TREE FROM HANDSPIKE. West Virginia Memorial of Jim Martin's Enlistment for Mexican War. From the New York Sun. "There is a river birch tree on the banks of the Pond Fork branch of the Little Coal river in Boone county, West Virginia," said M. C. Eldred of Madison, West Virginia, "and it would go hard with any man who put an ax to it. That tree has a story. "When the Mexican war began in 1816, a recruiting officer visited a lumber camp in the vicinity of Madison, seeking enlistments from the sturdy woodsmen who were at work there. Among them was a giant lumberman named Jim Martin. "He was using a handspike made from a river birch sapling recently cut, and still green. Eager to go to the front, he thrust his handspike deep into the soft soil of the river bank and went away with the recruiting officer. "The handspike Jim Martin used was too big and heavy for any of his fellows to handle, and it was left stuck where he had jabbed it into the ground. The next spring it was noticed that it was putting forth green shoots, showing that it had rooted in the ground. "It was left undisturbed, and it grew to be a great tree, and it stands today on the spot where the patriot Jim Martin thrust it into the earth as a battered handspike 61 years ago. Jim Martin was killed in battle, and his bones lie somewhere on Mexican ground, but he has his monument in this still sound and vigorous tree, which is a revered landmark in all that country."
