Arthur Schubach Marched Through Street Before Muzzles of Revolvers-Forced to Open Store and Hand Over Valuables.

Two Crooks Had Previously Duped Him Out of $85-Advanced Money on Rented Furniture-One Arrested in Seattle.

C. Pierce for a piano rented from the Reed-French company, later called from his home at night, marched through the streets to his store, and at the muzzles of two revolvers forced to open his place of business and return the security taken for the money advanced, then turned loose with the warning that his life would pay the penalty should he divulge the affair, this is the tale told by Arthur Schubach, and brought to light by the arrest in Seattle of a man giving the name Schubach is the proprietor of the Portland Auction rooms 211 First street, and resides at 580 Fifth street. The story he told the district attorney and the police of the wrongs suffered by him at the hands of Pierce and an unknown companion designated John Doe in the complaint reads like a meiodrama of the Diamond Dick variety.

Pierce, his wife, and the unknown man rented a furnished flat in the city a little more than a month ago. Soon after taking the flat they rented a piano of the Reed-French company paying $5 a menth.

In November Pierce visited the loan office conducted by R. I. Eckerson in the Washington building and asked for a loan on the furniture, including the piano. Eckerson made an investigation and finding that both the furniture and the piano were rented refused to and finding that both the furniture and the plane were rented refused to advance money.

Effects Loan of Schubach.

Pierce, nothing daunted, visited the Portland Auction room and entered into negitiation with Schubach for the sale of the plane. After some discussion Schubach agreed to purchase the plane giving $85 for the Instrument. Having closed the deal Schubach sent his man to the flat for the instrument and, upon the request of Pierce, sent the payment in money.

Just as the piano was being placed

Just as the piano was being placed in the moving van a representative of the plano house happened along and ordered, the instrument taken to the Reed-French warehouse. Schubach in the meantime, learning of the turn affairs had taken, hastened to the Pierce seeing him coming, jumped through a rear window and made his escape, taking the money with him. The auctioneer then turned his attention to Mrs. Pierce and the John Doe man, who were still in the house, and insisted on the return of the $85. The matter was taken to the police court and the woman said she would find her husband and he would return the money. Accordingly the two were sent out in the custody of a police officer and spent most of the day searching for the vanished husband but were unable to locate him. store, Pierce took charge of the property while the unknown man escorted Schubach home. Before leaving the store, however, the two men discussed what disposition to make of their captive. One was in favor of tying him in the store, but the other was afraid that the watchman would find him and make their escape uncertain.

Accordingly, Schubach was told that if he would be very quiet about the affair they might pay the money back. On the other hand, if he made any trouble for them they would "come back and get him." They explained that they had been doing a good deal of the "night work" about town and meant what they said.

Schubach promised to be good, and in fact did allow several days to elapse hefore he made complaint. Since then the police have been working on the case, and the arrest in Seattle of the man giving his name as Farrel is the were unable to locate him

Woman Puts Up Security. As evening approached Mrs. Pierce said she would give security for the amount and gave Schubach her gold watch, two grips, a trunk and a Boston terrier said to be a prize animal and worth $500. Schubach took the securities and locked them in his store on First street.

While the auctioneer was entertaining a party of friends at his home that evening, so the story runs, he was interrupted by a knock at the door and went out to find the John Doe who informed him that Mr. Pierce had re-

GREAT ORIENTAL AUCTION SALE

We have just received from the Custom-House and are now unpacking about 400 cases of latest novelties for the holiday trade, consisting of fine Satsuma, bronze, silver, Cloisonne, new brass jardinieres, fine decorated Shoffu and Kutana tea sets, silk kimonos, mandarin coats, silk embroidered screens, fine hand carved ebony and teak furniture, etc.

Owing to the recent financial situation, which made it difficult for us to realize money with which to pay the Custom-House duties, these goods should have been unpacked and on exhibition long ago. So now we have hired extra hands to unpack these goods. We must sell them during the next 10 days before Christmas. These goods will be sold at auction at 131 Fifth street and at private sale between auction hours. Auction sales commence daily at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m. The public are cordially invited to attend these great bargain sales.

Private sale also at our other store, 287 Morrison street.

turned and would pay back the money provided Schubach would go to the store and return the securities. Schuback put on his hat and joined his visitors, eager to get the coin.

Suddenly, so Schubach, says, the demeanor of the two men changed. Each of them drew very business-like black revolvers and jabbing them dgainst him, one on each side, told him to march along and to be quick and quiet about it. In this manner they took him to his store, forced him to open the place and deliver out of the safe the watch, and from the storeroom the other things left during the afternoon.

CITY DADS' BOUQUET

License Rates in Proposed

Ordinance Will Put Hawkers Out of Business.

Members of the license committee of the city council recommended at its meeting yesterday afternoon the passage of the hawkers ordinance which has been before the committee for several months. The ordinance aims s body blow at the peanut, popcorn, candy and flower vendors, raising their licenses to almost prohibitive fees.

This is especially true in the case of the vendor of flowers, whose license is raised from $6 a year to $400. This class of vendors have no rent to pay, are put to no expense for fuel, light, stationery and other office and store essentials and are thus easily able to undersell the regular florists.

Candy, popoorn and peanut vendors will have to pay $100 a quarter instead of $50 if the new measure becomes a law. Candy stands will be taxed $150 instead of $100.

A fight is likely to come up over the passage of the ordinance when it is presented to the council. Councilmen Kellaher and Baker are expected to defend the ordinance and Councilmen will probably attack it.

Relianer and Baker are expected to de-fend the ordinance and Councilman Vaughn will probably attack it. The latter brought out the fact at yester-day's committee meeting that the pub-lic received the benefit of the low prices made by the flower hawkers, although other members defended the measure by saying that the florisis who conduct their business in stores and buildings represent the stability of the city.

The various factories and industries employing workmen in Grants Pass have apparently not been phased by the recent flurry in financial circles and the hum of industry, so welcome to every citizen, is to be heard on all sides, says the Courier.
