

BATTLES WITH SEA LION

Captain William Nicholls Falls From Boat Into Net in Which Was Monster Specimen of Mammal—Was Enmeshed.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Monterey, Cal., Nov. 1.—Captain William Nicholls of the Booth cannery fleet yesterday fought for his life in the confines of a net with a great sea lion, which tore all the clothes from his body and roared and barked over him, knocking him about and nearly killing him. J. Hoyden, manager of the Booth cannery who was with Nicholls at the time, finally landed a blow on the mammal's head which stopped the fight. Nicholls and Hoyden had run a launch near Moss Landing, where nets were lowered. No sooner had the nets been set than it was discovered that a big mammal had been captured. At first the party thought of trying to take the mammal alive but unfortunately there was no rope or hooks on board, so they decided to kill it. In order to accomplish this it was necessary to draw the net alongside the launch.

When the sea lion was a few feet away, splashing and squirring in the net, Hoyden struck it a heavy blow with an oar, but without effect, so Nicholls picked up a heavy hammer and leaning over the side of the launch attempted to hit the animal over the head. The force of the blow caused him to lose his equilibrium and he fell overboard with a splash. The monster was on him in an instant and a battle ensued between lion and man, in which the clothes were torn completely off the captain's back.
Hoyden made frantic efforts to save his friend and after many attempts he finally killed the animal with a terrace blow on the head with a small sledge hammer. Nicholls was then pulled from the water in an exhausted condition.

NEW KINK IN LAW TO BOOST SALARIES

Were Emoluments Increased During Matt L. Piles' Term of Office?

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Olympia, Wash., Nov. 1.—State Land Commissioner E. W. Ross and Matt L. Piles, member of the state board of control, have brought mandamus proceedings against State Auditor Clausen to compel him to issue increased salary warrants as provided by act of the legislature.
The supreme court recently refused to order an increase of salary for James H. Davis, member of the board of control, because of the constitutional inhibition against increasing the salary of a state official during his term of office. Attorney-General Atkinson advised against the increase of salary of Land Commissioner Ross on the same grounds.
The case of Matt L. Piles, member of the board of control, is somewhat different. The legislature passed the salary increase act on March 14, and on the same day passed the general appropriation bill, providing for the increased salaries for the state officers affected. The general appropriation bill, under the constitution, took immediate effect. Subsequent to that date, on April 1, Piles was appointed to a full term of six years as member of the board of control, and claims the right to draw the increased salary under the act of appropriation and the act increasing the salaries. But the salary increase act had no emergency clause and consequently did not go into effect until June 14, after the appointment of Piles and the beginning of his term of office. The supreme court never decided the point, as brought up in this case, the attorney-general advised the state auditor to resist the increased salary claim until the supreme court should take action.

fifth anniversary as rector of Trinity. That the triple anniversary is to be made the occasion for a notable celebration goes without saying among all those who know in what high esteem Dr. Dix is held by the members of his immensely wealthy parish.
Practically all Dr. Dix's ministerial life has been spent in Trinity parish, and nearly half a century of it has been as rector of Trinity church. He was graduated from Columbia college in 1848, and in 1852 he was ordained. He at once began the work in Trinity parish, which has since become his life's work, by becoming a clergyman at St. John's chapel, part of Trinity parish.
There was one year he spent in Philadelphia, but he was soon back at his old post. In 1882 he was made rector of Trinity, which position he has held ever since. Prosperity began to shine on Trinity from that year. Before that there were half a dozen New York parishes equally strong financially. Today it owns great office buildings, numerous tenements and church property of great value. In all, Trinity's wealth is estimated at more than $100,000,000.
Dr. Dix is wealthy in his own right. He gives much to charity and is interested in many philanthropic undertakings. It is said that he has officiated at more notable weddings than any other clergyman in New York. More than once he has declined a bishopric that would take him away from Trinity.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE WOULD LID SPOKANE

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Spokane, Wash., Nov. 1.—The Anti-Saloon league, represented by J. D. Campbell, Edward Solberg and John Anderson, all prominent business men here, have secured warrants for the arrest of J. H. Willmont, Henry Boismann, H. L. Crosby and Herman Wolf on the charge of violating the Sunday closing law, last Sunday. Boismann and Willmont each own many saloons.
Mayor Moore, elected by the reform party at the last election, has refused to enforce the closing law, holding that the saloons have as much right to be open on Sunday as any other day.
The police and the city administration are opposed to the action of the Anti-Saloon league. Many more arrests are expected.

FEW WASHINGTONIANS GOING HOME TO VOTE

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Washington, D. C., Nov. 1.—Time was a few days ago when the approach of election day brought on Washington a quiet. For several days previous to the election the departments would empty themselves of voters, and in all the big government buildings the forces would be reduced to the lowest minimum possible.
During the past few years, however, conditions have undergone a great change and so far as Washington is concerned a person might never know that elections will be held in a dozen states next Tuesday. The extension of the civil service is one of the chief causes for the change and another is found in the fact that the transportation is not floating around nowadays, as it was in times gone by.
A canvass of the various departments today shows that few heads or clerks expect to return home to cast their ballots next week. About the only exception to the rule is found in those who come from Maryland or Kentucky, in which states the contests are regarded as unusually close, and consequently of more than ordinary importance. So far as is known few government employees who claim Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, Mississippi, Nebraska, New Jersey or New York—in all of which states some sort of an election is to take place Tuesday—will take the trouble to go home to vote.
