

BAPTIST YOUNG PEOPLE GIVE BANQUET

At the Immanuel Baptist church the Philatheas-Baraca banquet was given recently, which was the culmination of a spirited contest between the young men and women, in which each class had increased its membership from 11 in October to more than 40. The Baraca had 44 members to the Philatheas 41, so the young women were hostesses of the evening. The banquet was given in a program, presided over by Miss Hazel Ordman, president of the Philatheas, and included a vocal solo by Miss Myrtle Ewing, 15; Thomas Perkins, Canon City, 20; John Thomas, Madras, 12; James G. Scribner, Portland, 14; James Williams, Madras, 12; Frank W. Parker, Portland, 12; George J. Quimby, Portland, 15; Edwin E. Corey, Portland, 12; William Coulthard, Paulina, 12; James Gordon, West, 12; Anna Edes, widow Philip Edes, Portland; Green McMurry, Gresham, 15; Wade H. Puett, Mitchell, 11; Alexander Cockrell, Union, 12; William Davidson, Umatilla, 15; John H. Prescott, La Grande, 15; Thomas Adams, Portland, 12; John Dell, Prineville, 12; Joseph D. Chapman, Portland, 12; Tyrone P. Cook, Portland, 12; Richard M. Johnson, Pendleton, 15; Manley E. Hann, Troutdale, 18; James A. Sheffield, Portland, 12; Henry C. Ellis, Portland, 12; Nehemiah Gabriel, Bartlett, 15; Benjamin Van Buren, Madras, 12; William S. Myers, Condon, 12; Charles H. Craig, Richland, 15; Anton Hupprich, Canyon City, 12; William M. Ben Carson, 15; James C. Jay, Pendleton, 20; Henry H. Arbogast, Ritter, 12; Fred Niedermark, Portland, 15; Andrew M. Conaty, Sumpter, 12.

Stark and reading by Miss Sarah Griffith. With songs and yells composed for the occasion the company then proceeded to the banquet room. After a dainty supper E. T. Ludden, toastmaster, called for responses, which were given by the pastor Rev. A. E. Minkner and several of the young people.

abouts of the elder Rockefeller. I would go to his old home in New York state and search for two old ladies, who are now both grandmothers, who are in all probability half-sisters of the Rockefeller boys. I understand the old gentleman is very fond of them and has visited them frequently. "I once asked Frank if he knew them. He only smiled and said he did not care to talk about them; that he was not supposed to know nor care a great deal about his father's private affairs of that sort." Was In Retirement. It was reported last summer from Freeport that William Rockefeller was living at that town under the name of William A. Livingstone; that he received remittances of $3,000 per year from Cleveland from the Standard Oil company, etc. Now the New York World devotes more than a page to prove that the old man did live in Freeport under the alias stated, and died there. On the day following the first publication of the report, Frank Rockefeller said to a correspondent: "There is absolutely no truth that my father is living or has lived at Freeport, or anywhere near Freeport, or that he is or has been known anywhere as Dr. Livingstone. He is living quietly in retirement, and my reasons for not wanting him to be bothered by anyone are obvious. If you will realize how the old gentleman would be bothered by cranks and beggars of all kinds, were he to be known as the father of John D." And yesterday he said: "I have denied the last lie I am going to relative to the death of my father. When my father is dead I will see to it that his funeral notice is published. That notice has not yet been sent out. In due time and in due form, if I am still alive, that notice will be sent out. Of course, my father is a very old man. He has to die some time. The last time I saw him the indications were that he would bury me. If he is dead, I do not know it. "The whereabouts of my father concerns no one but his immediate family, and it is to protect himself from being hounded by cranks and others who would break into the peace and quiet of his retired life that he prefers to live in such seclusion as best suits his convenience, admitting to his retirement only a few close friends."

PORTLAND GAINS BY COURT RULING

Judge Hanford Holds Washington Commission Cannot Enforce Rates.

A decision rendered by Judge C. H. Hanford of the United States district court of Washington, in the suit to compel the O. R. & N. company to make a joint wheat rate from eastern Washington to Puget sound points, has the immediate effect of a victory for Portland wheat buyers and the O. R. & N. railroad company, but it is believed another effect will be that of antagonizing eastern Washington wheat buyers who may be of the opinion that they can get better prices from Puget sound buyers. The federal court declares that the Washington railway commission has no power under the state law to enforce joint rates in the present instance, and that the function of rate-making lies with the state legislature. It is probable the case will be carried to the supreme court of the United States, with the hope of getting an early settlement of the constitutional question involved. The decision is interesting to Oregon shippers in more ways than one. It brings up the question as to judicial functions and powers of a state railway commission, and the extent to which a state may exercise jurisdiction over a carrier which operates in and makes rates affecting other states. Judge Hanford, in his decision, said: "These three transcontinental railroads cannot be compelled to pool their interests in the wheat traffic without imposing on them burdens which will cripple them as carriers of interstate commerce and that enforcement of the order made by the state railway commission, requiring them to carry wheat originating on the line of the complainant over the line of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern railway, to the seaport cities of Puget sound at a joint rate, will have a direct effect upon interstate commerce by diverting the transportation of wheat destined to foreign countries from Portland to the ports of Puget sound. However laudable the purpose may be from the standpoint of Washington farmers, grain merchants and millers, such a handicap upon competition in foreign trade by state authorities trenches upon the powers of congress to regulate foreign commerce and justifies the carriers in invoking the power of a federal court to relieve them from obligations to obey the order." "The Washington state law is said to be weak in its terms respecting the rate making powers of the railway commission, and contains a clause delegating this power to the state legislature. It is likely that the governor of Washington will call a special session of the legislature to meet within the next few days and that a constitutional convention will be called to amend the state constitution and place the rate-making power in the hands of the railway commission."

