

LADIES WRANGLE OVER MRS. MANDALEY'S EVIDENCE

Woman's Police Court Testimony Given in Conspiracy Case Cause of Lengthy Legal Combat—Court Takes Matter Under Advisement—Witness Withdrawn.

Fireworks were for the most part cut out at the Wayne-Radding trial in the circuit court today. The attorneys seemed to be resting from their violent efforts of yesterday. Neither was there much to what the morbid appetites of the curiosity seekers who filled the courtroom and who had lined up in the hall from 8 o'clock until an hour and a half later when the court was convened.

Aside from the strenuous arguments made for and against the admission of a part of the testimony of Mrs. Wayne given during the preliminary hearing, there was but little to disturb the even tenor of the proceedings. Once the objection to some question Mr. Malarkey asked the witnesses, but no violent volcanic disturbance shook the court room, as on several occasions yesterday.

Tells of Mandaley's Visits.

Robert W. Anderson, a dentist on the sixth floor of the Hamilton building, was the first witness of the morning. He told the same story related by him at the preliminary hearing. He said the first time he had seen Mandaley was when Radding called at his office saying that he had a friend with the tooth ache, and making a date to have it treated at 5:30 on the afternoon of Tuesday, September 23.

The witness then told of other visits made by Radding and Mandaley, who had been the visiting friends. He had treated Mandaley's tooth, and on the following Friday after the first meeting Mandaley had come back to his office, saying he was expecting a woman to come there. He had waited until nearly 6 o'clock, when he had gone away.

On the evening of September 24 the witness said that Mandaley came to the office in a very nervous state. He said that his teeth hurt him, but Dr. Anderson testified that after an investigation he could not see how they could give him pain.

He, however, had made an examination and changed the temporary filling. In going into the hall for water, and he saw Radding peering into the crack in the door, which he was holding open just a little bit. The witness said he had come to the conclusion that the man was waiting for Mandaley, and had told the elevator boy to watch them.

Mandaley Knew of Visit.

Bert E. Haney, deputy district attorney, was called to the witness stand to tell of Mandaley's visit to the district attorney's office, following the assault at the mayor's office. Haney testified that Mandaley had said at that time that Radding, Mrs. Wayne and himself were in the Hamilton building. Mandaley had said the witness related that he went to the building at the request of Radding, who had told him to be on hand, as an official and woman were under investigation, that something was going to happen, and Radding wanted a witness to the affair.

C. A. Davies, now the engineer of the Hamilton building, but who was running the elevator on the evening of the affair in the mayor's office, was put on the stand. He told of having seen Mandaley come into the building, of his going down and back up to the sixth floor again. Of Dr. Anderson having asked him to keep watch on the man, as his actions were suspicious, and of the scene coming from the mayor's office and Radding's onslaught on the glass door of the private office. He said he saw the mayor and Mrs. Wayne struggling together, and that the woman then came out of the office and went down the elevator and on out of the building.

Object to Woman's Testimony.

Davies was extensively cross-examined by the defense, but was a cool witness, telling his story in a slow, calm way, which could not be shaken by the attorneys for the defendants. The principal contention of the day's session, arose from the effort of the prosecution to introduce a portion of Mrs. Wayne's police court testimony, stand to read the portions of the testimony desired from his original notes, but the defense raised such a storm of objection that the effort of the court to draw, pending the decision of the court on the admissibility of the evidence.

The defense claimed that the prosecution could not use the testimony of the defendant given at the preliminary hearing against her during the present trial of the case. The court, after listening to lengthy arguments from both sides, took the question under advisement.

Witness Tells Two Stories.

L. L. Mandaley remained on the stand during the early part of the afternoon yesterday. He told a story that was diametrically opposite to that of the preliminary examination. He denied that he had had any conversation with Radding about going to the Hamilton building.

He had testified at the previous hearing that Radding had come to him on the afternoon of September 23 and requested him to go to the Hamilton building. Now he holds to the story that he made his last visit to the building on the morning of September 24, and that he had no thought of Radding or of anything in connection with him.

On cross-examination, Mandaley testified that District Attorney Manning had threatened him with indictment for perjury just before he took the stand yesterday morning. He then told of the visit made to his house by Malarkey and T. G. Greene, made after he had failed to appear in court to visit them in Greene's office for the purpose of discussing his testimony. He also told of having gone to Seneca route's office on Sunday afternoon where he met Radding, Mrs. Wayne, Logan and McGarry. Logan had told him at that time that he wanted him to tell the truth.

The defense then tried to show by the witness that the first visit to the Hamilton building was made by Malarkey and Greene and Mrs. Fleischer had at-

NEGLECTED COLDS VERY DANGEROUS

Instructive Lecture at Mothers' Conclave at Jamestown.

At the recent mothers' convention at Jamestown the meeting was addressed by the venerable Dr. Harvey, the southern physician of national reputation. The principal topic of his lecture was the necessity of prompt attention to what most persons regard as a common cold. He stated that three-fourths of the dread diseases of the present day have their origin in common colds.

He also stated that his long experience has taught him that the most effective remedy for the quick relief of chronic and acute coughs and colds and throat troubles is a simple and safe use of what is known as the "Pineapple Concentrated Oil of Pine."

