At the Wednesday afternoon meeting of Central W. C. T. U., Mrs. H. E. Hoper gave an interesting talk, "Impressions of the State Convention," followed by a number of the delegates. A reception to the new members will be given Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. C. L. Kelly, 826 Kelly street. Arrangements were made for the lecture work of Miss Rose Davison, national secretary-treasurer, who will be in Multnomah county November 1 to 14. Next Wednesday will be the monthly social and tea under the charge of Mrs. H. J. Shane.

Funeral rites were held over the remains of John T. McDonnell at 9 o'clock this morning by Rev. W. A. Daly at the family residence, 373 Ross street, followed by requiem mass at St. Mary's, Williams avenue and Stanton street. Interment was in the Riverview cemetery. Mr. McDonnell, a very well-known business man of Portland, associated with Dan McAllen in the department store firm of McAllen & McDonnell for nearly 30 years, died at St. Vincent's hospital Tuesday, after six weeks' suffering from cancer of the stomach.

Kiwanis council, Degree of Ponca hontas, of the Improved Order of Red Men gave one of their popular entertainments at Auditorium hall last evening. The committee in charge was composed of Mrs. George B. Frank, Mrs. Fred E. Chard and Mrs. A. J. O'Brien. These entertainments, which are given with a varied program monthly, are becoming popular with the members of the council and the brothers of the order. The next will be given November 27.

Deputy Sheriff Harry Bulger and Jacob Froebel last night arrested C. M. Webster, charged by his wife with non-support. The complaint was made October 24, the wife alleging that he deserted her and their 13-year-old girl, leaving them in destitute circumstances. She also says that she has been abused by her husband and by his brother. Webster was found at the Wilbur hotel on Stark street, in East Portland. He is a laborer, 37 years of age. His bond has been fixed at $250.

At the Pure Food show in our city there were 8,000 cups served of the 100 per cent pure cereal coffee and everybody is talking about it. The people liked it and children just loved it. Do you know why? Because it was good. One package of Golden Grain Granules will make gallons of the most delightful cereal coffee. The only thing that it won't with it is the name cereal coffee, it is as good or better than 40-cent coffee. Try it and you will say so, too.

The Teachers' Progressive club, an organization of the teachers of Multnomah county, will this winter take a correspondence course of Shakespeare and the University of Oregon. The details of the course of study will be explained by Professor Howe of the university, who will meet the club Saturday at 10 a. m. in the Arts and Crafts studio, 446 Washington street.

An inspection trip through Oregon territory tributary to transportation is being made by M. G. Murphy, general traveling passenger agent of the Canadian Pacific, whose headquarters are at Winnipeg. He has returned from a trip through the state to Ashland, and will visit other points. Oregon's beautiful and prosperous conditions have made a strongly favorable impression upon him.

Ground has been broken for the new Central Christian church on East Twentieth and Salmon streets, for the residence of Rev. J. F. Ghorumley, pastor. Excavations for St. Francis Catholic church under the bridge of the University of Oregon. The details of the course of study will be explained by Professor Howe of the university, who will meet the club Saturday at 10 a. m. in the Arts and Crafts studio, 446 Washington street.

One and a third fare for the round trip has been made by the Harriman railroads in Oregon for the Y. M. C. A. excursion. The trip will leave December 6, the Portland Horse show which opens November 7; the Wool Growers' convention at the Dalles, November 12, and the Oregon Union convention meeting in Portland, November 19.

A wool scouring syndicate is negotiating through the Portland board of trade for a location in some Oregon town where conditions are favorable for the wool cleaning business. It is said that if the commercial organization of any town desiring such an industry will address a communication to the Portland board of trade the matter will be given due consideration.

WEIRD SCENES ARE ENACTED AT Y. M. C. A.

Ghosts and rattling bones, scenes from sulphurous nether regions and an apparition with horns and tail made Halloween a night of terror for the members and friends last night at the social which was enjoyed by a large audience.

Following exercises in the gymnasium a literary program was given in the auditorium. Those who participated in the program were Frau Becker, Irving Lutz, Miss Cornelia Barker, Miss Cora Shaver and W. A. Coughlin. Musical numbers were given by Clifford's orchestra.

