Cannon to Right of Him, Fulton to Left of Him, Ankeny Back of Him, Roosevelt Sees His Bitter Finish.

(United Press Leased Wire.) Washington, Feb. 22.—Characterized as "abnormal" by Speaker Cannon and a "dangerous menace" to the republic by Senator Fulton, President Roosevelt was criticized with greater bitterness than has yet manifested itself in political circles here at a dinner given by Senator Levi Ankeny of Washington last night to his colleagues. While care was taken not to refer to the president by name, the attacks were so pointed that those present recognized to whom the two speakers referred.

A colossal bust of Abraham Lincoln, nine times life size, has just been completed by Gutson Borglum, and is now on exhibition at the White House. Picture of the bust is here shown.

BABY PICKPOCKET IS NOT AFTER SYMPATHY Five-Year-Old Girl Says, "Get on the Job," When Preacher Approaches.

Philadelphia, Feb. 22.—Little Mary, five years old, but under arrest as professional pickpocket, took imprisonment at the house of detention quite a matter of course. When some of the women attendants near the child would stuff a baby flat into one of her eyes and push a few salty drops, but this is always preparatory to asking some question suggested by her older stepmother. When no one was looking, Mary was composed as the average convict being a fifth term. By coaxing out of the youngster got a front at the services for her stepmother another for herself. When the person, under Mary's thumb little chin, the baby pickpocket was a girl named "Gwan". "Oh, gwan!" she exclaimed. "Get on the job." At first the minister did not quite understand, or affected to misunderstand, the infant purse-snatcher then scolded: "That'll do, get on the job!"

first visited Mrs. Smith, or Mrs. Ross, lived at 407 Earp street. It was Mrs. Ross' excuse that her little girl Annie was "out of her head" and that as a mother she could do nothing with her. Annie made the acquaintance of the Kirk girls, of whom there were two, Annie and Minnie. Mrs. Ross insisted that she went to the Kirk house repeatedly after the child, Annie Smith, but that Mrs. Kirk hid Annie away, saying she was not there.

Twenty-Five Purse Found. When Annie Smith and Minnie Kirk were arrested together, 25 purses altogether were found in their possession, 19 of these in the Kirk house. In most instances the children take only money, not the purse. It was after this arrest, in March, 1907, that the two girls, Minnie Kirk and Annie Smith, were held to the juvenile court by Magistrate Gorman and later brought up before Judge Ralston. Minnie Kirk, 12 years old, was turned over to the children's bureau for a country home, and Annie Smith, 11 years old, was ordered sent to her grandmother in England. The English authorities were informed of this, and the child was promptly deported to this country. She landed here and was back in her old haunts before the probation officers knew anything of it, which accounts for the issuance of a bench warrant.

After Annie Smith was brought back to this country her mother, Mrs. Ross, moved to Camden, living at 308 South Second street. It is supposed by the police that this was to elude the bench warrant. A week ago Friday, Annie Smith and Mary Ross left the Camden house and did not come back. The mother, Mrs. Ross, became alarmed, and informed both the police and the newspapers that her children were missing. Really it was this that led to their arrest.

Annie Smith talks freely of her ability as a pickpocket. She explained her system to the detectives. Her little sister Mary, while by no means as clever as Annie, is clever and can open a hand-bag almost as quickly as Annie. LOEBERINO HAS BAD CASE OF LA GRIPPE (United Press Leased Wire.) VASSAR GIRLS TAKE CHARGE OF TRUANTS Become Probation Officers in Poughkeepsie and Naughty Boys Submit.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Feb. 22.—Students at Vassar college have joined with the city court officers in an effort to solve the problem of truancy in the public schools.

Miss Inez Mulholland, president of the junior class of Vassar, with several other students, called on Chief of Police McCabe and received permission to study the system of probation which is in vogue. The "swell gowns" of the Vassar girls made an interesting contrast to the grimy little shavers in the juvenile court room, but the girls did not flinch, and with true feminine perception they got to the heart of things. After listening to the excuses of the truants, the fair students astonished Chief McCabe and Judge Sharill by personally taking charge of several of the most obstreperous, who in a twinkling changed their defiant attitudes to submission. The girls will act as probation officers, and the truants, as an earnest of their desire to reform, will have to report at the Y. M. C. A. at regular intervals. The Vassar students are doing this work in connection with their sociological studies.

