

PRETTY ex-SENATOR DROPS STATEMENT NO. 1, BUT TURNS EYES AND ATTENTION SALEMWARD WHERE HE PINS LARGE BUNDLE OF HOPE.

Frederick W. Mulkey has not lost hope. He still sees afar off, but still visible to the naked eye, the alluring rainbow of the senatorial toga as worn by himself in Washington, only he has apparently changed his allegiance from the ranks of Statement No. 1 and is putting his trust in a divided legislature, an old-time senatorial battle at Salem and the proverbial swiftness of the fabled black horse.

In other words, Mr. Mulkey would like to be a dark horse at Salem next January and in order to be one with prospects he would like to see a small, or if possible a large, coterie of friends unpledged by Statement No. 1 in the legislature to come to his aid at the psychological moment when one of the darkened stalls into the light of victory.

Mr. Mulkey announced himself a candidate for the United States senate on the Republican ticket some long time ago before there were other candidates in the field. He was then a solid on the Statement No. 1 platform and spent some time in making a tour of the state in the interests of the candidate. Upon his return to Portland his campaign lagged and one morning it was announced that Mr. Mulkey had decided to withdraw from the contest, he stating that he had not received the support from the champions of Statement No. 1 that he was led to believe.

The announcement by Mr. Mulkey that he would retire from the contest naturally put him aside as a senatorial possibility so far as the public mind was concerned, but he has now come back into the light once more from a point quite near his.

According to the story that is being passed around discreetly in political circles Mr. Mulkey has evidently become reconciled with the idea that there will be enough anti-Statement No. 1 members in the legislature to start something which the senatorial election becomes the order of the day. He has figured it out that there is strong probability that Governor Chamberlain, if he runs for the senate, may be elected, and that he will vote in June. Out of this he expects to see a fight arise.

Where There's Life There's Hope. With this argument as a basis for his hopes Mr. Mulkey has been probing in this gentlemanly way into the legislative situation. Men in Portland who are prominent in business and politics are being asked whether they would not become candidates for the legislature under an anti-Statement No. 1 ticket.

Mr. Mulkey himself has made the request in some instances and from his talk it has been gathered that he would be pleased to be a dark horse should become available to the struggling legislators. It has been gathered from the conference he has had with the senators that Mulkey would like to have a few unpledged friends in the legislature to serve in an emergency in the event of a drawing to it more and more votes until the mystic 46 has been registered for him.

Machine Loses Power. This change of front on the part of Mr. Mulkey can be pointed to as another evidence of the causes which are underlying much of the present political movement in Oregon. Those who are following the development of the legislative fight have noticed from the first that the machine has been unable to stand against the principle embodied in the primary law are the old-time politicians from whom the law was sprung.

Many of the men now appearing as candidates for the legislature under Statement No. 1 are doing so under pledge to vote for Senator Fulton, irrespective of whether he received the majority of the votes in the election in April. Whether this agreement would be carried out to the letter depends upon the election of the machine and after that upon the amount of pressure brought to bear by other candidates in the event that Senator Fulton was not to receive the nomination or the major vote.

Through it all, however, runs the trail of the old machine leaders who are making their last stand against the principles of the primary law which gives the election of United States senators as directly into the hands of the people as it is possible to do without an amendment to the constitution of the United States.

FOUND: MAN TRYING TO END LIFE; REWARD: LARGE KICK IN STOMACH. Considerable mystery attaches to a telephone report received at police headquarters at 3:30 o'clock this morning. The person making the report stated that he had found a man in the act of hanging himself with a rope to a high picket fence at the corner of First and Montgomery streets. The informant went on to relate that he had seen the man down, an act that was rewarded by the would-be suicide, who gave expression to his disapproval by kicking his rescuer in the stomach. He then set off at a run in the direction of the river, leaving his savior to telephone the facts to the police.

OREGON TIMBER AND FORESTRY ASSOCIATION DENOUNCES HIGH ASSESSMENTS LEVIED.

Just assessment and taxation of Oregon timber lands was discussed at the meeting of the Oregon Forestry Association last night, and the general policy of the public officials with regard to ownership of timber lands was attacked in a paper by H. D. Langille. The evil effect this attitude has upon forestation was discussed by H. J. Brown, recently of the Yale Forestry school and the government forestry service.

In his very careful and interesting review of the subject of timber land taxation, Professor E. B. Corvick held that the tendency to level excessive taxes on standing timber lands has grown to such an alarming extent that many investors in Oregon lands are frightened away by the excessive assessments. In some cases the lands have been assessed so high that the owners have been compelled practically to abandon them.

He related an instance of a California man who recently bought several tracts in Yamhill county for sale for $2,400, but was notified that the taxes amounted to $4,700. He declared that the holding of the land by individuals or corporations had resulted in benefit to the state inasmuch as the forests had been more carefully guarded against fire, there was no waste of land, and there was no waste of timber.

Taxation from the standpoint of forestry was discussed by Mr. Brown who pointed out that the high tax on timber resulted in a rapid deforestation of the country, it being impossible to conserve timber any length of time, owing to the piling up of taxes. For this reason much timber that is still immature is sacrificed rather than to hold it for future use.