THE PLAY.

By J. F. S.

To the average westerner the western play of today has become a joke. He may go to see some of the plays because they are so bad they are funny. Others, as for instance Mr. Faver's "Squaw Man," may attract primarily through the star or the lavishness of scenic display. But at the Helig last night was given a drama of the west which is the finest, truest, most interesting offering of the present rather young Portland season.

"The Three of Us" was written by a girl, Rachael Crothers. Every line speaks of the woman; the exceeding delicacy with which the strong situations are handled, the very situations themselves so different in their conception; the character of the boy, Clem Maccheneay, who in one very short night turns the corner from boyhood into manhood and gives the story its plot; and most of all, the dramatic faith of Rhy Maccheneay, a faith in himself and those about her so exquisite that it is of a masculine mind could have conceived it.

The story is eminently simple and covers 24 hours in a Utah mining camp. There are no confusing sub-plots, with are concerned from the first only with the Maccheneays and their fortunes.

There are three of them, Rhy, the oldest and the big sister, Clem, the boy who has come to the point where he wants to fight his own battles and is so blinded by the desire to do so that he fails to see that the first duty of a man is to fight the battles of others; and "Sonnie," the little brother.

They are left alone with an old shell of a house, $1,000 and a mining claim. It is Rhy's task to see that the boys grow up into men of honor and character. Clem has reached the age that all normal boys come to—a time when their parents feel that suddenly and without their being able to assign any tangible reason for it that the boy has grown away from them. He has in his water for the first time in his life. He either swims back to them safely or he drifts farther and farther away. It is a time that appeals most forcibly to a woman's imagination.

Clem wants money and in order to secure his independence sells the secret of a mining claim to Louis Berresford, one of Rhy's suitors. The exposure of the secret disgraces Rhy and her lover, Stephen Townley. Berresford compromises Rhy and raises what he has done, insists that she marry him.

It is in the third act that the splendid scene between Rhy and Clem upon which the outcome of the story depends, occurs. Rhy, disgraced, almost discouraged, insulted and accused by Stephen Townley, who has just learned of her secret, is alone with Clem in the room of her home. Clem, carrying his bag, steals out of his bedroom door to catch the early morning train for Salt Lake when Rhy sees him and catches him.

Clem had heard nothing of the occurrence in Berresford's rooms the evening before, he is bent only on escaping from the dreadful mining camp to "have his fling" at fortune of the city. Rhy, who has just learned of his secret, argues with him to reveal the secret that it was he who sold Stephen's secret to Berresford. Rhy's efforts to induce him to reveal the secret are in vain, until suddenly she tells him of what happened in Berresford's rooms the night before—of the fact that Clem had told and sold her secret and that it is too grave a thing for her to have to fight out alone.

In an instant all Clem's inherent weakness, his selfishness, and his pride, his chivalry. He stays to fight for Rhy and the battle is won.

There is not a moment of melodrama, no sentimentalism, no overacting, no very near the surface up to the end of the last act but they are not the least of the play's merits.

It is to the everlasting credit of Walter Lawrence that he has not sold the secret of the play to a third party. It is a very pleasing piece of character work. The one feeling note in the production is Henry Hall who falls below the standard of the rest of the cast.

In the first act his scene with Rhy is rather poorly done, is theatrical and unconvincing. He talks too rapidly, too loudly and too distinctly. The unusually good work of the rest of the company proves to be Mr. Hall's misfortune.

It is regrettable that Portland's intelligent theatre-goers are given the opportunity of seeing "The Three of Us" in only one more performance, that of this evening.

New Almanac 1908.

A booklet of considerable interest to Oregonians is now being distributed by the retail druggists. It is entitled "The Beaver State Almanac for 1908." The astronomical and geographical phenomena as given being absolutely correct for this state, they are accepted as an authority by students. This is the only almanac we know of containing really accurate data that has been especially prepared for a given state.

The almanac page to the description of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition to be held in Seattle in 1909, and two pages giving the ground plans. Other pages contain a number of interesting information, such as "Presidential Nominations for the Past Fifty Years," "Almanacs of the Ancients," and "State Flowers."

