

POWERS GOES TO HIS CELL

Man Accused of Complicity in Goebel Murder Loses Freedom by Obstinance of One Man—Not Disheartened by the Outcome.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Georgetown, Ky., Jan. 4.—Caleb Powers is back in his cell tonight. Fifty-six days of nerve-racking trial have been added to his seven years of imprisonment on the charge of complicity in the assassination of William Goebel, contestant for the governorship of Kentucky, and he is back just where he started. Tomorrow he will begin a new routine of reading and writing, exercising and eating. The four walls of his cell become again the boundaries of his world, and his law books his principal companions. He will study them again lest in these seven years he may have overlooked some point that might have swung the verdict his way.

A new trial has been set for July 6. Before this had been decided, Powers' attorneys pleaded with the court to admit him to bail. They pointed out the years he had waited for this hearing, the ordeals of his trials and the danger to his health from so long confinement, but Judge Morris held the case was not one that would admit of bail. Powers was returned to his cell, disappointed but not disheartened. He has been the man of steel—the man of iron nerves, throughout his seven years in jail and the iron courage did not desert him. He put this trial behind him for the lessons it taught and began at once to plan for July 6. Ten jurors had been for acquittal throughout the hours of deliberation this time. How to make sure of the 12 next time was the problem he set about to solve.

Just as determined to continue the fight, Arthur Goebel, brother of William Goebel, began building a new foundation for the state's case, July 6. This interval will be almost like a recess in the trial. Goebel has spent a fortune in his efforts to avenge his brother's death. He has another fortune ready to throw into the contest, if necessary. Neither side has made any charges of unfairness in this trial. The feeling seemed to prevail on all hands that no matter what has gone before, the effort this time has been for complete, unbiased justice. Four Republicans, four Democrats and four independent Democrats composed the jury. All were men of good standing in the community. There was no "packing" charged, no rancor because of the exclusion of testimony.

The hours spent in deliberation by the jury were fraught with bitterness so great that members of the panel felt there was no chance for anything save disagreement. But Judge Morris did not consent to dismiss them until almost noon. Eight weeks had been spent in working up to this point and all felt that every resource for getting a verdict must be exhausted, but by that time Judge Morris was positive the men holding out would never give in. Two had stood out for conviction at first but finally one announced he was willing to vote for acquittal. The other would not. Powers said he was pleased that 30 of the 12 had believed in him. In the new trial, he said, he believed the 12 would be convinced. James L. Price, the foreman, and J. W. Renaker, were the jurors who voted against acquittal. Both are Democrats. Which one refused to give in, none of the jurors would state.

CONVICT STABS HIS COMPANION

Charles Smith Attacks John Cravers in Yard of Penitentiary at Salem.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Salem, Or., Jan. 4.—In the prison yard this morning about 8 o'clock Charles Smith, a convict sent from Pasco county for burglary on a 15-year sentence, quarreled with a fellow convict named John Cravers, sent from Union county for burglary. Smith had a knife which it is supposed was manufactured in the shops, and with this he started in to carve on the head, cutting the victim over and entirely through the left ear, including the drum, a four-inch cut. He also slashed Cravers' arm, the abdomen exposing the intestines. He then slashed his victim's throat so that the jugular vein and carotid artery were exposed but neither severed. He cut both wrists.

All was done so quickly that the guards could not interfere. Prison Surgeon Shaw attended Cravers but thinks there is but little hope of Cravers' recovery.

WANT CARNEGIE TO END STRIKE

Leaders Desire Multi-Millionaire to Build Model Tenement in New York.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
New York, Jan. 4.—An attempt to interest Andrew Carnegie in model tenements in New York is one of the results of the rent strike which has been on for several days. It has been proposed that the city purchase a block or two in the thickly congested East Side and there build modern tenements which would be rented at a low price. There seems to be no prospect of the city being able to do this at present, at least, so leaders in the strike movement will try to get Carnegie to erect the buildings.

DRIVEN TO DEATH BY HOMESICKNESS

Henry Westphal Hanged Himself in the Land of the Stranger.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Eugene, Or., Jan. 4.—Henry Westphal, aged 19 and single, committed suicide this afternoon by hanging himself in the loft of the barn of Palmer Ayers, four miles north of Eugene, for whom he had been working. He failed to appear for the noonday meal and the family becoming alarmed made search for him, finding his lifeless body swinging at the end of a rope tied to a rafter of the barn. Westphal was a Dane and had been working for Ayers six weeks. He came to this country from Denmark only 10 months ago and could speak very little English. The cause of his suicide is not known, but it is thought he became homesick and finally became mentally unbalanced. He had no relatives in this country other than an uncle who resides in Eugene.

EARL TO FIGHT FOR PIE CARD

Yarmouth Is to Contest Alice Thaw's Suit for Annulment of Marriage.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
London, Jan. 4.—The Earl of Yarmouth is to contest the suit of his wife, formerly Alice Thaw, for annulment of their marriage. This announcement came not directly from the earl but from friends intimately connected with him and there is no doubt of its accuracy.

The position of London society is that the husband has hardly a right to a suit, but there is an unwillingness to lose the $1,000,000 or more included in the marriage settlement. This money must return to the Thaws in the event of a nullification.

The countess' $200,000 personal income, on which her husband is said to have drawn liberally, will also be lost to him. His $10,000 annuity, settled on him at the time of the marriage, will probably be continued.

Even in view of these financial considerations, London is somewhat surprised that the earl should go into court—unless, indeed, he has a very strong case. The countess' plea for annulment would imply, The case probably will be delayed some time, as it is numbered 156 on the list and the first one begins January 11.

