

WINCH SEKS HIS REWARD

Reporter Who Exposed the Smugglers on Battleship Oregon, at Philadelphia Running Down Clues—Goods in This State.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Philadelphia, March 10.—Hot on the trail of the Philadelphia fines and confiscations growing out of the notorious battleship Oregon, smuggling cases, Frank Walker Winch, a San Francisco newspaper man, was at the postoffice building yesterday getting information from the government officials here who have had to do with these proceedings.

Winch stands to win $40,000 from the government as a reward for keeping his eyes wide open while out on an assignment for the San Francisco Post.

As the marine reporter for the paper he went out in a launch to ask the officers of the Oregon when the battleship was to steam to Bremerton, to go out of commission. The Oregon at the time was anchored in midstream in San Francisco harbor, this being April 1, 1904.

On the deck Winch found a notice posted that the Oregon would start next day, and that at Bremerton the personal effects of the officers and men would be examined. The reporter's suspicion was aroused, as the Oregon had just arrived from a cruise to the oriental ports and had not yet been visited by the customs inspectors stationed at San Francisco.

Sees Smugglers at Work.

While on board, Winch saw several launches make fast to the Oregon, and the men on the battleship began passing boxes and bales of goods, which were received to destination, by an express agent on the battleship for the purpose.

suspecting that wholesale smuggling was going on, Winch hid behind coils of rope and took down the names of the senders of the packages, who were officers and men on the Oregon, and the names of the persons to whom they were to be sent. In four hours Winch got 1,468 names and addresses.

It was Saturday afternoon and the Post is an evening paper. Winch held the story for a scoop on Monday, and then informed the government of the contents of the package goods were seized in San Francisco and one carload at Bakersfield. These cars stood in the San Francisco yards through the earthquake and fire of April 18 and succeeding days and were not burned.

Before the government became alert hundreds of the packages had been forwarded by the express company, some to Philadelphia, and the rest broadcast over the United States. All have been traced and seized.

Battled to Big Reward.

Winch is entitled to 25 per cent of the sum realized by the government from the sale of the goods and the fines imposed. The only case is not as yet disposed of, this at Empire City, Oregon. It is estimated that the aggregate sum will amount to $175,000, so that Winch's share after paying his expenses in watching his interests ought to be $40,000, fairly good pay for one "detail," as a newspaper reporter's daily task is called in San Francisco.

Winch was in Washington and was told by the assistant treasurer that his claim was legal and just, and that the treasury department had much to thank him for. But Winch still has his eyes peeled, expecting the usual red tape difficulties that in the government departments keep a man from his money.

The inquiry into the smuggling case developed that nearly every officer and all the 788 men on the Oregon had a hand in the smuggling. While in Japan the officers had sold their swords to buy silks to fetch duty free into the United States.

The most sensational disclosure was that an admiral had sent over $2,000 by officers on the Oregon, the money to be used in buying silks and articles of vertu in China and Japan.

SECRET SERVICE CUT UP MAKES LIGHT OF WOMAN'S SECRET

Secrets comprising the undercurrent of the flow on human nature. Some people are always looking for a chance to tell a secret. Others are always wanting to hear one.

Believing that the government had a man whose business it is to listen to persons' secrets, the little itchings of the human heart, a Portland woman went into the postoffice building one day last week and inquired for the office of a secret service agent.

"Room 2134," the elevator man informed the woman with the "just-dying-to-tell expression."

She found the room all right. "Secret service," she read on the door. But the door was locked.

"Just as you have been looking for for years," she mused to herself. "Wonder why I never got on to this snap before!"

Then she thought and thought a long time and at last she went on mulling to herself something like this:

"Dear old Uncle Sam, of course he had a secret service. It is really remarkable that I never thought of coming here before. Instead, though, I've been running around the neighborhood telling all my family secrets, and other people's secrets as well, and letting my neighbors know all about myself and the little eccentricities of other people I know."

"Why doesn't that man come? My, how he must suffer with all those secrets and unable to tell a soul! It wouldn't do for me to have that job. But it's an excellent idea. The secret man 'Happy' must have been copied from the original introduced by Uncle Sam, the dear old fellow."

Before the woman had finished her day dreams on the third floor of the federal building, a tall, muscular-looking chap appeared and, unlocked the door of the secret service office.

"What a good-looking man for one to tell her secrets to," thought the woman as she made her way into the room.

E. A. Connell, the secret service agent in Portland, who for several years was detailed at the White House, thought that some one was about to tell him of having been deceived by counterfeitters or of some other firm flam game against the government.

The woman told Mr. Connell of her expectations. She was just about to unfold a secret. In an instant all her hopes, her anticipation and the thoughts of joy of a government secret man were shattered.

"At Last! A Place to Disgorge."

"About all the secrets I hear are from counterfeitters after they are arrested," explained Mr. Connell. The woman flew out of the office, slammed the door saying something about what a horrid old government Uncle Sam was running after all.

And neighbors are still hearing the woman's secrets.

George Washington

UNTO every generation of Americans George Washington is justly held to be the purest figure in history—a superb example of the perfect citizen—a just and righteous ruler and "a light for after time."

This commanding personality had a magnificent physique. He stood over six feet in his stockings, was remarkable for horsemanship, agility and strength—the finest gentleman and athlete of his day.

His constitution was of iron and he knew how to keep it so. His biographers declare that in eating and in drinking as in all things he was normal; enjoying the juice of the malt all the days of his life. He drank it around campfires, as well as in his own home and upon social and state occasions.

