

NORTH BANK TURNS EAST TRAVEL IN TO PORTLAND

Estimated That New Hill Line Will Bring 200,000 More People Annually Into This City—Makes Rose City Gateway of Great Inland Empire.

Railroad changes that are now taking place in the Columbia river basin, through the impending opening of the north bank road, the Riparia-Lewiston line, and the new route to Spokane, will increase by fully 200,000 people the annual travel into Portland.

Startling changes in railroad running time are being worked out for the new year in favor of Portland. A study of the forthcoming time schedules reveals some enormous advantages for this city commercially, in rail connections with the entire northwest from Boise, Baker City, Lewiston and Spokane, and even from Helena and Butte.

With one stroke of railroad building—the north bank line from Portland to Pasco—the whole Pacific northwest and Montana are brought to the open door of Portland. Reduced time of running trains by reason of the direct and easy route from the inland empire down the Columbia river to Portland accomplishes the metamorphosis of travel, and changes the route heretofore following the sinuosities of the Northern Pacific railroad from Pasco, over the Cascade range to the sound.

With the opening of the north bank line for travel the passenger from Montana points on the Northern Pacific, or from points on the Burlington, can come to Portland in approximately six hours less time than he can go to Seattle or Tacoma, or he can go to Puget Sound points quicker via Portland than he can go there via the old Northern Pacific line over the mountains.

Portland needs all. As a distributing point for both grain and passengers, Portland has been placed preeminently in the center of the north coast cities, and it now remains for this city to comprehend its enormous advantages, and "make good." Railroad developments of the last year have worked the wonderful changes.

The north bank of the Columbia, which for so many years lay barren of railroad ventures, was the key by which Portland was to master the whole situation, and the Columbia river forms the way through which Portland is now coming into her own as the queen city of commerce and manufactures in the Pacific northwest.

The whole of the old Oregon country, embracing Idaho, Montana, Washington and Oregon, are from eleven to two hours closer by rail, from any point, to Portland than to any other large city. Taking the Boise region as the south-west limit, it is 18 hours to Portland and 29 hours to Seattle. From Baker City and eastern Oregon points it is 13 hours to Portland and 24 hours to Seattle.

The Lewiston country, which is opened with the completion of the Riparia-Lewiston extension of the Northern Pacific and O. R. & N., is brought within eight hours of Portland, but remains 12 hours from Seattle.

Completion of the north bank line of the Portland & Seattle railroad makes the running time eight and a half hours between Portland and the Spokane region, while it will necessarily remain 10 1/2 hours by the North Coast limited over the old Northern Pacific route to Seattle.

Quicker to Come Here. It is said the North Coast limited is already making its best possible time and is great difficulty in maintaining the schedule over the mountain route.

From the Palouse country and eastern Washington it will be 12 hours to Portland over the north bank road, and 14 hours to Seattle via the mountain route.

The Walla Walla country will be six and a half hours from Portland and 11 hours from Seattle. Eastern Washington people in the region of Walla Walla can go to Seattle quicker by going via Portland than they can go via the old route of the Northern Pacific over the mountains.

From Grants Pass and southern Oregon it is 12 hours to Portland and 23 hours to Seattle. There is hardly a section of the great northwest worth considering from a trade standpoint that cannot be reached three to ten hours quicker from Portland than from Seattle with the opening of the north bank line and the resulting change of running time from all points in the northwest.

Quicker communication between Portland and Pasco over the Portland & Seattle railroad will necessitate quicker running over the O. R. & N. main line and this will result in quicker communication between Portland and all points east on the O. R. & N. and the Union Pacific system.

which contains a large chorus of singing and dancing girls in a summer time comedy. Musical comedy is always an attraction which can be depended on to please the public and "A $10,000 Beauty" is said to be one of the best on the road this season.

"Soldiers of Fortune," which the Baker stock company is presenting all this week, is a strong favorite with the audience, being one of the ideal love romances that appeal strongly to the heart and the imagination. Richard Harding Davis' creation of the beautiful character of Hope Langham is one of the best things this all around newspaper war correspondent and writer of fiction ever did. Matinee Saturday.

"At the Old Cross Roads." When "At the Old Cross Roads" was announced for its first appearance here, it received marked attention, for the reason that it was produced under the direction of Arthur C. Aiston, a manager who has given us "Tennessee's Gardner," "Pretty Peggy" and other first class attractions. This delightful attraction will continue at the Empire all week. Matinee Saturday.

