

THE JOURNAL

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER. PUBLISHED BY C. S. JACKSON. Published every evening (except Sunday) and every Sunday morning at the Journal Building, Fifth and Yamhill streets, Portland, Or.

Subscription Terms by mail to any address in the United States, Canada or Mexico. DAILY. One year, $5.00; One month, $0.50.

CHILD VICTIM OF THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

ITS friends seek explanation of why there is a movement all over the country against the liquor traffic, let them read the news from Canby. A 13-year-old boy dead from drinking, and drinking because a saloonkeeper violated the law, is an indictment of the business for which there is no defense.

The liquor that killed this boy was sold by a Canby saloon man to either this or other minors. Most of them were under 16. It was a sale distinctly and carefully prohibited by law.

Can liquor dealers stand face to face with this Canby indictment and longer wonder that sentiment for abolishment of saloons and keepers of saloons is sweeping forward with a gathering force all over the country?

The Union Pacific in 1897 obtained a charter from the new state of Utah giving it the right and power to "acquire by lease, purchase, consolidation, ownership of capital stock or otherwise, branches, extensions and connecting or auxiliary lines within or without this state."

Manfully, this is a wrong exercise of power on the part of a state legislature. And each state should have the power to nullify and render inoperative, within its borders, such a power granted by another and a distant state.

ALLITERACY IN THE UNITED STATES. THOUGH GOVERNMENT statistics on many subjects are not as accurate as is generally assumed, they are all we have to go by, and so are taken as correct, and thus we consider its figures on the relative illiteracy of different states.

THE NEW CHINA. CHINA WILL be a very interesting country for the student of current events to watch for an indefinite period to come.

THE PROCLAMATION by the dowager empress the first of this month declaring a constitutional monarchy and announcing the design of a future parliamentary system, is itself significant of the movement that has begun.

THE PICTURE is the sitting room of a family home in the evening. If in winter, there is a blazing fire and the lights are bright. With the parents, in that room, is every child in the home, whether one or a dozen.

THE PRESS of both continents became interested in the visit of King Edward VII to his newly related majesty of Spain during the early summer of the year, but failed to discover any special political result of their friendly hobnobbing though all considered it of unusual importance.

schoolhouses and textbooks are being prepared. When this work is under way it is proposed to establish local self-government in the 18 provinces, each to have elective provincial parliaments, subject to governors appointed by the emperor.

But there will be other very important changes and developments along with these. Railroads will be built and rivers and harbors improved, and great progress will be made industrially and commercially.

STATE CHARTERS TO CORPORATIONS. IT WOULD seem that some limitation should be placed on the power of a railroad or other corporation chartered in one state to do whatever it pleased in all the other states under that charter.

A WISE YOUNG MAN. THE DALLES Optimist publishes the following advertisement: "Wanted, by young man of 20, at present employed in clerical capacity in Portland, job on ranch. Has had no experience, but is quick learner and in fairly good physical condition."

REVELATIONS OF THE KING'S CONFIDENCES. THE PRESS of both continents became interested in the visit of King Edward VII to his newly related majesty of Spain during the early summer of the year, but failed to discover any special political result of their friendly hobnobbing though all considered it of unusual importance.

TWO HOMES. THE PICTURE is the sitting room of a family home in the evening. If in winter, there is a blazing fire and the lights are bright. With the parents, in that room, is every child in the home, whether one or a dozen.

THE POWER of a truth depends less on the force of the setting than on the character of the source. From the Missouri Mersey. Floyd Ewackhamme, a youth of 17, with a spear in the head of a dead fish, was taken from the top of the foot, having swam clear through.

HEROIC. From the Philadelphia Bulletin. Said she: "I shall marry a hero. Not from any other need ever apply. He must flinch not, whatever the danger. He ready to dare to die." Now, she was a young girl, was ugly. Cross-looking—so everyone knows. She'll marry the first one who asks her, for a hero he'd be to propose.

HEROIC. From the Philadelphia Bulletin. Said she: "I shall marry a hero. Not from any other need ever apply. He must flinch not, whatever the danger. He ready to dare to die." Now, she was a young girl, was ugly. Cross-looking—so everyone knows. She'll marry the first one who asks her, for a hero he'd be to propose.

HEROIC. From the Philadelphia Bulletin. Said she: "I shall marry a hero. Not from any other need ever apply. He must flinch not, whatever the danger. He ready to dare to die." Now, she was a young girl, was ugly. Cross-looking—so everyone knows. She'll marry the first one who asks her, for a hero he'd be to propose.

HEROIC. From the Philadelphia Bulletin. Said she: "I shall marry a hero. Not from any other need ever apply. He must flinch not, whatever the danger. He ready to dare to die." Now, she was a young girl, was ugly. Cross-looking—so everyone knows. She'll marry the first one who asks her, for a hero he'd be to propose.

