is true of the Oregonian's pipe dream method. An objection to one is an objection to the other. Every step under the two plans, from the announcement of candidacy to the night of election, is exactly the same...

By each system the party from among one or more persons nominates a candidate. Under each system the party candidate is voted for in the election. Under one system, according to the Oregonian, the winner would be "the people's choice," but in the other would not...

Portland, the commercial and transportation center of this great region, will be more directly benefited. This business will at first employ hundreds of men for many months in constructing their plants, and then hundreds of men permanently, who will make their homes here and many of them will be men with families...

Portland is all right. It is just beginning to come into its own. There are no hard times here. The little wave of depression will soon be past and forgotten. Push and pull for Portland, for Oregon, for the Pacific northwest...

BECAUSE it is spokesman for the politicians who propose, if possible, to elect a legislature that will take away from the people their right to nominate candidates in the primaries, their right to select senator, their right to make laws and their right to veto laws and appropriations...

Then every attempt, by every plan of nomination or election, does not secure "the people's choice" and is humbug. Every governor, every secretary of state or other officer that has been nominated by a convention was nominated by a minority...

and audacious violators of the law would be revoked, but in only two or three cases has this been done, and perhaps then only to allow the places to run under a transferred license. The people are becoming tired of this apparent protection of lawbreaking saloons on the part of the council.

Lawbreaking saloon keepers need a few warning examples, actual bona fide revocations of their licenses and closing up of their places. Neither they nor anybody connected with them should be given another license, at least until after a long period of probation. This is due not only to the community at large and to the law itself, which councilmen are sworn to uphold, but it is due to saloon keepers who do obey the law.

There seems to be a coterie of councilmen, with Mr. Driscoll as their chief spokesman, who are the especial friends of these lawbreaking saloon keepers. It is quite time these public servants turned their able efforts in the opposite direction—that of upholding and enforcing the law and protecting the interests of 200,000 people, instead of laboring so earnestly for lawless saloon keepers and their backers.

SCRAPs of testimony picked up from the utterances of railroad traffic officials on the witness stand, in the interstate commerce commission hearing of the Willamette valley lumber manufacturers' case, have thrown considerable light on the professional attitude maintained by the railroad managers toward the industrial development of the Pacific northwest. It is their belief that, so far as manufacturing is concerned, the natural resources of this region should be held undeveloped until some time in the future when, in the judgment of these officials, Oregon resources can be exploited to the highest possible profit of the railroads.

C. H. Markham, when general manager of the Southern Pacific lines, in Oregon, put in a rate of $3.10 per ton on Willamette valley lumber shipped to San Francisco and bay points. The rate encouraged mill men to build up the lumbering industry and invest money in timber along these lines. It also increased the revenues of the railroad enormously and placed it on a profitable basis. When Markham passed on and Traffic Director J. C. Stubbs came upon the scene he asserted that his predecessor had made a mistake in establishing the $3.10 rate, and gave as his reason that "Oregon lumber should have waited until the depletion of other forests, when it would have brought better prices and paid better rates."

It develops, as might have been expected, that union labor men are in favor of the primary law and Statement No. 1. They apprehend the situation correctly and clearly. Under the former machine and boss system workingmen had scarcely more voice in the government of state, county or city than so many dry horses. Under the primary law they have as much voice as any equal number of other people. They will help maintain the law.

considered a great political prophet, but it is nevertheless only a guess, as yet. Here are some of the epithets uttered regarding President Roosevelt's message by the Chicago "Business Man," a spokesman for "male-factors of great wealth," and possessors of swollen and stolen fortunes: "Venomous, socialistic, personal vituperation, inflammatory talk, slims of suspicion, has positively checked initiative and enterprise." Dr. Day no doubt delights to read this periodical.

Well, really, honor bright, was the election of Chamberlain and Lane a great calamity to this state and city? Did it destroy all "basic principles" of government? How silly a machine organ can become. Think of one old servitor of the trusts and railroads legislating for 80,000,000 helpless people! If Admiral Evans is troubled so much with rheumatism, why didn't he take along a lot of bees? Rainsul should come to this country and join a trust. He could thus kidnap millions at a clutter.

Some cities are worried with "black hands" and "red hands," and might welcome some "yellow" hands for a change. The Oregonian posing as an exponent of political virtue and civic righteousness causes all old residents to smile. It is reported that Governor Johnson held he liked to hear Bryan talk. Then at least one respect Johnson and Bryan agree.

Many homeseekers are arriving at Hermiston. Wheat never looked better in eastern Oregon in February. One Imbler, Union county, hound has killed 12 coyotes this winter. Gilliam county farmers think they see big money in raising more stock.

Thousands of hides are shipped yearly from Umatilla county to California. Why not a local tannery? The recent storm have greatly improved the Port Orford agate beach, and there seems to be a limitless supply.

Medford's postoffice has long since surpassed the required $10,000 annual receipts necessary to secure free mail delivery. The receipts for the year ending January 31, 1908, total $11,061.55. Each month sees an increase of 35 per cent over the receipts of the same month a year ago.

Small Change. This is the month of five pardays, and the year of 63. So far C. W. Morse refuses to change his initials to R. E. Portland is destined to grow in greatness faster every year—If. Study the proposed tax amendment. Don't vote from preconceived prejudice.

Still congress makes no move to pass that employers' liability law urged by the president. The machine ringsters have a faithful if a not very discreet organ in the Oregonian. "Jack" Matthews is very solicitous for liberal observance of the federal constitution. Strange; no news came from San Francisco yesterday that the Ruff case had been postponed.

