FIGHTERS WHO SHINE IN RING POOR AT ROUGH AND TUMBLE.

Fighters Who Shine in Ring Poor at Rough and Tumble.

SULLIVAN VICTIM OF MANY SALOON FIGHTS

Fitzsimmons Got His and Corbett Was Frequently Chased Out of Barrooms and Subjected to Insult in Effort to Draw Scraps.

New York, Feb. 22.—Because a man may be a good fighter in the prize ring under the marquis of Queensberry rules. It does not always mean that he can win a go as you please or rough and tumble encounter outside of the flistic arena. Many a ring champion has met his match in the highways and byways of everyday life where science and rules do not count.

John L. Sullivan has had in his long, strenuous career as many battles outside of the ring as inside of it, and on several occasions he has received the worst of barroom or street brawls.

William Hogarty, a Boston barber, who was a close friend of Sullivan's, made the big fellow run for his life one day. The row occurred in Sullivan's shop, and the barber, who was drinking heavily at the time, called the barber some hard names and finally aimed a terrific blow at Sullivan's face.

Hogarty, however, was too quick for the burly Boston pugilist, then champion of the world, for grabbing up a water pail and striking Sullivan with such a stunning blow on the head that John went down for the count. Some friends, however, intervened and Sullivan, who was in a rage, hurried to the nearest drug store to be patched up.

Several years ago Sullivan was loaded in the fifth avenue and Forty-second street, when he began to abuse Wakely, accusing him of having a "fix" on the Sullivan fight with Jim Corbett in New Orleans.

Wakely was one of Sullivan's backers in that affair, so he felt the situation keenly. After protesting in vain, Wakely, losing all patience, unhooked a blow that sent Sullivan sprawling on the floor, and while he lay there, dazed and rattled, some say Wakely kicked the former champion in the eye.

Whether this was the last of it, or whether Sullivan went to his hotel with the worst looking "shiner" that ever decorated his fighting face, is not known. He has broken up a friendship of 20 years' standing, for Sullivan and Wakely have never spoken to each other since.

In other instances impromptu battles Sullivan has emerged at the little end of the horn. Herbert Slade, the Maori, whom John L. licked in the ring in 1883, made the big fellow cry "enough" in a fierce rough and tumble fight in Harry Maynard's saloon in New York, when they were giving exhibitions together on the road under the management of Al Smith.

Sullivan was wrestled to the floor and Slade was in the act of choking him when Smith jumped in and pulled the Maori away. Sullivan was so angry that he threatened when the men met the next day.

Jim Corbett, who won Sullivan's title, never could get along with the former champion. Charley Mitchell on one occasion hunted up Corbett on the Bowery, where the latter was showing in a fight. Mitchell, who was a regular customer at the bar, challenged the latter to a rough and tumble battle there and there.

Mitchell had Paddy Slavin with him and both were drunk. They called Corbett all sorts of names and finally drew from the scene, but not until after a bystander had punched Slavin in the mouth, while Corbett and Mitchell fought, had threatened Mitchell with an empty bottle.

Corbett stood insulted. After that Mitchell insulted Corbett repeatedly in the various saloons and hotels, but "Gentleman Jim" waited until he got the blowing Englishman in the ring at Jacksonville, when the latter became a name to be feared in the ring. Not long after that incident Mitchell and Slavin fell out. They clashed in a London room, and the latter was regarded as a champion barroom fighter, both here and in England.

BEAVERS AND SEALS ARE NOW COMPLETE

Two Teams Which Started Poorly Last Season, Show Great Changes.

The past week has been a big one in the history of the Portland and San Francisco baseball teams. It has marked the completion of the personnel of each and at this time shows them to be the best clubs of the Pacific Coast league.

Both teams were very weak last year but the opening of the season of 1908 will find them in the field with vastly changed teams. Frisco has secured three new catchers, several new pitchers and has strengthened her infield, while the stars, Williams, Mohler, Irwin, Hildebrand and Melchior, remain.

McCredie has finished signing an almost entirely new team, all of whom have the best of reputations and most of whom are from leagues of standing and not bush leagues like they were last year. The big leagues have helped both teams out in the way of good players, while draft and purchase have filled the rest of the holes.

Long now has four high-class catchers on his staff. In Esola, Slatter, Berry and Lalonde. Slatter is the western league catcher, while Berry and Lalonde are recent recruits. Berry, who was secured from the Chicago club, has been in the Athletics reserve list for the last two years but has always been farmed out to some minor league team.

Long's pitching staff contains 13 pitchers. He secured two of them from the Washington club, one from the Athletics and the old pitchers, Jones, Willis and Henley are expected to make up a fine pitching staff. One of the Washington pitchers, a player by the name of Euton, is said to be a wonder. He is six feet tall and weighs between 195 and 200 pounds.

Portland now has her entire team assured. Although McCredie has not as yet secured Ryan, Kinloch, Garvey or Madden's names to contracts, they will undoubtedly be in line when the season opens. Secretary McCredie and his manager, who is now in Denver, will probably hold down third base for Portland and the fans will look forward to Ryan, who is now in Denver, with interest to seeing him in action.

Young Corbett has also suffered defeat at the hands of non-professionals whom he has tackled on the spur of the moment. The last time the Denver boy got into a mixup George Jenner, an English theatrical dresser, wiped the floor with him in a forty-first street restaurant before he discovered Corbett's identity. Then the Britisher exclaimed as clean as a whistle. His conqueror became so elated over his success that he undertook to whip a negro in Broadway several weeks later and was so badly cut with a razor that he died from his injuries.

