GOLD BURIED NEAR MILTON

Officer Frank Morse Recalls Early-Day Robbery and Loot Hidden in Oregon.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
 Walla Walla, Wash., Dec. 26.—Twenty-five thousand dollars lies buried within two miles of the present city of Milton, and awaits only the lucky efforts of some one with a shovel to be reclaimed. The only objection against the treasure is that it bears the taint of unlawful seizure. From time to time since the late '60s when the money was buried by stage coach robbers, individuals and parties have sought the trail of the lost fortune, but without success.
 "The Overland stage, which used to make a five-day run between Walla Walla and Salt Lake," said Police Sergeant Frank Morse yesterday, "set out one morning carrying a consignment of money in amount about $25,000. Although holdups were common in various parts of the country in those days, no unusual precautions were taken to guard the treasure since it was believed that nobody but the express messenger knew of its presence on the stage. The information had leaked out somewhere along the line, however, and when the coach neared the Ireland ford of the Walla Walla river, which is between one and two miles north of Milton, it was stopped and robbed by three highwaymen.

 "Before the men could effect their escape out of the country, news of the holdup had been brought to Walla Walla and a posse raised to pursue them. The three, seeing their chances of escape with the stage strongbox growing slim, buried the treasure. They were overtaken and all three lynched by the posse. They died, refusing to tell where the money was hidden.
 "Many people have tried to find the money, but no success has ever been reported. In some families, the story of the holdup with detailed descriptions of the country have been handed down for two or three generations, in the hope that some member would be lucky enough to find the fortune.
 "Some day some one will be digging around in his garden maybe, and he will strike his pick or shovel against the side of a rusty iron box. And that man will be an easy street inhabitant afterwards."

COW CAUSES WRECK OF ELECTRIC CAR
 (Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
 Aberdeen, Wash., Dec. 26.—Twenty-three passengers on an electric car had a narrow escape from serious, and perhaps fatal, injuries Saturday night. A cow crossing the track struck with force that the forward trucks jumped over the animal's body and it was wedged under the rear trucks. The forward end of the car was thrown from the track and into a deep ditch filled with water, and it was only by clinging to the seats in the unsubmerged part of the car that the passengers were saved.
 The sudden stopping of the car threw the passengers into a heap, and all were more or less bruised. One man sustained a broken wrist and a child was severely cut in the forehead.

Illinois Teachers in Session.
 (United Press Leased Wire.)
 Springfield, Ill., Dec. 26.—Several thousand teachers took possession of Springfield today for the fifty-fourth annual meeting of the Illinois Teachers' association. Governor Deneen, President D. B. Parkinson of Carbondale Normal school and Dr. Emil G. Hirsch of Chicago, are slated for addresses at the formal opening this evening. Elmer E. Brown, United States commissioner of education, is to speak tomorrow. A number of other prominent educators will be heard Friday and Saturday. Segregation of high school pupils, trade and commercial schools, and a revision of the school statutes of Illinois are some of the questions that will be given special attention.

Greenough-Warren Wedding.
 (United Press Leased Wire.)
 New York, Dec. 26.—St. Thomas' church was the scene of a large and fashionable wedding today when Miss Charlotte Warren was married to William Greenough. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Whitney Warren and a niece of Mrs. Robert Goetz. Two years ago, soon after her social debut, she was reported engaged to James Hagan Hyde, vice-president of the Equitable Life Assurance company. William Greenough, the bridegroom of today, is a son of the late William Greenough and a graduate of Harvard in the class of '86.

MAKE BUSINESS MAN OF INDIAN

Government Preparing to Teach Reds to Manage Their Own Affairs.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
 Toppenish, Wash., Dec. 26.—The more enlightened Indians on the Yakima reservation approve of the plan of the department of Indian affairs at Washington to give the progressive Indian greater freedom in the management of his affairs than they at present enjoy. The object is to train the Indians so that when their allotments are turned over to them entirely by the government they will be capable of managing them. Local Indians of education believe that the sooner they are made to rely upon themselves the better it will be for the race. Unless they are given such freedom, they think, before the reservation is thrown open to settlers, the Indians will be at the mercy of the whites in their business relations.

DR. GILLIS RESIGNS FROM STATE BOARD
 (Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
 Salem, Dec. 26.—So that his successor may participate in the examination to be held January 6, Dr. A. B. Gillis, for 10 years a member of the state board of medical examiners, has handed his resignation to the governor, instead of waiting for his term of office to expire in February. In his letter of resignation Dr. Gillis touches on the recent charges made by Dr. Moore, for the osteopathy. Dr. Gillis charges that Dr. Moore has been seeking free advertising in starting the controversy about the certificates issued to his brethren. Dr. Gillis sarcastically refers to Moore's desire to use his certificate as a billboard.
