

GRUB STAKE IS DECLARED LEGALDe Haven Decides Mine
Owner Must Share with Prospector.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
San Francisco, Oct. 29.—Judge De Haven this morning handed down a decision whereby H. Cascadon was awarded a one-third interest in mining claims in Alaska aggregating in value about $100,000. This decision is of great interest to mining men as it involves the transaction commonly known as "grubstaking."

Cascadon was authorized by George F. Dunbar, Charles Scott and J. Bennett to locate mining claims for them in Alaska. Cascadon located three valuable claims on Cleary creek, which he turned over to Dunbar, Scott and Bennett, with the understanding that they would record the claims. This they neglected to do until the original staking of the claims was declared void because of lapse of time. Afterward they recorded the claims in their own names.

BARRETT'S FUNERAL
TO BE HELD TOMORROWDeath Overtakes Newspaper
Man at San Francisco
Without Warning.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
San Francisco, Oct. 29.—The remains of John P. Barrett, news editor of the San Francisco Examiner, who died suddenly on Monday, will be interred tomorrow afternoon.

Barrett was taken out of life with hardly an instant's warning. He arose from his usual time, sent some orders to the office over the telephone and made preparations for a trip to Oakland. Near the corner of Eddy street and Van Ness avenue he paused to exchange news with friends.

As he waited at the corner he met Joseph M. Cumming, secretary of the Mechanics' Institute library, whom he had long known. Suddenly the car he was in was struck by a car coming from the other direction. Barrett was thrown from the car and landed on his head. He was taken to a hospital, but he died before he could be taken to the hospital.

Barrett was a man of great energy and was one of the most prominent men in the city. He was a member of the board of directors of the Mechanics' Institute and was also a member of the board of directors of the San Francisco Public Library.

HOT SCHOOL WAR
RAGES IN TACOMA

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Tacoma, Wash., Oct. 29.—One of the most bitter and determined fights ever made against a city school superintendent in Tacoma is now on against Superintendent A. H. Yoder, employed a year ago on a contract for three years. The board of education and also the teachers and principals thought the city very fortunate in securing him, owing to his reputation as a lecturer and as a student of adolescence. But immediately after his appointment he was accused of having been raised against him promises to be thrashed out at the coming school election, making it one of the hottest school fights in the history of the city.

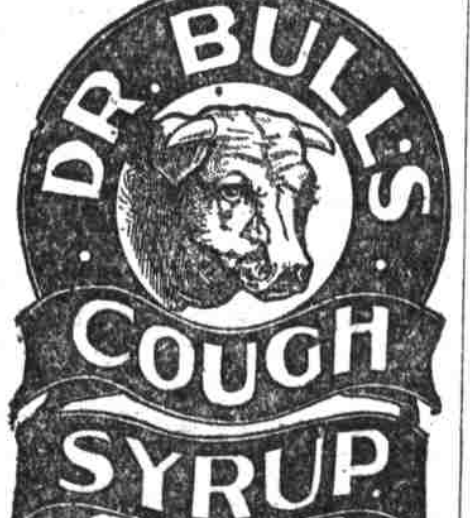

Yoder has friends who claim he has brought the school corps up to the best state of efficiency it has ever reached.

TIME CHECK PAYABLE IN CASH IS GOOD

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Olympia, Wash., Oct. 29.—In the case of state of Washington, appellant, vs. Chehalis Furniture company, respondent, the judgment of the superior court of Lewis county, sustaining a demurrer to the information, is affirmed. The company was charged with issuing time checks to employees contrary to the statute so prohibiting. The company demurred on the ground that the information in the information did not constitute a violation of the law and the superior court sustained the lower court, holding that time checks payable in cash are good. Their use did not involve the evils of the company store system.

Murderer to Insane Ward.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Tacoma, Wash., Oct. 29.—Joe Carbone, an Italian, sentenced at Rome to 10 years in the federal penitentiary at McNeil's island, has been found to be insane and ordered sent to the insane ward of the penitentiary at Walla Walla.

Babies and Habits.

The mother of a young child has enough problems to meet to keep a general in the regular army thoroughly employed. She must not only attend to hygiene and sanitation, feeding, clothing, exercise, medicines and emergency duties without mishap, and also preserve an absolutely equal poise of mind. Moreover, she must on no account dwell in conversation upon her child's peculiarities, his habits or his ailments, for if she does she will be an object of amusement and criticism to her friends.

