontario when the unrestricted exportation of pine logs was permitted. At that time the pine was carried away in its unmanufactured state, and the danger of the complete stripping of the province was imminent. The federal government tried to correct the trouble complained of by placing an export duty on logs. But this move was not efficacious. Absolute prohibition of the exportation of logs was therefore determined upon, and the result has been satisfactory in that it has conserved the interests of Canadians. The pulpwood situation is very similar to that which prevailed in the case of logs, and it is firmly believed that the remedy which was applied to the one problem with such success ought to be applied to the other. That the government is alive to the necessity for action is well known, and that it will propose legislation at the coming session is conceded. In anticipation of the new law the pulp trade will shortly meet to discuss the matter and to advise with the government.

MURDERED MAN.

 now it is worse since they have arrested Borah and brought Steunenberg's name in.
 Q. You know Orchard?
 A. Yes, sir.
 Q. How long have you been acquainted with him?
 A. Five or six years.
 Q. You didn't see anyone at the time this bomb went off?
 A. Not a soul.
 Q. Nor hear anyone?
 A. No, sir.
 Q. As you went home, did you go along the street by Romig's place when you came home last night?
 A. I came up a little different than I usually do. I came up by Wisdom's drug store and then on down to Third, and then on down by Castle's and over across in front of Romig's house, and then on home different than I ordinarily go. I usually go down Fourth street. At the time I didn't think about this fellow when I was going home. I just happened to go that way. Of course I have heard some things lately in regard to this. It has been reported, as you know well, I have had a chance to close the gambling up here. I mean the state is interested. You know how it is in the rest of the state. Many talked to me about this thing, but I don't think there was anybody connected with it (probably the gamblers) who would do anything. Still, there are individuals that are pretty radical and cranky.
 Q. That old person that you saw down there is the only one that you have any suspicions of?
 A. Yes.

MOONLESS JUPITER WILL BE OBSERVED

(United Press Leased Wire.)
 Paris, Oct. 2.—One of the rarest of astronomical phenomena—an apparently moonless Jupiter—will be witnessed tomorrow evening by a party of French observers now in India for that purpose. At ordinary times four satellites are visible through a telescope, but for 16 minutes tomorrow evening all will vanish, three being behind the planet and one in front. It is believed that this will afford an exceptional occasion for the study of Jupiter.
 The phenomena can be witnessed only in Asia and Australia.

REALTY DEALERS FORM EXCHANGE

New Organization Comes to Life at Board's Annual Banquet.

WILL BOOST FOR STREET PAVEMENT

Members and Out of Town Guests Review City's Accomplishments During Past Year—Portland to Be Greatest City in Northwest.

For the third time this year the Portland Realty board met last night in the banquet hall of Richard's hotel and enjoyed an excellent dinner, listened to several stirring speeches from both members of the organization and invited guests and closed the evening by organizing the Portland Real Estate exchange.
 Following the serving of coffee and cigars, J. O. Rountree, chairman of the banquet committee, introduced W. H. Moore, president of the board, as toastmaster of the evening. Mr. Moore complimented the organization on the progress it had made and declared that much of the material progress that Portland is now enjoying can be directly traced to the energy and sagacity of the city's real estate dealers.
Manning Praises Work.
 He then called upon District Attorney John Manning, one of the guests of honor, who paid a high tribute to the splendid body of men that compose the realty board. "Almost every new manufacturing enterprise, many of the handsome business blocks put up in the past two years and a majority of the new mercantile establishments in Portland are due to the untiring efforts of some one of the city's realty dealers," declared Mr. Manning. He complimented the board upon the personality of its president, saying, "W. H. Moore has proved his worth and deserves the respect of very resident of this city. When misfortune recently befell him the closing of his bank, he turned over to the receiver his private fortune, thus manifesting a spirit of honesty and integrity rarely met with."
 Mr. Manning's praise of Mr. Moore was heartily applauded as were several similar references made by other speakers.
"No More Than Expected."
 L. L. Dean, of San Francisco, who was formerly a Portland architect, was called upon and responded in a dapper vein. "Portland," said he, "has done no more than I expected of it when I left the city a year ago. Had it done less, I would have been disappointed. It has become a great city and is destined to attain a much larger growth. It forms one natural site on the north Pacific coast for a splendid city."
 Following the addresses, the question of establishing a real estate exchange came up for discussion. When it was finally moved to establish the exchange, it carried unanimously. M. G. Griffin, E. S. Jackson, Frank Sinnott and A. F. Swenson were named as a committee to work out the details connected with the establishment and organization of the exchange. The suggestion was made by E. J. Daly that the committee correspond with other coast cities and ascertain the manner in which these exchanges are conducted.
 The board pledged itself to work for reform in street paving.
 A number of short speeches were made by members of the board expressing confidence in good realty market throughout the fall and coming winter.
