KINDS OF CLOTHES.

Americans as Viewed by London Tailor—Men of Other Countries.

From the Tailor and Cutter.

A man's dress invariably proclaims who and what he is; it is an index to his character, his tastes, and his nationality; and without making a too abstruse study it is possible to indicate those features which proclaim the nationality of the wearer.

Of course there is an aristocracy of the nations who are difficult to distinguish except by some peculiarity of face or figure. Their clothing is refined and tasteful and leads one to believe that their garments are London made, as they are free from those glaring peculiarities which characterize the products of other countries.

The American's garments are generally quite two sizes too large for him, the collar of his coat is exceedingly narrow and the shoulders and back excessively wide. His jackets are often extremely long and his trousers pegtops finished with raised seams. His favorite garments are the lounge and Chesterfield, and these are often finished in some extraordinary way which he fancies to be original.

The Frenchman is dressy, his garments are close fitting and decidedly "waisty." He favors the frock and the morning coat, which he has finished with as much ornamentation as possible. Silk facings, braided edges and fantastic flaps are all characteristic of his dress, while he also pays a good deal of attention to his hat, tie and cuffs.

The German is in many instances a modified American. He likes plenty of room, especially about the chest, which part of his anatomy he delights to make much of; consequently there is often a seam up the front of his coat from the waist. In cut his garments are angular, and in style he favors the morning coat and lounge. There is a lack of personality about his attire, and one can invariably detect the result of his military training in the uniformity of his garments.

The Spaniard is a modified form of the Frenchman. His garments are tasteful and neat. If the weather is suitable he discards a vest, and his jackets are close fitting and finished with a low roll. Generally speaking, there is less peculiarity to note about the Spaniard's dress than with many others.

"The Austrian and Hungarian participate in the characteristics of the German, but are more tasteful in the cut and finish, suggesting a skillful blending of French and German notions. On the other hand, the Italian type is a Germanized French style, so that you get more of the artistic finish of the French in their clothing than you find in the Austrian or Hungarian.

The Norwegian and Dane are seldom distinguishable from the Englishman as far as their clothes are concerned, except it be in a preciseness that is apt to suggest stiffness in place of the ease and grace which mark the English garments.

The Colonial is invariably attired in utilitarian garb, a tweed lounge suit in a modified English style, cut for comfort and made up for strength. He has no desire for show and cares little for decoration, so that he is rarely seen in a frock or morning coat.