Thus it becomes very difficult to be a young mother who is intensely interested in caring for her child and absolutely debarrained from manifesting the fact.

There is no lack of advice in all quarters, on all questions, too much advice, one would sometimes think, for in the multitude of counselors there is much foolishness, even if Solomon didn't say so.

Nevertheless, a word of advice to young mothers on the little things that may be a big thing in infantile life as in maturity, is the question of forming habits.

Those that we make in after years we make with our eyes open to their advantages or their dangers.

If we are really sane, human beings, we know what we are about when we make so simple a habit as drinking coffee for breakfast or wearing lighter or heavier underwear in the winter a part of our habitual routine. For these things we are directly responsible.

Yet it is a question whether mothers realize the far-reaching hold that some simple baby habits have.

Take the case of the abominable known as the "pacifier." It is a convenient, and, some think, a harmless substitute for the feeding bottle, to be popped into a baby's mouth every time he whimpers. Into his mouth goes the rubber thing. He has a little indignation, gas from undigested food, pressing upon the stomach, and then, again, the rubber thing is stuck into his mouth.

When he gets a little older he begins to consider it necessary to have something in his mouth at all times.

Gum chewing girls are not pleasant to look upon, but may not the mothers look upon their own children with the same habit with a pacifier? How about tobacco chewing men?

We are sufficiently restless, we Americans. We have a national habit of unrest. We lack repose. It is no more necessary to us than it is to the monkey to turn our front lawns into briar patches.

A baby is at the mercy of his elders, but why should they consider it necessary for him to have his mouth constantly occupied? Out upon the pacifier. It is the baby's body or mind that seeks occupation—not his mouth.

A wise philosopher once said, "I make nothing a necessity to myself." Why? Because what we make a necessity becomes a burden and an annoyance to us. We are miserable without these artificial conditions which we have created.

This is not to say that some things are not necessities. Food, clothing, warmth and shelter are needs of the present human life, and the mental stimulus may be quite as important.

But the point is that these things we do not ourselves make a necessity to us. They are consistent with our bodily life as we live it in the world today.

We have ourselves to live with all our lives, and whether we shall be cheerfully human and companionable to ourselves, or restless and uneasy, fretful or peevish, depends in large measure upon the habits which we ourselves form.

Surely anything which tends toward restlessness and lack of repose is a bad habit for Americans to acquire.

So I say again, and cheerfully lay this further burden upon the memory and heart of the much-advised young mother—don't give the baby a pacifier. Find what is the matter with him, and do what you can to remove the cause of the fretting—but don't stick a tantalizing, unhygienic, distasteful piece of rubber into his mouth every time he utters a request for attention.

Help Wanted.

Help Wanted—There is an opening in Portland for a bright, energetic woman—or two or three of them—who would open an office for supplying housekeepers to those who seek them, and who would go about the matter with modern, progressive, up to date methods.

We very much need an intelligence office that will supply intelligence on both sides, and one thing which might be useful in this: Let the applicant for a position as household helper and the employer sign a contract, stating the number of hours, work to be done, the amount of wages to be paid, the day and evenings out, the care of children, is this desired, and the concessions in respect to Sundays.

This would put the whole matter on a business basis. There would be no more talk of treating the helper like one of the family, or as if she were an equal. This is a snobbish and unsatisfactory method, as every housekeeper knows.

The person employed may be an equal or she may not be, or she may be very much more than an equal. That has nothing to do with the question. The employer is paying for her work, and any self-respecting girl or woman would prefer a simple, businesslike, workmanlike agreement as to how much work for how much pay, leaving the question of social status entirely outside. A worker in the home is entitled to exactly the same courtesy and should expect to be bound by the same rigid exactions as the cashier or the stenographer in a business office.

The business girl recognizes the advantages of such an arrangement. Her ties, her friendships, her social life are entirely apart and distinct from her business life. So it should be with an employee at home.

If we had such an employment office as this, where contracts were signed on both sides, it would put the matter on a distinctly different basis from that which it occupies at present. A breach of contract would nullify it. Instead of calling upon her helper, however, for extra service when company was invited or some mischance upset the regular order, the employer might be obliged to engage extra help or to do the extra work herself, just as happens in a business office under similar chances. It would still be possible by mutual arrangement to perform extra duties, not too onerous, at one time, or to permit them to be lightened at another.