"The Transgressors" at the Lyric. Nothing in the Allen company has done in Portland has met with more praise than "The Transgressors" which they play this week at the Lyric. The play gives great opportunity for the principals of the company which they embrace with confidence in their ability to "make good." Miss Allen and Mr. Drum are particularly strong in the parts of the foolishly ambitious wife and wronged husband respectively.

Some Clever Acts. There are some clever acts on the vaudeville bill at the Grand this week. Sullivan & Conside have assembled a number of the most interesting specialties on the bill, and they intend to make the most of them. The feature act is the acrobatic adventures of the five Onetti sisters, who come from across the Atlantic. Their work is new and novel and well executed.

"A Child of the Slums." Tomorrow there will be a matinee of "A Child of the Slums" at the Star theatre. This is the play which has started in to establish a new record for attendance at this house. "A Child of the Slums" is the kind of comedy drama which aims straight at the heart and goes unerring to its mark. The characters are clean, wholesome and healthy and the pathos is brought in logically and without straining after effects. Matinee Thursday and Saturday.

NORTH YAKIMA HAD DRY SESSION SUNDAY. (United Press Leased Wire.) North Yakima, Wash., Jan. 8.—The first Sunday in North Yakima in many years was experienced last Sunday as the result of the decision of Prosecuting Attorney Wends to enforce the provisions of the Sunday closing law against the saloons. No whatever was made by any of the liquor men to disobey orders and the day passed without a single arrest.

SUGAR BEETS FEED FOR POLLMAN'S BEEF. (Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Baker City, Or., Jan. 8.—Since last fall, Messrs. Pollman, grass, president of the Baker Loan & Trust company of this city, and F. A. Phillips, also of this city, have been feeding 2,000 head of cattle at the sugar beet refinery at Nampa, Idaho, that at this time are marketable and will be shipped. Over 100,000 beets have been shipped to Seattle in the past several days. Other shipments to various points will follow shortly.

WE CHALLENGE THE WORLD

We will forfeit $1,000 to any charitable institution for any dentist who can compete with us in crownwork and teeth without plates. Pay no fancy fees until you have consulted us. Our continued success is due to the uniform high-grade work done by gentlemanly operators. The prices quoted below are absolutely the best opportunity to get your money's worth which has ever been offered. We use nothing but the best materials.

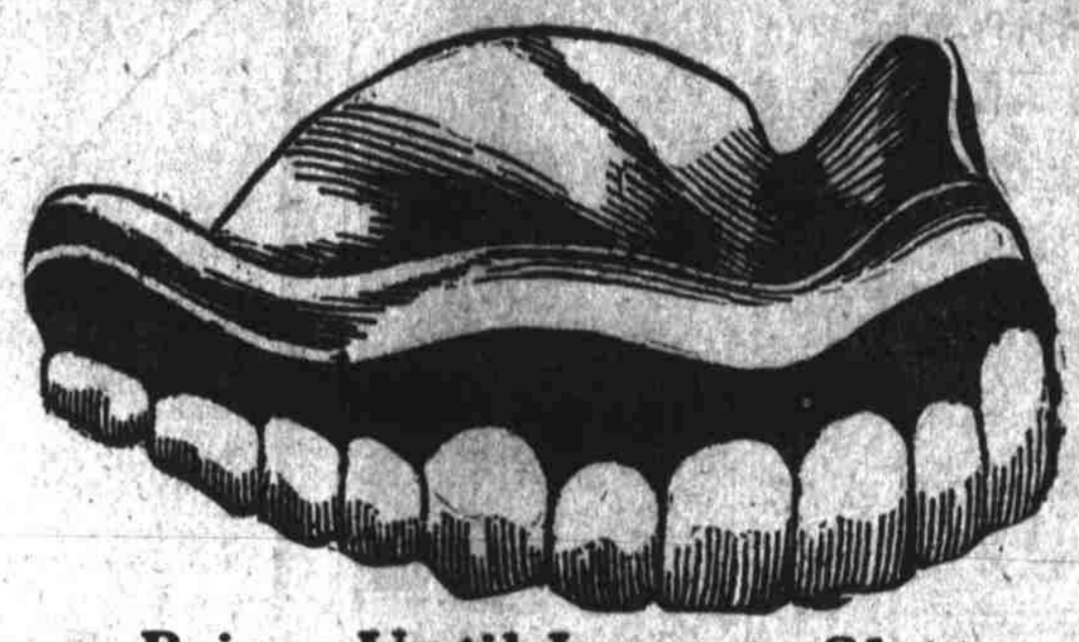

If you are bothered with a plate that does not fit, bring it in and we will reset the teeth on a plate that will give you entire satisfaction.

