

ARISTOCRATIC HENS AND ROOSTERS STRUT AROUND UNDER NEW HONORS

Prizes Awarded by Judges at Thirteenth Annual Exhibit Meet Satisfaction—Show Is Best Yet Held by Association.

The thirteenth annual exhibit of the Oregon State Poultry association today nearing its close, is pronounced the most successful show yet held by the organization. The exhibition will be open three days more, at East Alder street and Grand avenue, and will close Tuesday afternoon with a baby show in which all mothers will be permitted to enter their babies for a prize. Tuesday night the annual election of officers will take place and a stirring time is expected. It has been predicted that all the old officials will be ousted from office and new men put in their places. There has been considerable politics in the association preceding the show this year, which may result in a disruption of old connections.

However, the class of birds is improving yearly and the public is becoming more interested in aristocratic chickens. The location on Grand avenue has proved to be a good one and the patronage offered has been greater than it was last year when the show was held on Front street. The only objection in the lack of room in the east side building used for the show.

More than 1,000 birds, including the pigeons, are included in this year's exhibit. There was a slightly larger number last year but the class of poultry shown was not as high.

A great deal of interest was manifested in the awards of special prizes which were as follows:
Kinghouse cup, for the best White Wyandotte cockerel, won by D. N. Lash; Northwest Poultry Journal cup, for the largest and best display of Rhode Island Reds, won by James Raitt; J. C. Murray cup, for best collection of White Wyandottes, won by D. N. Lash; president's cup, offered by E. H. Awards Satisfactory.

The decisions of the judges as revealed by the awards are generally well accepted by the exhibitors and the executive board has been congratulated on its fortunate choice of judges. J. W. Headlee of Everett, Washington, has been especially mentioned as a competent judge of poultry, particularly by the Barred Plymouth Rock people. The other judges were F. Fenwick and E. Carlisle of Portland.

In the pigeon and pet cock classes the judging was done by Thomas Wilkinson of Nainaimo, British Columbia, and his work has also been commended highly. Knowledge of pigeons must be thorough in order to make fair awards as the classes are more or less closely allied. The decisions in the poultry section was as follows:

EDITORS COMING FROM ALL PARTS

Meeting to Be Held This Week Will Be Largest in History of Association.

One of the largest meetings of the kind ever held in the state will be the convention of the Oregon Press association, to be held in Portland Friday and Saturday, January 16 and 17. Editors are coming from the most remote parts of the state. Every county will be represented and nearly every town. A letter received by the executive committee from the chairman of the Marion county editors states that every newspaperman in his county will be here.

For several years the State Press association has been unsatisfactory as an organization, the meetings have been more for pleasure than business, with the result that the newspapers have not stood together as they should. The coming meeting is for business only, and with the large number of editors who have already secured tickets to the meeting, a stronger and better organization is assured.

County organizations have been formed in nearly every county to carry out the work of the state association in counties where such organizations have not been formed, county meetings for that purpose will be held during the convention.

Excellent speakers are to be present and an interesting and instructive program has been prepared. The meetings will be held in the Knights of Pythias hall.

READER'S CARD MUST COME BACK WITH BOOK

A new rule will be enforced in the circulating department at the public library on and after February 1—the reader's card must accompany every book returned. For each book returned after that date without the card a fine of five cents will be charged.

The fine folder articles plates recently added to the library will be on exhibit for another week in the art reference room.

The most popular exhibit the library has ever had is now installed upon the landing between the two floors. It is the history of the year 1907 in cartoons. The leading papers of the country have been carefully searched for this material and the cartoons have been cut out and mounted and are hung upon the walls in chronological order. A cordial invitation is extended to all those interested in this form of art.

The following magazines have been added to the periodical room this year and may be found on file: American Journal of Archaeology, Dramatic News, Economic Geology, Geography, Musical Times, New England Historical and Genealogical Register, Philippine Journal of Science, Rural New Yorker, Suburban Life, Textile World, Record, World Today, Inland Architect, Architectural Reprint, Mining Record, Mines and Minerals, Mexican Mining Journal, Boating.

YOUTH TURNS THIEF TO GET SOMETHING TO EAT

Hungry and Cold He Asks Advice of Officer Who Tells Him to "Break Into Jail."

A 17-year-old boy turned thief Friday night because he was hungry and cold and had not slept in a dry, warm bed for many nights.

"How can I get something to eat," he asked of a policeman whom he met on lower Third street. His shoes and clothes were sodden and the gnawing at his stomach deepened the natural fear that every homeless wanderer has for a man in blue uniform and the bright badge of authority. "Don't know," was the not unkindly response, "unless you break into jail."

The words of the bluecoat and speculating how best to carry the advice into execution. Forming a hasty resolve he entered a gun store at Third and Burnside streets and asked to see a revolver. The proprietor handed one out from his stock. Oliver took it and ran into the street and ran into the arms of Detectives Kay and Kelm who chanced to be passing at the moment and whose attention was attracted by the outcry made by the proprietor of the store.

"Now I guess I will get something to eat," he said, as he was led away to the station by the officers. Then, as a sort of afterthought:

"Say, Mr. officer, is it warm in the prison?" No amount of persuasion would induce young Oliver to tell of his home or his relatives. "I don't want them to know about this," he would say. "I tried to be honest, but I was so hungry and cold, and the policeman told me this was the only way he knew of." But with all his assumed manliness the youth could not repress the tears that forced themselves to his eyes, or the sobs that weakness and shame brought to his throat.

Prohibition leaders in Michigan have endeavored to start a gubernatorial boom for Joseph L. Hudson, the wealthy Detroit merchant. Mr. Hudson was a Democrat with anti-saloon sentiments, and is not likely to run on the Prohibition ticket.