Mr. Brown suggested that many of the taxes that have been tried elsewhere, such as taxing the timber when it is cut, and taxing the land irrespective of whether it has been used as a crop, as each crop matures.

Prior to the reading of the papers the election of officers for the year was held. Professor E. B. Corvick was re-elected president; Rev. A. J. Montgomery, Portland, first vice-president; Mr. J. J. Forman, first vice-president; Mr. D. M. Mott, Portland, secretary; G. W. Welster, Portland, treasurer; F. W. Sheldon and H. D. Langille, Portland, trustees.

Gortner are internal and cause him a great deal of suffering. So far the exact extent of injury has not been ascertained.

CAN'T PAY BILL WITH LEAD PILL

Frisco Court Scores Banker Who Threatened to Shoot Anxious Depositor. (United Press Leased Wire.) San Francisco, Feb. 15.—An ounce of lead is poor payment for the amount of money due this complainant, and you are morally guilty of a robbery, and you are unfortunally that you are not criminally guilty, commented Judge Conlan this morning in passing sentence on R. E. Ragland, president of the defunct Citizens' savings bank, who now faces a sentence of six months in the county jail for exhibiting a deadly weapon in a threatening manner, and an additional term of three months for carrying a concealed weapon.

The complainant in the case was I. Pozanski, a former depositor in the bank. The proceedings, according to evidence brought out, said Judge Conlan, "showed that the defendant had a pistol which he has ever come to the attention of this court. The complainant, although he is a common laboring man, and the defendant a bank president, is entitled to justice, and when he is assured he will be paid upon a certain day and then is disappointed several times by the defendant, and finally threatened with a revolver, is entitled to some consideration at the hands of the law."

The evidence shows that two promises to pay the complainant were made by the defendant in the name of the bank. The defendant had written a letter in the form of a promissory note was sent by the defendant to the complainant, promising to pay a certain amount of money. In the meantime the defendant engaged the complainant to work upon his buildings at Elmhurst street, and the defendant had asked the defendant bank $456 for painting and doing some work on the defendant's premises.

REFUSES TO PLEAD, ACCEPTS COUNSEL OR FURNISH BAIL, AND IS COMMITTED TO JAIL.—TALE OF GOLDEN DREAMS AND RUIN.

Osborne, Feb. 15.—Otto F. Olson, the defaulting clerk of the Willamette school board, was arraigned before Judge Stipp yesterday afternoon on the charge of embezzlement. He maintained a dogged, sullen silence throughout all the proceedings in the court, refusing to plead to the charge, refusing legal assistance and refusing bail. His refusal to plead left no ground for examination on the charge, and could only be construed as a waiver, so he was bound to answer to the charge in the circuit court next April, and his bond was fixed at $5,000. Refusing to furnish bond, which friends offered to sign for him, he was taken to the county jail.

Community Shook. Owing to his high standing in the community and his prominence in business and religious circles, the revelations of his alleged defalcations fell upon this city and his home town, Willamette, close by, like a thunder-bolt. The Columbia Trust Company of Middleton, Connecticut, a bond for $5,000 of the Willamette school district, which had matured and to redeem which a special tax had been levied. The money was in the hands of the county treasurer and a warrant for the sum was drawn by order of the school board and made payable to Olson as clerk. The school board, however, which company and receive the cancelled bond. He offered altered letters from the trustee company, but the board, explaining delays in not returning the bond, and at the same time, to keep the trust company quiet, he paid the interest on the bond, which was $1,000. Capen, chairman of the board, wrote to the company for an explanation of their failure to return the bond, and then the company, which was the trustee company, answered him, informing him that the bond had not been redeemed.

They Ask, How Much More? After his arrest Olson admitted he had embezzled $1,000. He had received money entrusted to him as an officer, and the question is now, how much more? The Methodist church of this city, of which Olson was treasurer, and the financial agent, is a pretty reliable religious corporation, owning valuable property in the hands of the church, and church an annual rental of about $1,000, all of which came into his hands as the church's agent. The books of the church, however, were not audited, and the result will soon be known.

Rev. S. C. Blackwell, the pastor of the church, and hitherto a warm personal friend of Olson, was yesterday, but he refused to talk with him.

The Forged Bond. His present bondsmen are Charles Albright, T. A. Pope, W. E. Pratt and W. M. Shank. The names of Messrs. Pope and Pratt appear as sureties on his official bond for $5,000, but the bond pronounced a forgery. As anybody in this county qualified to do so, would have gone on his bond at that time for an amount he never knew, which is a forged bond was furnished when he could easily obtain the genuine article. The fact that he had the bond, and the money entrusted to him as an officer, and the question is now, how much more? The Methodist church of this city, of which Olson was treasurer, and the financial agent, is a pretty reliable religious corporation, owning valuable property in the hands of the church, and church an annual rental of about $1,000, all of which came into his hands as the church's agent. The books of the church, however, were not audited, and the result will soon be known.