This is to be used in the following formula: Two ounces of the following ingredients: Concentrated oil of pine, half ounce Concentrated oil of pine, half pint of first-class whiskey, those to be mixed and used in doses of a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful every four hours shaking the bottle well each time. The ingredients are obtainable at any good prescription drugist and easily mixed at home. Care should be taken to get only the concentrated oil of pine which comes put up in dispensing in half-ounce vials securely sealed in tin screw top cases. The bulk oils and patent medicine imitations often put out in wooden boxes, usually cause nausea and other complications.

tempted to coerce him into telling a story for the prosecution, using debts outstanding against him as a club. Manning branded the statement made by Fouts to that effect as an infamous lie and Logan denied that so far as he was concerned, in the defense he made no such allegations and did not believe them to be true.

Preliminary Testimony Read.

Mandaley's testimony given at the preliminary hearing was read into the record, the operation furnishing a good deal of amusement to the court and spectators, as Malarkey read the questions and Logan the answers. The prosecution put Mrs. M. Carson on the stand. She had kept a lodging-house at 273 Columbia street and Mrs. Wayne had roomed there for some time. The witness said that Radding was a frequent caller and that he and Mrs. Wayne often stayed out till after midnight. She told of many men coming to see her lodger at all times of the day and night and said the only thing out of the ordinary in her behavior was that she had too many men callers.

Miss Louise McDonald, Mayor Lane's private secretary, testified to having written the letter of recommendation for Mrs. Wayne on September 23. She said that she had made a mistake in writing the letter and that the next day the mayor had told her the letter would have to be written over again.

She said she gathered from the instructions that not only would the typographical error have to be remedied but the letter of recommendation would have to be changed. Miss McDonald told of going to the mayor's private office just before six o'clock on the afternoon of the preceding day. As she came out, she said, Mandaley had come from the end of the hall, had walked up close to her, looked at her closely, and had then turned and gone back to where he had come from.

Radding Proposes Scheme.

Councilman A. N. Willis took the stand and told the same story he had related at the preliminary hearing. He said he and Devin had been making an investigation of alleged discrimination in the north end, and had hired Radding to do some detective work. Radding had come into Devin's office one day and told him that he had nothing definite but had added that he thought it would be a good joke to make the mayor's private office. He had seen women going up there. Willis said he and Devin had told Radding that they did not care what the mayor did in his private office and that they would have nothing to do with the scheme.

Mrs. T. E. Bell and her husband W. M. Bell told of Radding having roomed at their house for a time and of visits made there by Mrs. Wayne, who had been introduced as Radding's sweetheart.

Ben Peterson, a patrolman, testified to having seen Mrs. Wayne in a beer garden at Twenty-third and Thurman streets during the past summer.

CHAMBERS ASKED TO OPPOSE ALDRICH BILL

Communication Is Received From Merchants' Association of New York.

The Portland chamber of commerce is asked to take a position in opposition to the Aldrich currency bill and to assist in defeating its passage through congress. The chamber trustees will have a special meeting to consider this and other important matters affecting national policies.

Request for action on the currency question comes from the Merchants' association of New York, which has investigated the Aldrich bill and declared it to be inimical to the commercial interests of the country. The New York merchants' organization sets forth grounds as follows for opposition:

That the Aldrich bill is wrong in principle because it initiates the practice of basing currency upon fixed securities, such as railroad securities, municipal bonds and other long time paper that is not immediately convertible into cash at par in times when the money is most needed.

It is contended that note issues as well as deposits of banks are payable on demand, and a bank should have securities against such liabilities nothing but quick assets, such as actual cash, secured notes payable on demand, or commercial paper liquidating itself at par at the end of a short period of months.

The high tax which the Aldrich bill proposes to levy upon any issue of emergency to cause its early retirement is also objected to. It is urged that this tax must, in the last analysis, be paid by the borrower, and when increased as it would be by about one third under the reserve requirement, it would be oppressive and unnecessary, and its practice would provoke a disregard of the statutes against usury.

The chamber of commerce is asked to give the question immediate consideration and to communicate its views to the Oregon senators, also to Speaker Cannon and to the chairman of the finance committees of both houses.

DENTIST MAULE COMES BACK TO FACE CHARGES

Detective Kay returned from Boise, Idaho, this morning bringing with him as a prisoner George C. Maule, the dentist who is wanted here to answer to the charges of passing fictitious checks. Maule made a fight to avoid extradition, but the Boise judge before whom he insisted habeas corpus proceedings declined to grant him his liberty.

The specific charge against Maule is the passing of a worthless check for $1 on D. L. Houston, proprietor of the Houston house, 63 1/2 Sixth street. Since it became known that Maule had been taken into custody at Boise other complaints of a similar character have been lodged with the police.

GOVERNMENT RUINS PANAMA MERCHANTS

(United Press Special Wire.) Panama, Feb. 20.—The merchants of Panama and Colon have joined in appeal to the United States government commissaries against the government commissaries on the canal line, which sell goods so much cheaper than the merchants can do, that they are in danger of ruin by the competition, as everybody goes to the commissaries. A commission has been appointed to visit Washington and make a personal appeal to President Roosevelt and Secretary Taft.