GUMS

If your gums are inflamed and bleed when you brush them, you have pyorrhoe, a disease which, if let run, causes recession and teeth to loosen. No matter how much money you pay the dentists to have your teeth fixed, if the disease remains untreated, your dental work will not be satisfactory. In this office we make a specialty of pyorrhoe. We ask every man, woman and child to call at our office and have their teeth examined, when our examiner will explain in detail, giving an itemized statement of all work to be done.

Nervous people and those afflicted with heart weakness can now have their teeth extracted, filled, crowned and bridged without the least pain whatever.

HAPPY WITH HIS TWO DOGS HE WAITED FOR DEATH TO CALL HIM

Along with his dogs, whom he counted his best friends on earth, William Kiley had lived in his little house on Twenty-first street since the death of his wife. Mr. Kiley was 65 years old and had lived much by himself.

When the messenger of death came to him New Year's night he was ready to go. He died at St. Vincent's hospital on the corner of 21st and Washington streets. One was a water spout; the other was just plain dog, but they had been together for 20 years, and for almost a year and he did not want them to starve to death.

AT THE THEATRES

Last Time "Blue Moon" Tonight. Schubert Bros' production of the beautiful musical-comedy success, "The Blue Moon," will be seen for the last time at the Hellig theatre, Fourteenth and Washington streets, tonight at 8:15 o'clock. This well-known firm are presenting the famous comedienne, James T. Powers, together with a splendid supporting company in this tuncful and picturesque offering. Phone Main 1 and A-112.

"Man of the Hour" Sunday. George Broadhurst's play of love, politics and graft, "The Man of the Hour," comes to the Hellig theatre for a week's engagement, opening Sunday night next, January 12, and no doubt large houses will greet this play from the fact that so much has been said and read about it. Seat sale opens Friday for the entire engagement.

Florence Roberts Tonight. Miss Florence Roberts, favorite emotional actress on the Pacific coast, opens her engagement at the Marquam this evening in Margaret Anglin's success, "Zaza." This play will be repeated Tuesday night, Friday and Saturday night and Saturday matinee. "Zaza" will be the offering. Miss Roberts, now an actress of national reputation, comes with two new dramas, each well recommended.

"A $10,000 Beauty." The coming week the Marquam will be devoted to musical comedy. Lewis and Lake will bring "A $10,000 Beauty," a sparkling and witty musical comedy.

A big choice. Extra trousers for men of liberal girth. Also big bargains for small men. Tomorrow 57 varieties of fancy worsted and cassimere trousers, worth $3.50 and $4—Special $2.85.

Self-Made Epitaphs.

EPITAPHS interest the curious, and lonely churchyards where unremembered stones lie tangled in the long grass contain some strange inscriptions. Perhaps many of them fall to convey the thought which was intended, but the purpose of such an inscription is to all in as few words as possible what the life stood for which the grave covers.

Looking at it in this way, we all make our own epitaphs; our lives stand for some one thing, and that, be assured, is not the consciously wrought thing. As the sum total of the unconscious influence of the life, expressed through the unremembered acts, the apparently unnoticed deeds which go to make up or are the expression of the inner life, the real character of the man or woman.

Recently a man died in Somerville, Massachusetts, whose name was Hadley. He had attained the age of 90 years so that he must not spend care in his life all his philosophy and creed. His passing was noted in a Boston paper, with a full headline which said "Never Spent a Cent." That is his epitaph. For that he lived, and with that accomplished his life. His whole life spent itself in living up to and expressing that thought.

So far as his life was known to any other man or woman it expressed but that one idea. It is a lesson in concentration if one chooses to look at that point. Everything that interfered with his ambition was cut off, suppressed, eliminated. Motives and impulses which had not to do with making and saving money were allowed no place in his life. He never married, for it would have cost more money to support a wife. He did not go to church nor to any sort of amusement because it would have cost something. When he went into Boston he walked, that he might not spend care. He once boasted that he had spent during his whole life not more than one dollar for carfare. He did not go to a barber's, but let hair and beard grow to save the time and money that shaving and haircutting would cost.

When he was older he went to work for a farmer at 12 cents a day. His next occupation was driving an ox cart at $8 a month and board. It is said that the beast consisted of salt codfish and water, but such as it was it sufficed. None of his earnings went into luxuries. By dint of saving and scraping he got enough together to buy out his brother's share in his father's property and sold it at a good profit. He established a brickyard and made money. When his 90 years were up he owned property worth over a million dollars, all honestly acquired.