ROCKEFELLER SR. STILL LIVING

Son Frank Says Father Is Not Dead, Although Very Old.

Philadelphia, Feb. 11--Another chapter was added to the mysterious and almost unknown history of William A. Rockefeller, father of the richest man in the world, when Frank Rockefeller, his third and younger son, denied that there was any truth in the story that his father died in May, 1906, and was buried in an unmarked grave at Freeport, Illinois. This denial might have more force if it were not that Frank Rockefeller was credited with saying, about a year ago, that no matter what reports might be made concerning his father, he would deny them all. To a representative of the press who had visited his ranch at Belvidere, Kansas, he said at Cleveland: "My father is still living. In spite of the fact that he was born in 1810. Where he is, only my brother William and myself know. Everybody knows I have no use for my brother, John D., and I make no secret of it. It would do no good to ask him where his and my father is." Inidentally, he said that John D. did not know where his father was. Kept John D. in Dark. It was gathered in Cleveland that John D.'s reputation of his father and his declaration some 35 years ago that the old man was dead, had angered William and Frank, and that, while they knew where their father was, they did not permit their brother to know. Another story regarding the strange career of the father of the Rockefellers was learned at Cleveland. It has not yet been printed, and only the great publicity given to what purports to be the inner history of the family warrants its repetition at this time. A man personally intimate with Frank Rockefeller said to the representative of the press last summer: "If I wanted to discover the whereabouts of the elder Rockefeller, I would go to his old home in New York state and search for two old ladies, who are now both grandmothers, who are in all probability half-sisters of the Rockefeller boys. I understand the old gentleman is very fond of them and has visited them frequently. "I once asked Frank if he knew them. STUDENT CONFERENCE AT WHITMAN COLLEGE

Sixty Girls From Institutions of Three States--Pendleton's Delegation Largest. (Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Whitman College, Walla Walla, Wash., Feb. 15--With an attendance of 60 outside delegates from the schools of Oregon, Washington and Idaho, the eastern student conference of the Young Women's Christian association opened its sessions yesterday. It is held under the auspices of the Whitman college Y. W. C. A. and will extend over three days. Delegations of girls are present from Pendleton academy, Weston Normal school, Cheney Normal school, University of Idaho, Lewiston Normal and Washington State college. The banner delegation is from Pendleton academy, which has sent 29 delegates. Washington State college has 12 and Weston Normal 10. The opening address was given yesterday by Professor N. F. Coleman of Whitman college. Bible study hour was led by Rev. Paul Rader of Portland. In the evening a religious conference was given to the visiting delegates at Reynolds hall by the Y. W. C. A. The principal speakers are Mrs. Jessie N. Honeyman of Portland, Miss Frances C. Gage and Miss Maude Ewing Ross, state student secretaries. This morning's sessions were devoted to association Bible study, religious meetings and mission study, conducted respectively by Rev. Rader, Miss Ross and Miss Gage. The conference address will be given by Mr. Rader. The conference sermon will be preached tomorrow by Rev. John C. Abella, on "World Citizenship."

Said to Be 170 Years Old. From the Tokio Yordusu Choho. In Kosaburo Fujimatsu, a resident of the province of Chikugo, there has been discovered the oldest man in the world. Fujimatsu is 170 years of age. Born in Yamazaki, Chikugo province, he saw wars of the feudal daimyos, participated in the Satsuma rebellion, watched the reconstruction of the empire and the establishment of the Meiji era with the seating of the present emperor in real power at Tokio. He was the father of seven sons, he had 18 grandsons and 48 great-grandsons.

"77" Seventy-seven for Colds and GRIP Grip seeks out the weak spots. If the throat and chest are tender, Grip lodges there. If a Catarrhal condition exists Grip strikes there. ON THE THRESHOLD OF FORTUNE DENNY DULIN

LOCATED IN THE WONDERFULLY RICH MINING DISTRICT OF GOLDFIELD

IF YOU NEVER READ ANOTHER LINE, READ THIS! If you absolutely knew that there were $1,000,000 in Chicago, merely waiting for you to come and prove your ownership of it; if the carfare to Chicago was $62.50 and you had only $50 in your pocket; if you had tried in every way to get the other $12.50 and had failed; if time was pressing and you had to hurry; what would you do? You would buy a railroad ticket as far as your $50 would take you and take your chances, when you arrived at that point, on raising the balance. At any rate, you would get that $1,000,000 if you had to walk the rest of the way. This illustration is analogous to the DENNY DULIN proposition. The former owners worked the DENNY DULIN properties as long as their money lasted. They located an immensely valuable body of ore at the bottom of their 105-foot shaft. Their last penny had been spent. They could go no farther. Several Portland men investigated the DENNY DULIN properties; they found the facts as set forth above to be absolutely true. They brought their proposition to Portland and all they ask now is, that a few more Portland people purchase a few more shares of the treasury stock. With this accomplished they will have sufficient funds to hoist the ore to the top and start paying dividends on the DENNY DULIN mine. That's all there is to it. IF YOU WILL TAKE THE TIME TO VISIT THE OFFICES OF THE COMPANY THE FACTS WILL BE PRESENTED TO YOU AND YOU CAN MAKE UP YOUR OWN MIND THEN, JUST CALL, THAT'S ALL.