HEROIC. From the Philadelphia Bulletin. Said she: "I shall marry a hero. Not from any other need ever apply. He must flinch not, whatever the danger. He ready to dare to die." Now, she was a young girl, was ugly. Cross-looking—so everyone knows. She'll marry the first one who asks her, for a hero he'd be to propose.

and Montana, though showing up well, be behind Washington and Oregon? It is further disclosed that we have in this country one full grown man who cannot read or write in every nine voters, but we suppose this must include the blacks. Aside from them about four fifths of our illiterates, or their parents, were born in the more illiterate countries abroad. It will surprise some to learn that there is more illiteracy in the country than in the cities.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

is more fruitful of good, more propitious for the republic, more auspicious with promise for the future? There is another picture. It is nightfall at Canby. A dozen boys from as many homes roam the vicinity. Though 16 years of age and under, they repair to the back door of a saloon and with a sum contributed by all, purchase two quarts of whiskey. In their homes there are vacant chairs, and the parents are oblivious to the whereabouts of those absent. The boys drink until one is stupefied and left by the wayside, while the remainder, rendered reckless by drink, engage in acts of hoodlumism. At midnight the stupefied boy is thrown into a hay mow and left alone. In the morning he is dead—though only a child of 13, murdered by drink.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

coasts and the land forces of Spain would act with those of Great Britain, which would be at the disposition of Spain in case of necessity. The obligation of Spain consists in putting its arsenals in order and fortifying its ports. The right of action of Spain in Morocco is fully recognized and if opposed by any European nation Spain is to find Great Britain at her back.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

requires us to say that the Harriman officials have always contended publicly for one large terminal to accommodate all roads entering the city. It is fortunate they take this position, for holding a majority of the stock of the Terminal company they can, at any rate accommodate other roads. The United Frontiers will soon finish their Front street section and with terminal connections they will give the long looked for relief to the industries located in the southern portion of the city.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

SMALL'S SURRENDER. MR SMALL, the deposed president of the telegraphers' national union, says, he will not try to retain his place, but will step down and out and will later make a statement explaining his surrender. He may have better reasons to offer than he has so far disclosed, but if not, he will not convince anybody that he has displayed the right qualities for a man in his position.

A Sermon for Today. Worry. By Henry F. Cope. "Fret not thyself; it tendeth only to evil doing."—Ps. xxxvii:8 (R. V.)

Worry is wicked because it causes weakness. It robs the life of its powers; it tawards our possibilities. Anxiety is wrong, not because it indicates infidelity as to the wise and loving providence overruling life, but because it is a criminal waste of life's forces. It prevents our doing our own work, and it irritates and hinders others.

Worry is a matter of outlook and health. It depends, first of all, on whether you are going to take all the facts into account and look on life as a whole, or see only the dismal possibilities. Then it depends on whether you will be continually in the blue mood that may arise from depression or from indignation until you have become color blind to all but the blue shadows.

Worry is a matter of outlook and health. It depends, first of all, on whether you are going to take all the facts into account and look on life as a whole, or see only the dismal possibilities. Then it depends on whether you will be continually in the blue mood that may arise from depression or from indignation until you have become color blind to all but the blue shadows.

Worry is a matter of outlook and health. It depends, first of all, on whether you are going to take all the facts into account and look on life as a whole, or see only the dismal possibilities. Then it depends on whether you will be continually in the blue mood that may arise from depression or from indignation until you have become color blind to all but the blue shadows.

Worry is a matter of outlook and health. It depends, first of all, on whether you are going to take all the facts into account and look on life as a whole, or see only the dismal possibilities. Then it depends on whether you will be continually in the blue mood that may arise from depression or from indignation until you have become color blind to all but the blue shadows.

Worry is a matter of outlook and health. It depends, first of all, on whether you are going to take all the facts into account and look on life as a whole, or see only the dismal possibilities. Then it depends on whether you will be continually in the blue mood that may arise from depression or from indignation until you have become color blind to all but the blue shadows.

Worry is a matter of outlook and health. It depends, first of all, on whether you are going to take all the facts into account and look on life as a whole, or see only the dismal possibilities. Then it depends on whether you will be continually in the blue mood that may arise from depression or from indignation until you have become color blind to all but the blue shadows.

Worry is a matter of outlook and health. It depends, first of all, on whether you are going to take all the facts into account and look on life as a whole, or see only the dismal possibilities. Then it depends on whether you will be continually in the blue mood that may arise from depression or from indignation until you have become color blind to all but the blue shadows.

Worry is a matter of outlook and health. It depends, first of all, on whether you are going to take all the facts into account and look on life as a whole, or see only the dismal possibilities. Then it depends on whether you will be continually in the blue mood that may arise from depression or from indignation until you have become color blind to all but the blue shadows.

Worry is a matter of outlook and health. It depends, first of all, on whether you are going to take all the facts into account and look on life as a whole, or see only the dismal possibilities. Then it depends on whether you will be continually in the blue mood that may arise from depression or from indignation until you have become color blind to all but the blue shadows.

Worry is a matter of outlook and health. It depends, first of all, on whether you are going to take all the facts into account and look on life as a whole, or see only the dismal possibilities. Then it depends on whether you will be continually in the blue mood that may arise from depression or from indignation until you have become color blind to all but the blue shadows.