FULTON STRIKES BACK AT HENEY

DENIES EVERY CHARGE MADE BY PROSECUTOR

Reply Is Made in Straightforward Manner and Contains Reference to Letters and Documents Which Senator Claims Sustain His Assertions—Pays Respects to Others Who Have Assailed Him

The United Press obtained permission from Senator Fulton to summarize his reply to Francis J. Heney's charges that the senator is corrupt. The full text of Fulton's reply is not released until tomorrow morning, when it will be published in The Sunday Morning Journal. The reply is a lengthy but clear document of about 9,000 words.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Washington, Feb. 22.—Characterizing Francis Heney, special counsel for the government in the Oregon land fraud cases, and the men associated with him as a "desperate gang of conspirators," seeking to injure his name and reputation, Senator Charles W. Fulton of Oregon has prepared a sizzling reply to the charges that have been made against him by Heney. What Fulton says in his statement, which he refuses today to divulge in full will unquestionably create a stir in the Pacific coast states.

The reply is made in a straightforward manner, connecting letters and other documents which Fulton claims sustain and prove his assertions. He minces no words but strikes straight from the shoulder. After paying his respects with equal impartiality to Heney, J. S. Smith, Brownell and Governor Chamberlain, the reply will say that during his 20 years of public service Heney is the first person to bring charges against his integrity.

Senator Fulton says that Heney's charges do not claim that he profited personally by alleged wrongdoings, but that he was merely overzealous in behalf of friends.

He lays Heney's animosity to the fact that he, Fulton, opposed the former's appointment as assistant prosecutor and that Heney is now seeking revenge.

Senator Fulton makes specific denial of all of Heney's charges and gives facts, as he believes they exist, regarding the alleged passing of money for the vote of legislator Smith. Fulton says that he did not send out answers to Heney from time to time as he desired to make one decisive answer to the prosecutor, an answer that would completely vindicate him according to the way of thinking with the people of Oregon and of the United States at large.

Fulton was painstaking in connecting his arguments in such a manner as to place in sequence the happening of 10 or more years. He says that he desired to go over the ground thoroughly and leave no loopholes through which Heney might escape. He denounces Heney as a man who is everlastingly seeking cheap notoriety and who makes the rashness of rash statements merely on hearsay and then desperately attempts to bolster up his cause with a bluff.

The writer goes into the history of the land fraud cases only so far as they bear on the direct remarks of Heney on that particular subject. He declares that he had not the slightest thing to fear from Heney and he would gladly face him in any court of justice if the controversy should be carried that far.

The article is a scathing denunciation of Heney and is pretty much in the nature of a personal attack.

JAIL FOR OFFENDING MAGNATES

Chairman of Interstate Commerce Commission May Be Ousted for Accusing President of Playing Political Game.

Alleges Roosevelt Wants Investigation of Railroad Wage Reduction to Win Votes—No Authority to Mix in Controversy.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Washington, Feb. 22.—A general shaking up in the interstate commerce commission, involving the possible retirement of Chairman Martin A. Knapp, is likely to grow out of the unsympathetic attitude of members of the commission toward the proposition advanced in President Roosevelt's letter to the commission calling for an inquiry into railroad wage reductions.

The president has been informed that, speaking of the president's letter, Chairman Knapp said to a friend "that it is merely a political document."
The president did not comment upon the alleged remark by the head of the commerce commission, nor was anything forthcoming at the white house regarding the charge voiced in many other quarters that the president's letter represents political play to the laboring classes.

BLAME ROAD FOR DEATH OF NOYES

During Illness Editor Declared That Santa Fe Was Responsible.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Los Angeles, Feb. 22.—After suffering for days from a severe attack of la grippe, for which he blamed the Santa Fe railroad, Crosby S. Noyes, editor of the Washington Star, died here last night. A few days before his death Noyes wrote a letter to a friend at Washington in which he blamed the railroad for the illness which later caused his death.

In the letter he said: "Through the injuries to health and comfort received by our party by the incompetency and gross neglect of the Santa Fe railroad on our trip from Chicago to western California, we have all suffered from a collapse. I am a victim of an aggravated case of grip, with extreme weakness."
"We left Chicago on the 29th, which it will be remembered was some days before the blizzard swept across the west, partly closing travel and giving some excuse for bad service. As soon as we pulled out I discovered that there was no heat in our compartments, while at the same time the temperature was down around zero. I immediately applied to the conductors, but they failed to take notice of my appeal. Later, when I sent my card to the chief conductor, asking him to see if something could not be done, he treated the request with contemptuous indifference. The conditions remained the same clear across the continent."

