Stamping Out a Nation's Curse

By Ada Wallace Unruh, Corresponding Secretary State W. C. T. U.

I note with much pleasure the action of the "Independent Order B'nai B'rith" of Portland, in the matter of the white slave trade. Our American people have been slow to believe that such a thing as the importation of girls and women to fill the depleted ranks of the most pitiful class that the sun shines on, can exist. There has been for some time an abundance of proof of this traffic and various societies, notably the National Purity Association and the W. C. T. U., have been studying the situation to find the most hopeful point of attack.

To bring the facts to the attention of the people so that they may obtain credence has commended itself as one of the first things to do, and the arousing of the people has been most encouraging. To build up a feeling of personal responsibility for this awful condition seems the next thing needed. It would seem self-evident that all men and women should feel this responsibility as soon as convinced of the existence of the evil, but the prejudice of the whole past against touching this unclean thing, even to assist in its eradication, today keeps many otherwise good men and women from lifting their hands in this pitiful crusade.

Would Work Double Hardship.

It is to be hoped that other philanthropic organizations of Portland will tender cooperation with this one that has undertaken to lead in this movement. It has long been known to those that there was need of much reform work in Portland. The trouble is that publicity in a case adds a greater burden to the one already disgraced.

The remedy is a law, providing for trials of this kind behind locked doors, with a perfect guarantee that the name of the victim shall never be known in public. Such a law ought to be passed by our next legislature.

But while we are giving thought to this we ought to be making ready a punishment, commensurate to the crime. The case of the City Hall buffet car doubtless be duplicated but that fact makes it all the more necessary that this place shall be strictly dealt with. What matters it that the woman chances to be more than 18 years of age, does that in the slightest degree do away with the shame to the city upon the men and their homes is of even more consequence.

The Way in the South.

We of the north can with ill grace charge that prohibition is more necessary for the south, because of the menace of the black population to the safety to women, than it is to the north, in the face of this revelation of shamelessness and crime. I dare to say that in all the annals of crime in the south that the blackman cannot exceed this story of the City Hall saloon in baseness. Where does the argument that prohibition in the south is a race issue, fall now. And do you for a single moment think that if this case were in Georgia or Alabama that the courts would haggle for one minute over the age of the victim, as to whether she were 15 or 60.

A visit to Junction City, Oregon has been of interest in the study of the local option law. In common with other dry territory they are in the struggle to make their town in fact what it is in name a "dry" town. From the standpoint of one who has watched this struggle to make those who have hitherto trampled law under their feet obedient to it I believe that Oregon cities and towns are to be congratulated that they are doing as well as they are, with their short experience in meeting the evasions of an exceedingly elusive enemy. It was of interest to know that the liquor men of Junction are of the opinion that they are indebted to the W. C. T. U. for the victor of local option in the place. One of their deposed saloonkeepers was heard to say in discussing the situation, "It is them d— fool W. C. T. U. women that have made all of this trouble."

Mrs. Helen Haber, a tiny and gentle woman of Huguenot ancestry and southern birth, has been the leader of the white ribboners in this place many years, and the saloonkeepers have a special hatred for her and I am sure that Mrs. Haber considers their antipathy a compliment.

Two Maladies.

Mrs. Margaret Houston for a long time identified with the W. C. T. U. of Junction and now a member of Central Union, Portland, comes in for her share of epithets at the hands of the saloonmen of the place. Some of the names that the liquor men have applied to these talented and highly respected ladies would not look well in print. I am wondering how long good men will be in getting their eyes open to the power of the saloon itself to destroy respect for womanhood.

Oregon will have to seek, in common with other local option and prohibitory territory, the passage of a law that will put liquor shipped into a point strictly under the operation of the law of that place. North Carolina has given us the text of a law that has passed the place of delivery of intoxicants is the place of sale, thus putting under the ban of the law the all too common shipments of intoxicants into "dry" territory. Much legislation will be needed to make the local option law operative, but Oregon will not have the long struggle to find effective laws that some states have had as we can profit by the experience of the older prohibition states.

I am told that in Coburg, from which this is written, one of the "blind piggers" was taken violently sick the day the posters announcing my meetings were put up, and had a serious relapse when an anti-saloon meeting for a few days later was announced. I have not learned the name of his malady.

Capitol Graft Cases.

(United Press, Leased Wire.)

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 27.—What promises to be the most notable prosecution of alleged public grafters that has ever taken place in this country was begun in the Dauphin county court today, when the cases of 14 men charged with conspiracy to defraud in building the new capitol building gained currency even before the building had been completed and dedicated. A capitol investigating commission was appointed to probe the matter to the bottom and the result of its report was wholesale indictments of public officials, politicians, contractors and others. These