Judge Lewis, perhaps the best known lawyer in England, will have the countess' case in hand. The Earl of Yarmouth's solicitors have given formal notice that they will defend the countess' suit for annulment of her marriage. The countess' petition says the marriage has been "merely nominal," a polite expression of the only legal ground for a matrimonial annulment. The countess' fortune is all under her control. Her father in his will placed the bulk of it in the hands of trustees and when she married the countess placed the rest in private trust. She set aside an allowance for the earl, however, under the marriage settlement, and it is agreed here that should the marriage be annulled this allowance will immediately stop.

FIND CANNIBALS IN CONGO STATE

American Explorers Having Exciting Time Surveying Concession of King.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Washington, Jan. 4.—Abundant material for a graphic account of the Congo Free State exploitations is being furnished by a band of American planters, now traversing the Congo making a geological and scientific survey of the rubber and mineral concessions granted by King Leopold to Ryan and Guggenheim in the United States. Giant cannibals, of terrible ferocity, are reported to be plentiful by the explorers. Advice received by the geological survey today from A. F. Smith, of Madison, Wisconsin, one of the party, reports a sharp light in which 12 natives were killed by the explorers and a squad of soldiers under command of Lieutenant Empertoria before the attacking party withdrew. Other battles are looked for by the Americans before they traverse the immense concession, said to include one-third of the Congo, and only to be reached after a journey through hundreds of miles of jungle never explored by white men. Smith says four distinct exploring parties are in the field. A regiment of well equipped troops has been furnished by King Leopold.

NEW BIBLE UNEARTHED

scripts, will supply missing words and even fragments of text lost from the Alexandrian manuscripts. In this, with the genuineness of the Freer manuscripts established, they will demand, perhaps, a revision of the present day Bible. If not, they will at least furnish a text that cannot fail to interest every student and reader of the Bible as a complete column which exalts the Bible and adds to its wonderful history.

Find Missing Passages.
As yet the manuscripts here in Detroit have only been scanned. Placed in the hands of Professor H. A. Sanders, a noted archaeologist, palaeographer and student of the Bible, he quickly searched in the best preserved of the gospel, which has been a subject of interest for hundreds of years to Biblical students, to find if missing paragraphs spoken of by St. Jerome were there. To his amazement and delight, he found them, and burned to make his discovery known to fellow archaeologists and Bible students without investigating further.

He readily gained Mr. Freer's consent to give his believed to be authentic record of the saying of Christ, now because it has been lost more than 1,500 years, to the archaeological society, and thus it was that the existence of this very remarkable manuscript became known to the world.

It will be months, and probably years, before the manuscript in its entirety, will be given to the world. To Bible students that period of time seems as but a day, when it is recalled that it was two centuries after the Alexandrian manuscript had passed into the hands of the English king before its entire version was put into print, and even then it was criticised as faulty.

May Displace Old Script.
The five other versions, manuscripts used in formulating the Bible, and not so complete as the Alexandrian manuscript, are all highly prized and carefully preserved. It is well possible that the Freer manuscripts may displace them all in making the highest rank as the oldest and, most complete text of the Bible.

So far as the manuscripts have been examined it has been discovered that the text of the four gospels, Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, are complete. The Alexandrian manuscripts, which, like the Freer manuscripts, are believed to have been saved from the Alexandrian library before its books were given out to be destroyed, are wanting in the whole of Matthew's gospel up to chapter XXV, 8, and from John XI, 59, to VIII, 52.

These deficiencies are supplied in the Bibles of today, but the Freer manuscripts will be able to supply with undoubted authenticity and in the same text these missing portions of the Alexandrian manuscripts, and perhaps all other missing or doubtful portions of that great manuscript, and give to the world for the first time the Bible as it was collected and edited at the world's great seat of learning at the beginning of the Christian era—at Alexandria where the Greeks had their greatest universities and libraries.

Will Trace Psalms.
The Septuagint, or Alexandrian version of the Old Testament, has been regarded as doubtful in the form in which it has been preserved as to the Psalms.

The Septuagint of the Freer manuscript, containing the Psalms, is not in such a good state of preservation as much of the rest of the manuscripts, but it is believed that with care every line of the Psalms may be traced.

The history of the finding and purchase of the manuscripts is not second to their value as a discovery. How far Mr. Freer went to obtain the manuscripts and exactly what measures he took or what price he paid, he himself is not prepared to say at this time, but he tells enough to make it one of the most thrilling adventures of a collector's life.

Even after he had obtained the manuscripts, he could not call them his own until they were locked up in his home in this city, and now that they are here, he declares that they are the property of the United States government and nothing short of an international incident can take them from him.

Tunnel Work to Start

Boring of the Harriman tunnel under the peninsula, which will give a water grade outlet for the Oregon & Puget sound and an inlet for the main line of the O. R. & N. company, will be commenced within the next few weeks.

Concrete firms are now figuring on the cost of lining the big tunnel with reinforced concrete, and their final estimates will be submitted within the next 30 days. In view of the fact that figures on large undertakings are not made by concrete manufacturers more than 60 days in advance of the work, it is believed that work on the tunnel entrance will be commenced very soon.

Estimates are also being secured by Chief Engineer Boschke of the Harriman lines on cost of concrete construction in the widening of approaches at both ends of the steel bridge. Plans for rebuilding the steel bridge and other plans for modifying the present bridge in the matter of approaches and other features have been made.