It was stated that the car, Guilana, in which we were placed, was a dilapidated old car borrowed from another road and that the Santa Fe had not given the slightest attention to its repairs. We were obliged to wrap ourselves in all the bedclothes, blankets, pillows in fact everything that could be availed of, to prevent freezing, and were bundled up all the way, not for hours but for days, like so many mummies, but I did not preserve us from harm."
The letter was dictated by Mr. Noyes from his sick bed.
It is probable that legal action will be taken against the railway company by relatives of the dead editor.

People Insist Upon Pure Administration but De-tractors of Public Men Should Have Contempt Visited Upon Them.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
New York, Feb. 22.—Governor Hughes of New York, delivering a Washington Birthday address before the Union League club today, urged a settled governmental policy as the only means of restoring confidence in the commercial world. He said the federal state laws should be as definite as it is possible to make them, and that they should be applied with becoming precision to practices sought to be reached.

"The enforcement of just laws has no terrors for those engaged in legitimate business," continued Governor Hughes. He declared that it has been found inadvisable to attempt to get a precise definition of fraud, but he added that it is possible and advisable to be more explicit.

FILE ON LAND; GET GOLD BRICK

Locators Pay Fee in Vain Attempt to Secure Portion of Oregon Grant.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Bellingham, Wash., Feb. 22.—As a result of an investigation that has been made by Commissioner R. A. Ballinger of the general land office of the government at the request of a citizen of Whatcom county it is announced that the individual who has been collecting a fee of $75 for locating persons on the Southern Pacific and Oregon & California railway land grant is simply imposing on innocent and unsuspecting persons and that it will be impossible for such persons so filing on the lands to secure them.

TEXAS RAILWAYS TO IGNORE LAW

Attorneys Decide to Fight Eight-Hour Shift Ordered for Telegraphers.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Dallas, Tex., Feb. 22.—Acting under the advice of their attorneys who have deliberated behind closed doors for a week the railroads of Texas have agreed to ignore and defy the new state eight-hour law upon the matter of the employment of telegraph operators. They declared they will pay no attention to the ruling of the attorney-general that the law must be observed.

DOLORES MINE GOES TO MEXICAN OWNERS

(United Press Leased Wire.)
El Paso, Texas, Feb. 22.—By a decision rendered by the supreme court of Mexico, the title to the famous Dolores mine, over which there has been much litigation, is awarded to the heirs of the old-time Mexican owners, and the claim of Escobar and Ross is declared void. This will mean the loss of many thousands of dollars to Americans, as the Dolores mine has changed ownership a number of times on the Escobar and Ross title. J. H. Hutcherson, former manager for Charles M. Schwab, buying it last.

CHILDREN PLANT ROSES

Memory of Washington Revived in Befitting Manner by School and Civic Authorities—Thousands of Rose Plants for Park.

Perfect weather and a program in which there was not a hitch combined to make Portland's mid-winter rose planting event a great success this afternoon.

Several thousand school children were out in honor of the holiday and took part in the ceremonies of rose planting, while the mayor, city and state officials and the representatives of the Rose Festival association took part in the procession and in the exercises held in the plaza. Five thousand and more rose bushes were planted by the city gardeners and these will be in profuse bloom by next June, when the festival will be held.

Taking part in the parade and lending color and interest to it were the Third Infantry of the Oregon national guard and Battery A of the field artillery.

The parade left the Army at 2 o'clock this afternoon, and passed through some of the more important business streets to the park blocks where Dr. Emmet Drake presented the 5,000 bushes to the city and where they were accepted formally by Mayor Lane. Park Superintendent Monteith planted the first bush in the long trench and the others were rapidly covered up by the gardeners.

INTERESTING PARADE

The rose bushes were carried in the parade in decorated wagons, while about 50 decorated automobiles carried the public officials and representatives of the festival association.

Encouraged by the addresses of those who spoke in the public schools last Thursday the school children turned out for the event in large numbers and the parade of the children, each boy and girl carrying a rose bush, was one of the prettiest events of the day.

BONI MUST PAY FOR GEMS

Court of Appeals Rules in Favor of Madame Nemidoff, the Actress, in Suit for $24,000 Against Anna Gould and Her Former Husband.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Paris, Feb. 22.—The court of appeals has upheld the decision of the lower court, which decided that Anna Gould, divorced wife of Count Boni de Castellane and the count must pay Mme. Nemidoff, an actress, $24,000 for pearls which Boni took from her on promise of purchasing them.

It is charged that instead of presenting them to his wife the count pawned them for $11,000. Mme. Anna Gould swore at the hearing of the suit that she never did see the pearls, although the count had told Mme. Nemidoff that he wanted his wife to wear them on the occasion of King Carlos' visit to Paris some time ago. Anna Gould must pay the costs of the suit.
