

INSANITY IS THAW'S HOPE

Slayer of Stanford White Will Not Attempt to Prove That Brain is Right Until After Jury Brings in Its Verdict.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
New York, Jan. 11.—At no time since the night of June 25, 1906, when he sent a bullet crashing into the brain of Stanford White, the famous architect, has Harry K. Thaw been in as little danger of Sing Sing or the death-chair as now, on the eve of the actual opening of his second trial for the killing.

At no time has he been in such immediate danger of imprisonment in a cell at Mattawan, New York's asylum for the criminal insane.

Ask 18 men in New York if they believe Harry Thaw will be convicted and nine will tell you "no." The tenth will be in doubt. Ask 10 newspapermen or court attachés, who have followed the two trials closely, if they believe Thaw insane now and the chances are excellent for the entire 10 answering in the affirmative.

Evidence bearing on insanity at the present trial of Harry K. Thaw will be along different lines than in the first trial. One of Thaw's counsel today said that the defense will seek to prove that Thaw was insane only at the time he shot Stanford White and—no matter what the verdict of the jury—will leave his present condition to be determined later by a commission in lunacy.

Stuporous Melancholia.
The specific kind of insanity which Thaw's lawyers will advance as a defense is known as stuporous melancholia, which, according to medical experts, renders the sufferer incapable of knowing the nature and quality of his acts. It is said to be curable, and, unlike paranoia is not progressive.

The completion of the jury on Friday released the lawyers from the obligation of testifying, and all of today was spent in the preparing of speeches which will outline the defense and prosecution. When the case is called Monday morning it is expected that the district attorney will charge that Thaw was sane at the time he shot Stanford White.

Opposed to this will be Littleton's plea that his client was insane at the time of the shooting. Littleton will emphasize the erratic actions of Thaw up to the time of the shooting of White.

Mr. Littleton, when asked if the defense would touch upon the present mental condition of Thaw, said it was not incumbent for them to show that Thaw was sane now, but that the district attorney would be devoted toward showing that he was irresponsible at the time of the killing.

The prosecution will have more time at this second trial in presenting its case than it did at the first. District Attorney Jerome said it would take at least ten days to present the proof of the killing of Stanford White. At the first trial only two hours were used to do this.

The reason for the increase in time is due to the fact that the testimony of James Clinch Smith will be presented in direct testimony. Owing to his absence in Europe at the opening of the last trial, Mr. Jerome was forced to introduce his testimony when examining witnesses in rebuttal.

May Not Be Freed.
If the indicated position of the defense is carried out it will place Harry Thaw in a peculiar position if a verdict of acquittal is reached. It will be though declared innocent on the murder charge he will not be freed unless Justice Dowling so orders. It is thought highly improbable that he will do this, but will follow the usual procedure and order a commission in lunacy, in whose hands the ultimate fate of the young millionaire would rest.

Harry K. Thaw's counsel are in a clash about the advisability of again putting Evelyn Thaw on the stand to testify for her husband in his second trial.

ONE OF ROSEBURG'S NEW BUILDINGS

The Roseburg National Bank building, just completed and opened for business on January 6, is said by some to be the most modern structure of its kind in southern Oregon. The upper story is occupied by Forest Supervisor K. C. Bartman's offices, H. O. Lewis' photographic gallery and Dr. F. W. Haynes' office.

WHAT WOMEN WILL DO WHEN THEY RULE WORLD'S POWERS

(United Press Leased Wire.)
London, Jan. 11.—"What will women do when they rule?" asked a Berlin paper recently. Answers came from all over the world. Here are a few:

"They will have undisputed power to aid my life-work of supplying gowns to needy actresses."—Mme. Yvette Gilber.

"Destroy all but a few schools and encourage of minds free from traditions of modern wretchedness; until there is a new humanity reform can be put superficial."—Ellen Key, Scandinavian writer on marriage and maternity.

"We would restlessly seek office but would not spend fortune on getting into the Pacific to terrify our neighbors. We would strengthen industry, make the church more popular than the theatre and enforce total abstinence and open all schools to women."—Belva Lockwood, twice Woman's Rights candidate for the presidency.

"They will not differ much from the best men rulers. I don't believe in the superiority of either sex. The world is for both. They must sway its destinies."—Lady Henry Somerset.

a criminal case and I am perfectly satisfied to rest my case with them."

May Be Disagreed.
"The very worst we can expect is a disagreement," said one of the lawyers, "and even that will be a surprise."

Evelyn Thaw went to the Tombs shortly after noon and talked with her husband for more than an hour. Evidently the interview was pleasant, for she emerged smiling and seemed to be in the best of good humor.

She said her husband was feeling well and looking forward to the continuation of his trial. Monday she was summoned to an special teleconference with the jury so promptly. He was busy preparing for the next trial and would not be able to attend the jury. When Mrs. Thaw entered the prison her face was covered with a large white veil, but when she stepped into the courtroom she removed it and a number of photographers to give them an opportunity to take her picture.

The jury was selected in five days and when the last two members of the jury were sworn on Friday evening, court adjourned until 10 o'clock Monday when the real struggle for the young millionaire's life will begin.

It is an intelligent looking jury of 12 married men and two widowers. There are five gray heads in the box. None of the 15 is below middle age. Most of them are fathers of families.

Called by Forester.
The absorbing interest taken by the public in Thaw's fate has, strangely enough, proved the chief obstacle to filling the jury box. Of the 400 men summoned as special teleconference for the trial, only two or three were able to say that they had not formed a definite opinion of the guilt or innocence of the accused. There is a total of these select citizens were so violently prejudiced that the court declared them disqualified to serve.

It was reported today that one of the jurors will be dropped by the prosecution Monday. According to rumors about the criminal courts building the opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant held by this accepted teleconference is a catalyst. Few have determined to put some one else in his place.

defense had previously debated the advisability of summarily challenging this man, but since they have found that the product they are to drop him they will now fight to keep him in his place.

MRS. THAW ILL.
Prisoner's Mother Not So Bad She Cannot Attend Trial If Needed.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Pittsburg, Jan. 11.—Mrs. William Thaw is suffering from rheumatism. Her friends believe her enforced absence from her son's trial in New York is aggravating her condition. Her physicians believe otherwise.

"Mrs. Thaw is neither seriously or dangerously ill," said Attorney Frank Semple, for the Thaw estate, today. Attorney O'Mara stated that when Mrs. Thaw was taken to New York for her deposition there is no doubt that she would be there. "Believe me," he said, "it will not be necessary for anyone to come to Pittsburg to take Mrs. Thaw's deposition. There is no one half so interested in the outcome of Harry's trial as his mother and only death would keep her from testifying if she believed her testimony would benefit her son's case. As to the Thaws being short of ready money that is all foolishness. They have from testifying she believed they had enough money to pull them through without aid from others. When the proper time comes, Mrs. Thaw will go to New York accompanied by Mr. Semple. She wants to go now, but her physicians are restraining her, as her presence is not now needed.