NORTHERN PLAYERS SIGNED FOR SEASON

Magnates Have Teams Almost Ready to Enter the Opening League Game.

Dugdale, Hall, Brown et al. have completed their teams for the coming season and are now busily engaged in arranging the training trips for their big bunch of players.

From the way the teams look on paper Aberdeen will not have much trouble in walking away with another pennant. Although they lost their two star pitchers in Tonneson and Higginbotham, Manager Brown has not been idle but has put through a number of deals all of which are intended to strengthen the Black Cats.

His biggest loss will undoubtedly come from Andy Anderson's absence from the middle bag and the captaincy. Anderson was the life of the team and his determination to stay in Portland, where he has gone into the pool and billiard business, will prove a great loss.

ENGLISH TENNIS INVADER LOSES
Ex-Champion Wins Two Games from Wright in Great Style.

(Heart News by Longest Leased Wire.)
New York, Feb. 22.—England's hope of annexing the United States national indoor tennis championship was shattered this morning, when F. E. Uhl of Oxford university met defeat on the courts of the Seventh Regiment armory.

The regimental expert, Morris S. Clark, was too swift and adroit for the Briton, defeat being with ease by 6-2 and 6-2. The wide, long bounds of the ball on the boards appeared new to the English player, and only in the second set, when Uhl let down on his game, was Uhl at all in the game.

LEGLESS MAN RUNS FARM IN MICHIGAN
Owns Ninety Acres and Is the Most Successful Agriculturist in the Township.

Bellevue, Mich., Feb. 18.—Myron J. Briggs, living eight miles southwest of this village, in the township of Pennfield, says he is the only man in Michigan without any legs who is a successful farmer. Men who have lost legs are engaged in various occupations, but Mr. Briggs is the first one to take to farming. His legs were amputated so close to the body that he cannot use artificial ones.

Briggs owns a 90-acre farm and has the reputation of being the hardest working and most successful farmer in that township. He husked 700 bushels of corn and had the work done before any farmer had even commenced on theirs. Briggs milks three cows daily, dug several acres of potatoes, keeps a garden, etc. He has a sulky plow, a mowing machine, a plow, cuts his wheat and grass and does almost everything that any farmer can who has two legs. He uses sulky implements and does his own plowing with his hands. He can climb a ladder with great rapidity.

Y. M. C. A. WINS FROM TACOMA
Sound Players Lose Basketball Game to Portland-Spectators Cheering During the Contest.

The Y. M. C. A. supporters felt they had something to be pleased over last night and showed it when the Portland five-defeated the Tacoma basket ball team by 32 to 19.

Keen judges of form have been showing evidence of staleness in their last few games, in particular taking some considerable time to get warmed up to the spirit of the game. This was absent last night. From the first blast of the referee's whistle the Portland men made it quite clear that they were in the game for good, scoring several times in the first few minutes of the game, so that at the end of the first half the score stood Portland 17, Tacoma 6.

An unusually large audience filled the seating capacity of the big "gym," and what is more, the audience was of very impartial nature, awarding clever play on the part of the Tacoma men almost as great frequency as they did that of their favorite.

Tacoma's Good Showing.
The Tacoma quintet were somewhat handicapped by the absence of one of their premier basket tossers at Seattle, but their good play in the second half, when they kept the Portland score down with an ease that amazed the home men, showed that their strength lay in their guards, who by their smart work kept the Portland men off from scoring. The special artist, bringing off one or two long field shots with great effect.

The Portland men won praise by their combination of the best of both worlds in their rosters some hope for the Multnomah tie game on Tuesday. Hartman and Young were responsible for most of the baskets, but the latter's splendid play was sometimes rather of a selfish nature. The strain of the game seemed to tell on the Tacoma players, who on the Portland guards who on several occasions fumbled with the ball.

Tacoma's Good Showing.
The game was a lesson in basket ball, roughness of any character finding no sympathy from the referee, whose decisions seemed to find more favor with both sides than have those of any previous holdover. With the desire of avoiding the unpleasant scenes of the Vancouver game, Physical Director Griley obtained the services of A. J. Wilson, a former farmer, as an out of town man, was quite impartial.

On one or two occasions the Portland men put themselves open to merriment at one time almost every member of the team failing to find the basket within a few seconds, while shooting from directly underneath.

Although the Tacoma men were outclassed in their play they quite won the hearts of the crowd by their adherence to the rules of the game and by the game fight they finished up the game with:

Chicago Swede and James Moran Capture Purse at Boston Rink.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Boston, Feb. 22.—Iver Johnson, the Chicago Swede, repeated his recent triumph at Kansas City by winning the six-day race at the Park Square Coliseum rink track tonight from a fast field of riders. The wildest scenes prevailed when Lawson went over the line a wheel's length before John Beckel of New York, who was a length in front of Floyd Krebs, the Dutchman, who won the last six-day race in Boston. Iver Fogler, who was ousted upon a dispute the lead, could not do better than fourth, and Charles Sherwood of Buffalo was fifth.

Major Taylor and his team mate, Nat Butler, withdrew from the race early in the night. The night teams fought it out for the money. They were out for 415 miles, 9 laps. Lawson's team mate was James Moran.