THE PROFESSOR WAITED

A new sort of duplicity among college men was uncovered when the Harvard Crimson recently printed the following: "There appeared in yesterday's Crimson a notice stating that there would be no meeting in Music 2. Professor Spalding, whose name was signed to the notice but who had nothing to do with the insertion, waited in vain for his class. It is with chagrin that we must publicly announce that there is still among us a man who stoops to forgery as a means of avoiding attendance at his lectures. Afraid to face the result of his own acts, he has adopted the method of the coward. We are sorry to say that the student who has thus gained a new crime in college, at least forgery with no attempt to gain money as its object."

REAL COP ON STAGE; ARRESTS COMPANY

Stolen Goods Are Found Among the Performers' Baggage and Performance Is Interrupted.

West Chester, Pa., Feb. 22.—Charles W. Gillen, detective, of Kennett Square, made his first appearance on stage, with Special Officer Riley and Acting Detective James Martin, at Avondale last night. The sleuths arrested an entire company of seven performers in view of the audience and recovered $100 worth of goods which had been stolen from the store of J. W. Parker at Toughkenamon, where the company appeared several nights ago. John Veals, David Class and Verdie Bond, three of the prisoners, have been held for trial. Detective Martin, who is a banjo player, got a job with the company Saturday. He was to have appeared last night, but made an excuse and, after he had found the stolen goods in the baggage and on the persons of the performers, notified Gillen. The three sleuths went to the playhouse, which was crowded, and just as a little skit was being given they appeared before the footlights and made the arrests.

HISTORIC MULES SEE DAYLIGHT

After Thirty Years Underground Ancient Animals Are Brought Out.

(Hearst News by Longest Leased Wire.) Reno, Nev., Feb. 22.—Twelve mules which have been used to carry ore in the 700-foot level of the Sutro tunnel of the Comstock and have not seen the light of day in 30 years, were brought to the surface this morning. The mules will not ever return to the bowels of the earth, for electric power will move the cars along the underground railroad in the future. Blinking in the bright light the mules stood at the mouth of the tunnel today and seemed little inclined to resume the ways they knew before being shut into the heart of the Davidson mountains. Snow was falling when the animals were liberated and the unusual temperature caused them to try to stampede. In 1877, when the Sutro tunnel was first opened, a herd of mules were taken under ground. As years passed many of the animals died. The last dozen, however, became accustomed to the subterranean climate. In 1890, when Virginia City was cut off from the world by snow, provisions were let into the mouth of the tunnel, hauled five miles by the mules and hoisted from the Con. Virginia shaft, thus preventing the people in the town from starving.

LARGE CROWD ATTENDS DEDICATION DANCE

Benefit Ball at Armory Attended by More Than 600 People.

More than 600 persons last night attended the dedication and benefit ball given in the new clubroom of the Armory, recently remodeled at a cost of $15,000. The dance was given by the officers and men of the Third Infantry, Battalion A, and the hospital corps. The committee in charge was composed of Major Frank S. Baker, Lieutenant John McDonnell, Lieutenant Frank Randall, Lieutenant C. C. MacCormack and Lieutenant L. R. Kollock. To the music by the regimental band and orchestra the merry dancers passed away the evening. Everything was arranged perfectly, and was carried out in the same way. The dancers danced all the dances on the program, several extras, and then asked for more. The splendid new maple floor of the hall fairly enticed the guests to swing into the strains of the orchestra. The ball was given to raise money with which to furnish the new gymnasium and reading room of the remodeled armory. To these familiar with the old structure before the changes were made the scene last night was a revelation. The handsome ballroom 100 feet square is beautifully finished and will be one of the finest of its kind in the city. Just off the ballroom is the gymnasium, and when it is furnished will be one of the finest on the coast. Across the hall from the gymnasium is the reading and billiard room of the armory. Back of the gymnasium are three rooms set aside for the hospital corps. The object of making the extensive changes was to give the members of the guard a club life in addition to their regular work as soldiers. When all is completed the quarters will form one of the finest clubs in the west, and is expected to attract a larger membership to the organization.

AUTO IS WHAT IT SEEMS

In the Eyes of the Police, Who Stop the Speedy Looking Cars. From the New York Sun. An automobilist was reading the Marquis de Dion, who fixed up a racer-like automobile with a puny motor and had the laugh on the gentleman who arrested him for violating the speed law. "That reminds me of the experience of a friend of mine," he said. "Two years ago this friend had a sunbust with bucket seats and a 24-horsepower motor. The car was painted red, and he couldn't get it without getting held up. So he decided to change the color and had the car painted a demure gray. "Then he used to be held up because the police said that it was a Vanderbilt cup racer. Finally he had it painted black and had no more trouble. "I have always believed that if a man had a car with a long bonnet which looked as if it covered 100 horsepower, and wore a skull cap and goggles and drove leaning way forward, he'd get arrested if he were going three miles an hour. I think there are enough instances to prove it."
