WOUND 5,000 FEET OF TWINE ABOUT HIS LEG TO KEEP FROM WORKING

Determined at all hazards to religiously avoid anything that savored of labor, Walter Dement adopted a novel method to incapacitate himself for work, with the result that he nearly lost his right leg from blood poisoning and for the next 30 days will have ample opportunity at Kelly's Butte to cogitate on his folly.
Several days ago Dement, who is about 50 years of age, appeared at police headquarters, limping painfully and asked to be sent to the poor farm for treatment. Arrangements were made by the authorities and the pseudo cripple became a county charge.
Upon reaching the almshouse Dement refused to allow the physicians to examine his supposed injured leg and left the institution the same night. Yesterday he again visited police headquarters and was directed to the court-house. The county officials refused to assist him and Dement returned to the police station.
He complained so pathetically about his leg that Dr. Ziegler was summoned to examine the patient. Dement demurred to having an examination made of the limb, but the police officials were obdurate and then a startling discovery was made.
Dement was found to have wound about 5,000 feet of twine tightly around his leg, so as to stop circulation and then covered the limb with a bandage made from a piece of sheeting. Blood poisoning and gangrene were just about starting and the leg was in a frightful condition. Dr. Ziegler applied an antiseptic and the foolish faker was able to hobble into court this morning. Judge Cameron, after hearing the details of Dement's attempt to impose on the authorities, promptly sentenced the fellow to 30 days.

TRANSFER OF GOLD FROM LONDON TO PORTLAND COSTS SMALL FORTUNE

A tidy sum it costs the bankers to bring gold from the big European money centers to New York. Gold importers usually figure that the cost of shipping the yellow metal from London to New York, which includes freight charges, insurance and the loss of interest while in transit amounts to 1 1/2 per cent. In other words, to import $1,000,000 costs $15,000. But if the Portland bankers want $1,000,000 of London gold it will cost an additional $5,000 to land it in the Rose City, over and above the charges from London to New York. Gold coin is rarely shipped across the continent. The cost would be altogether too great. When Portland bankers want to transfer gold from New York to this city, the arrangements are made with the subtreasury in New York, which notifies by wire the subtreasury in San Francisco and the gold is expressed from that city to Portland. The total cost of this transaction, including insurance and freight charges, would be about one-half of one per cent.
The cost of bringing the $1,250,000 that is now on the way from London to Portland will be $12,500.
Over $460,000 will be paid in insurance and shipping charges by the New York bankers on the $1,000,000 that has been shipped from London in the past 10 days.
Trans-Atlantic gold shipments are very rare. Balances between European money centers and the large cities of this country are usually settled by exchange bills or in some like form, nothing but coin.
