WEATHER REPORT

The western trough of low pressure has developed into a disturbance of decided character which is central this morning over southern Utah. A high pressure area is central over Saskatchewan and another high pressure area overlies the lower lake region and middle Atlantic states. Rain or snow has fallen generally throughout Utah, western Colorado and northern Arizona and light rain has fallen at scattered places in California and southern Arizona. Moderately heavy rain has fallen in the middle Mississippi valley and local snows are reported in the Dakotas and Montana. Unusually low temperatures prevail in the north Pacific states and heavy frosts occurred this morning in Oregon, Washington and northern Idaho. It is much warmer in Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma, New Mexico and the Texas panhandle.

The indications are for fair and continued cold weather in this district tonight and Thursday.
