WEATHER REPORT

The temperature at Portland at 8:15 a. m. today was 26 degrees.

The western high pressure area is now central over western Montana and fair and cold weather continues in this district. A disturbance of decided character is central off the California coast. It has caused moderately heavy to heavy rains in northern California. The Oklahoma disturbance has moved northeastward to the lower lake region and increased in energy. This storm has the unusually low barometer reading of 29.18 inches at Detroit, Michigan. It has caused heavy snows in the Mississippi valley, heavy rain in the middle and south Atlantic states, and high winds over a wide area along its track from Oklahoma to the lower lakes.

The indications are for fair and continued cold weather in this district tonight and Sunday.