There is sufficient advertising scattered throughout to pay for its cost, so that it is offered for gratuitous distribution. Ask your druggist for a copy. The hearty welcome accorded its previous issues indicates the value of this almanac.

Suits Cheaper Each Hour.

Crowds of buyers have thronged the store room of J. L. Bowman & Co. all day. The reducing of the price of suits at each hour has acted like magic. As one would naturally expect, the interest in the novel sale increased as the day waned, because the suits hourly grew cheaper.

When the largest crowd will have to be handled, this sacrifice is made to emphasize call attention to the whole sale stock of clothing which is being closed out at retail. In fact it is the only wholesale store in the city, and for convenience to the public it is being closed out in the Couch building, on Fourth street, just north of Washington.

Removal Notice.

Miss R. A. Opperman, corset-maker, will remove to 254 Morrison street; now located at Frank's, 408 Washington street.

MOST EXCELLENT HOME TREATMENT

For Consumption and Throat Troubles Also Common Colds.

The camps for tuberculosis patients in the pine forests of Maine, established by the Philadelphia specialists have demonstrated a new and wonderfully successful phase in the treatment of pulmonary diseases.

The remarkable stimulating effect on the respiratory organs by the resinous atmosphere of the pine forest has always been a matter of great interest to the medical world and now that science has produced a form of pine extract that is free from foreign matter the treatment has sprung into popular prominence.

The formula as originally prescribed is the following: "One half ounce Concentrated oil of pine, two ounces of glycerine, half pint of good whiskey. It should be shaken thoroughly and taken in doses of a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful every four hours."

If this preparation be used in connection with plenty of outdoor exercise and the habit of taking deep, long breathes every few minutes, patients will have all the advantages of the pine forest camps right at their own homes.

The most effective remedy obtainable for any case of lung trouble that is not too far advanced and a cure for any cough or cold that is curable.

The ingredients can be procured from any well stocked prescription drugist and the mixture made at home. Care should be taken to secure only the "Concentrated" oil of pine which comes put up for medicinal use in half-ounce vials and enclosed in small tin screw top cases which protect it from heat and light.

The ordinary bulk oil of pine is useless owing to the foreign matter that it contains; likewise potent medicinal imitations. They only produce nausea and fail in specific results.

SEWER PROBLEM FACES SELWICK

Suburb Will Be Forced To Construct Two Systems.

Further plans for a sewer system for Selwick were discussed at a meeting of the Selwick board of trade last night in Campbell's hall. Only that portion between East Fifteenth street and the river can be drained directly to the river. East of that thoroughfare a sewer must be built down Johnson creek.

When Woodstock, Tremont, East Selwick and Willsburg grow to such an extent that a sewer is necessary, a drainage system that will do the work must be built via Johnson creek through Milwaukee, incidentally furnishing that city with a system. This is an account of a raise between that territory and the river where is located the larger part of Selwick, through which it is impracticable to put a sewer.

On account of the vast district yet unsettled between Tremont and Milwaukee it will be some time before it will be possible to build a sewer. It is because of these problems that the entire portion of the city comprising the suburb of Selwick cannot be drained by one system. Properly, where between East Fifteenth street and the river, however, will be able to build a system at little expense and will petition for it as soon as plans are received from the city engineer's office.

The committee having charge of the question of dividing the Selwick school district is endeavoring to aid the school board in finding a suitable building site. The people of Selwick object strenuously to sending their children to the Lewellyn school at Midway.

Some objection was also expressed on account of the holding up of the Spokane avenue improvement. Two or three years ago the improvement of this street was started. Material was taken out of the center of the thoroughfare and heaped up on the sides. Now the winter the street takes on the appearance of a canal and is wholly impassable. Condition of the street improvements in the northern part of the suburb was also discussed and committees appointed to investigate.

The next meeting of the Selwick board of trade will be held Monday night, November 4, in Strahlman's hall, East Thirtieth and Spokane avenue. At this time election of officers will take place and a reorganization of the suburb was also discussed and committees appointed to investigate.

As the time has passed when the election of officers should have been held, and there are some new features to be added to the association, a reorganization has been thought advisable. A new name may be chosen. Meetings will hereafter be held in the Strahlman hall on dates to be fixed later.
