"Confessions of a Wife."

For the first time the Portland Admen's club met last night with several women present and listened to a paper by one of them. Helen Mar Shaw.
"Men in Advertising" was the subject of her talk. She compared the advertising man of yesterday and the advertising man of today, emphasizing the point that the successful advertising man no longer resorted to un truths to draw attention to his offers and that the people were learning to look for the truth in reliable advertise-ments. A. BOOTY FOR BURGLARS

You can't read a newspaper without noticing where somebody has been robbed of a large amount of money.

It may have been taken from under the carpet, from bureau drawers or under the floor, but the money is gone and no trace left. Too often such robbery is accompanied by bloodshed and murder. The victim is killed to avoid exposure or tortured to disclose the hidden wealth.

The man who carries large amounts of cash or hides them around his premises places a premium on crime, and should not grumble if he is robbed. We offer you a safe place to deposit your money, a place where it is insured against loss.

We will supply you with a check book which enables you to draw your money at any time.

If a burglar steals your check book he can't draw your money and we will give you another check book,

He was on a scaffold tearing A. Ferguson, of the Pendleton local, acaway the woodwork above the door cording to the findings of the coroner's of the entrance to the shaft on the jury. An inquest was held in the afterfirst floor when the elevator descended noon and the testimony of the train crews on both the incoming Southern Pacific and the outgoing O. R. & N. train was taken.

Engineer Ferguson and his fireman George E. Curl told of the accident and testified they were unable to see tar incoming train because of the fog. They said they were running at about three or four miles an hour when the accident happened.

afford and Brageman Brown of the Southern Pacific train had a good case of stage fright when they saw the Pen-dleton train which perhaps more than doubled the speed of the train in their slippery tracks and heavy curve and grade it is not thought possible that Engineer Ferguson could have attained a speed of 10 or 12 miles an hour with his light engine and heavy train in such a short distance after leaving the bridge.