Furthermore, upon his Mount Vernon plantation he had a brew house, as was the regular custom of wealthy Virginians.

ASKS SQUARE DEAL FOR PACIFIC COAST

Western Lumbermen May Get Chance to Bid on Supplies for Panama Canal.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Washington, March 10.—Senator Fulton's effort to afford an opportunity for Pacific coast producers to bid on Panama canal supplies will be decided tomorrow.

The senate yesterday discussed at length Senator Frye's joint resolution providing for the carrying of materials for the Panama canal in American bottoms only. Frye advocated the adoption of the resolution, saying that at least 5,000,000 barrels of cement would be required in the work, and that so long as foreign vessels were permitted to compete, it would be impossible for the domestic ships to participate in the transportation because of the difference both in construction and operation. He said that in both these respects British built ships had an advantage of at least one third.

An amendment of Foster of Virginia, providing that the restriction should not apply to the gulf ports or any part of the United States from which vessels of the United States could not be secured for the trade was accepted by Frye.

Fulton proposed to have the amendment extended to the north Pacific and southern Atlantic coasts respectively, but was unsuccessful.

Fulton contended that the proposed legislation would practically bar lumbermen and other Pacific coast producers from furnishing the canal with supplies, and offered an amendment excepting Pacific coast ports from the provision of the resolution.

LAND GRAFT IN SOUTHERN IDAHO

Federal Grand Jury Investigating Desert Entries at Twin Falls.

(United Press Leased Wire.) Boise, Idaho, March 10.—The federal grand jury today began an investigation of desert entries on the Twin Falls tract, a Carey act irrigation project. It is alleged that those on the inside were for business and political reasons given information as to the location of the proposed townsite of Twin Falls, and that land adjoining the townsite was filed upon under the desert land act before the land was segregated under the Carey act. By this means, it is charged, land which has since been disposed of at from $200 to $500 per acre was secured without cost from the government, for speculative purposes.

It is said some of the most prominent men in the state profited by such a scheme.

RELIEVES IN FIVE MINUTES.

Help Comes Quickly When Hyomei is Used for Catarrh.

The quick relief that comes from the Hyomei treatment for catarrh is most remarkable. Put a few drops of liquid Hyomei in the little pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit, and before you have used the treatment for five minutes you will notice relief from your catarrhal troubles.

Hyomei has a tonic and healing effect to the air you breathe, kills the catarrhal germs, stops the poisonous secretions, soothes the irritated mucous membrane and makes a marked improvement in the general health.

Hyomei is not a cure all; it has but one aim, the cure of catarrh and diseases of respiratory organs. When the catarrh is cured, the general health is improved, for then nature has a chance to build up the whole system.

If you suffer from offensive breath, rising of mucus, frequent sneezing, husky voice, discharge from the nose, droppings in the throat, loss of strength, spasmodic coughing and feeling of tightness across the upper part of the chest, general weakness and debility, or any other symptoms of catarrh, you should begin to use Hyomei at once. It will destroy all disease germs in the nose, throat and lungs and make a quick and permanent cure of catarrh. Boastings Woodard, Clarke & Co.'s belief in the power of Hyomei to cure all catarrhal troubles that with every 15-cent outfit give a guarantee to refund the money unless the remedy gives satisfaction.

BRAVE NURSES SAVE PAUPERS

Cool Heads of Pretty Girls Prevent Disaster at Almshouse-Fire.

(United Press Leased Wire.) San Francisco, March 10.—Sensational rescues and heroic work of doctors, internes and nurses alone prevented a serious loss of life today when fire broke out in the city and county hospital, located a few miles outside the city limits.

For a time it appeared that the flimsy frame structure was doomed, but cool-headed work saved the situation, and aside from some suffering from the smoke, no one was seriously hurt.

Adjoining the hospital is the city and county almshouse in which are housed several hundred aged and crippled paupers and victims of the earthquake. When the fire broke out and the alarm sounded, there was a wild rush on the part of the frightened old people and a number of fatalities were narrowly averted.

The fire was soon under control, but not until two alarms had been turned in.

Two Deaths.

The bed upon which lay a woman patient caught fire as it was being removed by the brave nurses, who were assisted by the force of carpenters and plumbers work upon the new building, in which aged and infirm refugees are being housed.

There were two deaths during the fire of aged ill persons who were expected to die at any time. The excitement hastened their demise.

There were many rescues of patients who were absolutely unable to move from their beds, and owing to the flimsy nature of the building the work of rescue was necessarily hasty.

Nurses carried many of the patients bodily from the building. Some were removed to the rooms in the almshouse and others to cottages under the trees out of reach of the flames.

Many Lives Threatened.

It was feared for awhile the fire might jump to other buildings, and the firemen directed their efforts to prevent this.

There were 570 patients of the city and county in the building.

It is believed the fire started from a defective flue.

At 11:30 o'clock all patients had been rescued and nothing remained of the structure but the charred upright timbers. Two hundred patients were taken to the Red Cross infirmary nearby.

The address of the president and the annual reports of the other officers were the chief features of the initial session. The address of President Greenawalt contained a brief summary of the progress made by organized labor in Pennsylvania during the past year, as well as numerous suggestions and recommendations for the consideration of the convention.

The convention will remain in session three or four days, and many subjects of importance to labor will be considered. The advisability of organized labor taking part in the coming political campaign will be discussed. Another matter that will receive attention is the recent decisions of the supreme court upon matters affecting labor.