Yet he had never spent a needless cent. He had ground his life down to the smallest possible position. Once and once only, he took a holiday trip.

Not in a Milk Trust Horlick's Malted Milk. The original and genuine. Avoid cheap substitutes at your Soda Fountain. A glass of Horlick's Malted Milk—hot—makes a delicious and refreshing lunch on a cold day. Ask for Horlick's at All Druggists. Stirring the powder in hot water makes a nourishing, digestible food; drink better than tea or coffee—no cooking. A cupful—hot—on retiring induces restful sleep.

He went to one of the small beaches outside of Boston. This was the only act of frivolity that is recorded of him. All the rest of his life was spent in an unwavering devotion to his business, that of saving money. Well, he did it. Such singleness of purpose could not fail to accomplish its end.

He saved all together something like one and a half millions which will now be handed over to his nephew. This money, ground out of the very life and soul of the man who gathered it, representing years of deprivation and narrowness of hardness of spirit, will now be speedily put into circulation, will be scattered in a small portion of the time it took to accumulate it, and how much the better will anyone be?

We are all making our epitaphs. We do not do it so gracefully as Robert Louis Stevenson did his; we may not be quite conscious of the thought that we are leaving behind us, yet each individual life stands for something, expresses some thought or stands for some one thing in the estimation of those with whom we come in contact. We have had recently in contact, those with whom we come in contact, example of a different sort of life from that of this soul-entitled millionaire, Hadley. A man who possesses much money to be sure, but who possesses also something of much higher value, has agreed to take over the claims of unknown hundreds of debtors in a wrecked bank. Not from fear of hinted prosecution; not because he was responsible for the money trouble which overtook the concern; not for love of publicity or to make his name famous, for these things he does not need; but because of a purely moral responsibility, Mr. Ladd has agreed to underwrite the whole deposit of the unfortunate banking concern. It is a large lesson for all of us to read in these modern days. In the history of banking and other commercial business it stands unique. This is one of the privileges of wealth, one of its legitimate uses which makes the world better and happier for its existence.

There are those who are too small of soul to understand it, and these will look for an ulterior motive. To those who know what Mr. Ladd stands for who understand something of the motives and purposes of his life and who know its history, it is just what it is, the unselfish, conscientious act of a man who cannot rest upon the thought of a possible injustice done to another.

Moral responsibility is a hard thing to explain. Either you see it or you don't see it, and many words do not make it more intelligible. The fact remains, that Portland takes a new and higher stand among the cities of these United States; that men's conduct in fellow men is strengthened, that right seems easier and ultimate good more certain because of this man's act.

Never spend a needless cent looks like a small creed in comparison, does it not?

Vegetables Both Food and Medicine. Cucumbers are said to be of great value in cooling the blood. Asparagus purifies the system by acting on the kidneys. Carrots and radishes purify the blood.

Cranberries are beneficial in malaria and erysipelas. Tomatoes, even canned, regulate the liver. Lettuce is excellent for insomnia. Spinach and dandelion are invaluable for kidney troubles.

MISSING MEN LIE UNDER THE SNOWS. (United Press Leased Wire.) Vancouver, B. C., Jan. 8.—W. McDavid, aged 40, a resident of Burton City, near Nelson, B. C., and Norman Crisfield, aged 25, an Englishman, who were working at the Millie Mack mine, 14 miles east of Burton City, left there the day before Christmas to spend the holidays in town. They have not been seen since. The news has just reached here that a party in search of them followed their trail to the edge of a precipice and it is believed they were into the ravine, bringing a snowslide after them.

TACOMA MEN ADMIT MAKING COIN MOLDS. (United Press Leased Wire.) Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 8.—After going through a sweating process at the hands of Thomas B. Foster, special agent for the treasury department, C. A. Quill and W. H. Hawley last night admitted that they had made the coin molds which were found in their possession when they were arrested Sunday. They will plead guilty in the federal court.

CHAIN GANG TRIED AS HOBO REMEDY. (Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Walla Walla, Wash., Jan. 8.—A chain gang, the first to be organized in several years, was put to work yesterday by Sheriff Hayland. Only three men were available, but these were put to work repairing streets and roads adjacent to the city. Hoboes serving out vagrancy charges will be given the preference, and it is expected that this will cause this element to fight shy of Walla Walla.