The machine politicians will have a hard job fooling either the granagers or the union labor men. Possibly political parties may be necessary, but partisan politics has been a curse to the country. Think of one old servitor of the trusts and railroads legislating for 80,000,000 helpless people!

They Consider Him Crazy. of Course. From the Washington Post. Representative Edwards of Georgia, a new member, is much exercised over what he considers a waste of time in the house in talking about revising the laws, when there are so many matters pressing that would benefit the "plain people." Yesterday he introduced a resolution to compel members to get down to work at 9 o'clock the morning in the noon.

A Bugle Call to Duty. From the Des Moines Capital. President Roosevelt has been the target of the Washingtonians ever since he entered office. He has been accused of letting his favorites escape when they were accused. He has been charged with enlarging his list of "undesirable citizens" from those who do not like him most. His latest message urging new laws for the control of corporations has not done much to cause him to be a new target for gossip on the part of the Washington office-holders or those who desire to hold office.

The Coming Age. It will be ripe in reason, it will be strong in love. The new time, the better time, the time of the crown of God's endeavor, and some of joy will ring on earth, and reach to realms above. When men shall learn to live in love together.

Shall the Woman Woo the Man? By Mrs. John A. Logan. Doubtless a woman has the right to try to win the man upon whom her affections are centered, and beyond question the right has been exercised many times.

The only question is as to the means employed. If she steps outside the bounds of propriety and womanly modesty, she is exceeding her right and will probably fall in her designs by provoking disgust and aversion in the mind of the man she attempts to win. The question of rights should not enter into the relations of men and women, both should observe the right and proper laws governing their intercourse and avoid at all times familiarity—an unfeeling source of contempt.

Mrs. Eddy in Concord. Speaking of Mrs. Eddy's removal from Concord, N. H., to Boston, the Concord Patriot says: "Mrs. Eddy was loved in Concord, and she takes with her the abiding affection of our people, not because of what she has done, but because of what she has done, and the expectations entertained by the people of Concord as to what, in the future, she might do for them."

Oregon Sidelights. Many homeseekers are arriving at Hermiston. Wheat never looked better in eastern Oregon in February. One Imbler, Union county, hound has killed 12 coyotes this winter. Gilliam county farmers think they see big money in raising more stock.

This Date in History. 1600—Charles X of Sweden died. Born November 8, 1822. William and Mary enthroned in England. 1760—The British warship Ramilies, with 132 guns, captured the French ship on a voyage that ended in a wreck and the loss of all on board except two.

George B. Davis' Birthday. Major-General George B. Davis, judge-advocate-general of the United States army, was born February 13, 1847, at Ware, Massachusetts. After his graduation from West Point in 1871 he pursued a course of legal study at Columbia university. In his career of more than 30 years in the army General Davis rose through the various grades to his present rank and saw service in many parts of the country.

Woman and Nicotine. THE people who know are telling us that the sway of Mrs. Lady Nicotine is on the increase and that constantly more women are joining the ranks of the after-dinner smokers. If the London women do it, of course it will become fashionable in New York. If it is fashionable in New York it will become so all over the United States. And what are we going to do about it?

It is not a pleasant picture. Despite the fact that the world which we call civilized, despite the fact that the intolerant will cry "goody-goody," the opinion is offered here and now, in a womanly way, that women should smoke. It is lady-like to carry petticoats around in one's carriage, and to bestow on the cheeks of the young and unwomanly and revolting to see a woman's opinion offered here and now, in a womanly way, that women should smoke. It is lady-like to surround one's self with dozens of soft sofa cushions and to spend the winter in the house with maroons and novels of unavowed reputation. All these things are permitted to the lady. But in the matter of smoking, which they do not permit to womanhood.

Housekeeping Hints. CREAM is often regarded as rather a luxury in towns. The following is, however, an excellent and cheap substitute. Take a clean enamel sauce pan, rinse it in cold water to prevent the milk from burning, then pour in one pint of milk, and place it upon the stove, and when it begins to boil, add an egg, draw the pan off the fire, and stir the egg gently. Beat a yolk of egg for a few minutes, pour into a jug, and leave until cold.

The Housekeeper's Hint. BREAKFAST. Grapefruit, Scrambled Eggs, Fried Hominy with Maple Syrup, Raisins. LUNCHEON. Clam Bouillon, Macaroni with Tomatoes, Corn Fritters, Orange Jelly, Turkey Dinner. Rice Toad Soup, Roast Chicken, Green Gravy, Stuffed Potatoes, Peas and Pecan Salad, Peach Pickling, Lemon Sauce, Cheese, Coffee.

Oregon Victimized. From the La Grande Observer. Poor Oregon! How she has suffered for years in being represented in congress by delegations that have permitted a few federal office appointments to cause such deep breaches that the state has lost its united strength. During the Sibley-Mitchell era, Oregon was divided and has been up to the present time. What do the great majority of the voters and business interests of this great state care one whit, whether Mr. Jones is registrar of the Burns land office, or whether Mr. Smith occupies the position of collector of the great state?

Ringsters All Agin It. From the Seaside Signal. Statement No. 1. All the old ringsters are "agin it"; the Oregonian is "agin it"; the registers and receivers of the old offices are "agin it"; the postmasters are "agin it"; Geer is "agin it"; and—well that's enough!