If in addition to a contract basis for housework we had a working girl's home, where those who wished to do so might live cheaply and comfortably during the time that they were out of employment, as the graduate nurses do, and where helpers could be engaged at short notice, we should begin to get at the matter sensibly and profitably.

It is of course more difficult to get help here than it is in cities that have a large foreign immigration, or in cities where wages are lower at other branches of work. In a Portland girl from $7 to $10 a week in factories, where hours are shorter, duties are and Nerves.

When the health is run down from overwork, overstudy or from whatever cause, a good tonic is needed.

But sometimes what is mistaken for simple debility is a symptom of a more serious disorder, anaemia, perhaps, or a breaking down of the nervous system. By taking a tonic that is also a specific for many disorders of the blood and nerves the threatening disease may be prevented. That is what was done in the case of Mrs. Ora Ford of 1093 Washington Boulevard, Chicago, Ill., who was undoubtedly in the early stages of anaemia before Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured her. She says:

"I was completely run down in health for about six years. My blood was thin and poor and I had a great deal of trouble with my stomach and kidneys. My appetite was poor and I had no desire for food. What I ate distressed me. I had always been troubled with sick headaches which came on as often as three or four times a week. I also had dizzy spells, my breath was short and I frequently had pains in my side. I had no ambition or desire to do anything. I became so pale and thin that I looked terrible. My friends thought I was going into consumption."

"After I had tried several kinds of medicine that did me no good whatever I read of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in a newspaper and decided to give them a trial. I began picking up a little after taking about two boxes of the pills and noticed that I was getting an appetite. I gradually got stronger, the dizzy spells left and my color came back. The headaches ceased to be so frequent or so severe. I can now recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for troubles due to poor and impure blood."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

heavier, payment certain and Sundays entirely free. Houseworkers command from $20 to $35 a month, have an opportunity to improve their own washing, have board and lodging free. It is certainly easy to see that the houseworker has the better situation in regard to money. When the employer is more difficult to obtain than at present.

Bemoaning the fact, and calling upon one's neighbors to bear witness, seems to do little toward remedying the situation.

An intelligently managed and systematic contract basis for employment might do something toward a solution. It would certainly find favor among employers. The only question is whether the number of applicants for work would be sufficient to keep such a business running.

However, if girls knew that they

EXTRA SESSION
IN WASHINGTONGovernor Mead Will Call It
If Direct Primary Law
Is Killed.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Olympia, Wash., Oct. 29.—If an action to be brought in the supreme court within the next week to invalidate the new direct primary law of the state is successful, Governor Mead will at once call a special session of the legislature to pass a new law to meet the requirements of the decision of the supreme court.

While no official announcement has been made by the governor to this effect, close friends quote him freely to that effect, and admit having talked with him on the subject.

One phase of the primary law—that requiring candidates for salaried offices to pay a fee—was before the superior court of Thurston county yesterday. Judge Linn pointed out to Attorney Gordon Mackay, who attacked the law on this point, that he was practically in the position of arguing both for and against the constitutionality of the law in this case, and it was then agreed that proceedings should be commenced which would bring before the court the entire act.

Judge Linn held in favor of the law on the point raised, and announced that he would hold the same way when the other questions should be presented to him today. He explained this in advance, saying that in such large questions as this, when the case was certain to be taken to the supreme court, he thought it well for the lower courts to hold the law constitutional, leaving it to the supreme court to settle.

Proceedings in mandamus will be begun today and Attorney Mackay hopes to have the record in the supreme court on appeal within one week.

The strong point relied upon by Attorney Mackay is the alleged defective title of the primary election law. He argues that the law in effect elects a judge and superior court judges, in that the names of only the men who are nominated are to be printed on the election ballots. This, to practical workingmen, elects the judges at the September primaries, as there will be no names of opposition judicial candidates on the November ballots.

The attorney general will appear in the supreme court in defense of the law.

Capital Case to Highest Court.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Olympia, Wash., Oct. 29.—The supreme court has granted a writ of error to the United States supreme court in the suit brought by the Sylvester heirs against the state of Washington to recover possession of the old territorial capital grounds deeded to the territory by Edmund Sylvester, founder of Olympia.

Metzger & Co., jewelers and opticians, 242 Washington street, would be engaged in strict business principles, and if they had a contract specifically naming their duties and their privileges, housework might attract some desirable workers who now shun it.
