Attacked by Envious Firm. At the opening of the session this morning President E. T. Judd called the attention of the association to an advertisement which appeared in a morning paper and was inserted by a firm which he said had done nothing to help out the association, had not contributed a cent towards its success and had not exhibited.

"It put this meeting in a very had

"It put this meeting in a very bad light," said President Judd, "making it look as though it wasn't worth the attention of the darymen, and exhibiting a narrow, contracted and selfish view of the situation. They said they had no butter to exhibit and wouldn't pay I cent to help us out. I hate to give their names and the county they are from, because there are good men in that county, but I'm glad they didn't come county, but I'm glad from Marion county.

Secretary Kent said that in order to have return tickets validated and secure the fare of one-third it would be necessary to have all certificates returned to him. The Southern Pacific had not insisted upon it but the Northern Pacific had demanded its pound of flesh and the feelings of the dairymen toward the road weren't made any pleasanter by the move.

John-Dinwiddie of Woodburn spoke on "Winter vs. Summer Dairying," and said that his experience showed that one could get better satisfaction all around by freshening in the fall and dairying in the winter. He said he had come from North Dakota to Oregon and found that this was the best dairying country he had ever visited. William Schulof Hillsboro said it had been

Oregon Considered Best.

A letter was read from Professor Mc-kay of the lows State college dairy department, in which he said he con-sidered Oregon soil better adapted for drying than for any other pursuit be most intelligent and prosperous trmers, he said, are the dairy farmers they are the kind that tregon among the foremost dairy states of the world. A letter was also read from G Larson of the dairy husbandmen department of North Dakota, saying that Oregon was situated so as to command the markets of the orient and alasks with the dairy husband.

Frofessor F. L. Kent of the State Ag-ricultural college gave some interest-ing figures on the advanced registration of dairy cattle. For Jerseys he said cows giving 260 pounds of butter fat when under 2½ years, 300 pounds when under 4 years, 350 pounds from 4 to 5 years and 400 pounds over 5 years, were entitled to advanced registration.

The Guernseys two years old are required to give 250,5 pounds of butter fat, this gradually increasing with the age of the animal, 281 pounds when three years old and 360 pounds when five years old. In the seven-day tests or Jerseys a cow must give 14 pounds of butter in seven days or 12 pounds of butter fat in seven days. Two-year-old Guernseys must give 10 pounds of but ter fat and five-year-olds 15 pounds

H. I. Blanchard the last speaker at the morning session, spoke on practical dairying and how he had succeeded by following along practical lines, supplemented by study. His herd has an average of 450 pounds of butter fat per cow. Others near him have an average of nearly 500 pounds to a cow, he

The following address of Addison Ben-nett, editor of the Irrigon Irrigator and of The Dalles Optimist, was read before convention this afternoon; If you will notice the subject assigned to me you will perceive I am not going to occupy your time with a mass of statements as to what has been done in statements as to what has been done in eastern Oregon in the way of dairying. When Mr. Kent asked me to address you on the subject of dairying in our section I told him that I would do so on condition that I was to speak on the glittering generalities of the future, and not along the lines of the future. along the lines of the dry statistics of the past.

However, I must say a word about what is being done on some of our farms to give point as to what can be done and what must be done if the great plains and valleys of the inland empire are to be the prosperous places we hope to see them. I am a good many different kinds of a crank, and among my twisted points.

Must Give Something Back.

Nothing is plainer from an agricultural standpoint than that we cannot long prosper by taking all from the soil and giving nothing back. Mother Nature has been very kind and lavish to us by giving us a soil magnificent in all that goes to make it productive, but we must not rob it year after year and expect it to treat us ever kindly, for nature does not deal in that manner with our soil or any soil.

nature does not deal in that manner with our soil or any soil.

What the eastern Oregon farmers and ranchmen must do for the good of the country and the benefit of themselves is to turn their attention to the stability of their prosperity by giving something to nature in return for the lavish gifts are constantly bestowing and to do of their prosperity by giving something to nature in return for the lavish gifts she is constantly bestowing and to do this we must turn our attention to diversified farming and the first thought of every farmer should be the purchase of a few cows, or if he already has a few, then let him keep adding to the number as fast as he can have of our people have shown the ready has a few, then let him keep adding to the number as fast as he can. Many of our people have shown the way. You can travel through my portion of the state and see thousands of little patches of slfaifa and wherever a man has had the sense to start a field of this famous legume you can rest assured that he either has or soon intends to have a few cows. He may not be going extensively into the dairy business, or even to a commercial extent, but he will have cows enough to make his ows butter and probably enough beyond his own needs to trade in at the ows butter and probably enough be-yond his own needs to trade in at the store for his groceries and many other commodities.

Methods Should Be Studied.

Right at the outset many of the landowners will tell you that they have not the pasturage for even one cow, but that is all nonesense, for around Irrigon we have 20 or 30 milch cows and they do well all aummer on our "barren" sage bruth pasturage. The next objec-tion will be that hay is so dear in the winter that they cannot afford to buy it to carry their stock through the colder months, but that is another fal-lney, for there is not a section of occu-pied land in eastern Oregon that has not at least a few acres which will bear two or more crops of alfalfa each year after it is once seeded and each

What we need is for the ranchers and farmers to go and study the methods of those who are doing as we advocate and then go and do likewise. It is not the thought of fear or failure so much as the dread of labor that helds many of them back. They know they can get a good stand of alfulfa in one year's work to do it and the average wheat farmer wants to do all of his work during two periods of the year, seed time and harvest. During these periods they will work and slave like the very old scrutch, but during the balance of the year they prefer to rest and discuss how best to save the country.

Lack of Thrift. I can take you out into the wheat belt and show you farm after farm where the houses are hardly worthy the where the fences around "home" are broken down, unpainted and uncared for, if the owners are thrifty enough to ever have fenced them at all. uncared for, if the owners are thrifty enough to ever have fenced them at all. There is not a tree or shrub in sight, there is no garden, most likely no well, and they may haul their water a distance or five, six or even ten miles. I can show you farmers who spend as high as $1900 n year for hauling water, when for $1900 they could sink a well and equip it with a gasoline engine, a pump and tank, and have water enough for all of their needs, and also enough to irrigate their garden, a small orchard and an acre or two of alfalfa. And ence installed this machinery could be operated for less than $75 per year. And those men will tell you they cannot afford to keep a cow or a hog, because water is so, hard to get.

If you will go inside those houses you will probably find them about as uninviting "homes" as one cares to see. And if you will look into the matter you will also ascertain that in nine cases out of ten the sons and daughters of those "homes" will say that farming is a dog's life, and as soon as they are old enough to do as they please they will go out to work as servants rather than remain at home.

Oregon has too many such cumberers of the ground, and we must educate them up to something higher and better if we want to see out state prosper as our soil and climate warrant.

Let these men make up their mind that they will have a cow or two, and then will follow hogs, poultry and perhaps a few sheep. When a farmer is once started on the road to diversified farming he will be happier, more prosperous, and he will be giving his land a "square deal," for he will be giving back to the soil something every hour of every day in the year.
