

WALE TO PAY VISIT

Will Represent King Edward at Tercentenary to Be Held in Quebec Next July—Big Sum Has Been Appropriated.

The Prince of Wales, probably accompanied by his wife, will represent King Edward at the tercentenary to be held at Quebec this summer. The arrangements for the visit are not yet complete, but the prince will go to Canada on board a warship, accompanied by a small squadron, partly with the view to enhancing the historic solemnity of the occasion.

It is likely that France will be invited to send a representative to Quebec in recognition of her interest in the national event celebrated.

Announcement in Commons.

(Special Correspondence to The Journal) Ottawa, March 18.—His royal highness the Prince of Wales will visit Quebec in connection with the tercentenary celebration from July 22 to 25. This announcement was made in the house of commons tonight by the prime minister during the debate on the Quebec battlefields bill. Sir Wilfrid Laurier read the following letter from the governor-general: Ottawa, March 3, 1908.—My Dear Sir Wilfrid—It gives me great pleasure to inform you that his royal highness the Prince of Wales, in response to your invitation, has graciously signified his willingness to attend the tercentenary celebrations of the founding of Quebec by Champlain, provided they can be held during the last week of July.

The prearranged movements of the Atlantic fleet, which will accompany the Prince of Wales to Quebec, make it necessary for his royal highness to arrive on the 22d of July and to depart on the morning of the 25th of July.

His royal highness regrets that for this reason his stay in the Dominion must be curtailed so as to make it impossible for him to visit places other than Quebec on this occasion. Lord Elgin, who is anxious to do everything in his power to make the tercentenary a success, wishes to congratulate the Dominion on the important announcement which it is my privilege to request you to make to parliament of his royal highness's approaching visit. Joining most sincerely those congratulations, I remain, yours very sincerely, (Signed) GREY.

The reading of the letter was greeted with general cheering and in the lobby after house rose session satisfaction was expressed amongst the members that his royal highness is to honor the Dominion with a visit during the great national celebration.

Information Meager.

The bill appropriating $200,000 for the preservation of the battlefields of Quebec was generally commended, but there was some dissatisfaction expressed at the meager data furnished by the prime minister. He admitted that this entire sum might be used up in the present which would celebrate the tercentenary of Quebec, a great national holiday to be made memorable in history by the visit of the

LEAFLET TELLS ABOUT BIRDS OFTENEST SEEN IN OREGON

One swallow may not make a summer, but when the little swift-flying harbingers of merry sunshine come by the hundred and dart in under one's front stoop of a rainy morning it is pretty certain that the time of blossoms and green leaves is drawing near. Although some have found their way into the city parks and the trees of the residence portion of the city as reported so far, suburban residents have seen seen members of the advance guard during the past few days.

Albert R. Sweetser, state biologist, has issued a new leaflet in the series being published by the state listing and describing some of the most often seen birds of Oregon. The leaflet contains articles by William L. Finley, illustrated from photographs from life by Herman T. Bohman. He describes the robin, the flicker, the chickadee, the blue jay, the American crow, the California purple Finch, the junco, the sparrow hawk, the western meadow lark, whose cheerful music has been the accompaniment of winter walks through the fields since Christmas, and the screech owl, which is valuable because it destroys outworn and small field animals, are all discussed interestingly in the leaflet.

Prince of Wales and the assembled fleets of Great Britain, France and the United States. The sum was finally appropriated.

Dr. Spruille pointed out that the great expenditure necessary for the national park to dedicate the battle in which Wolfe and Montcalm fell would ultimately fall upon the Dominion government and Mr. R. L. Borden, while approving of the scheme itself, suggested that parliament should be consulted. Other features of the Bill include a company plant at a cost of $1,000,000 is a feature in this otherwise commendable enterprise which is well worthy of attention. Other features of the Bill include a company plant at a cost of $1,000,000 is a feature in this otherwise commendable enterprise which is well worthy of attention.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in moving the second reading of the bill, alluded in eloquent terms to the stirring scenes that closed the long struggle between England and France for the possession of Canada. He explained that this $100,000 would be placed in the hands of a commission. This commission would consist primarily of five members, to be appointed by the government. The other commissioners already chosen were: George Garneau, mayor of Quebec; Sir George Drummond, Byron E. Walker, Colonel G. T. Denison, and Hon. Adelard Turgeon of Quebec. The bill further provides that any province contributing $100,000 may name an additional member of the commission. The same provision extends to Great Britain or any self-governing state of the empire.

The premier then read to the house, amidst hearty applause from the sides of the chamber, the letter from Earl Grey announcing the approaching visit of the Prince of Wales to attend the tercentenary celebration, arriving with the British fleet at the city of Quebec, on the 22d of July, and remaining until the 25th.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier made the further announcement that the Province of Quebec would at once contribute $100,000 and the city of Quebec was prepared to make a handsome contribution. Large private contributions are expected and the total cost might amount to $2,000,000. The government owned the plains proper, consisting of 75 acres, and also the citadel. The Quebec jail and the Ross rifle works occupied some of the ground that would ultimately have to be acquired.

OREGON ASSESSMENT LAWS HIGHLY PRAISED

King County Assessor Gets Some Pointers From Multnomah's Officials.

Thomas A. Parrish of Seattle, and assessor of King county, Washington, recognizes a good thing when he sees it and for that reason visited in Portland several days to find out how County Assessor Sigler determines valuation on real estate property, real and personal property, as well as to learn the workings of the Oregon laws relative to taxation.

Parrish is a pleasing man who was sought for by the office and caught. He is as independent as a school boy on a vacation and fears neither railroads nor politicians. He has a reputation of assessing property without inquiring into the ownership of the property and raised the valuation of the Seattle Electric Railway company from $60,000 to more than $5,000,000 in one year. In speaking of his work, Mr. Parrish said: "I have only been in office one year and do not know all there is to know about the duties of an assessor and that is why I came to Portland. Mr. Sigler has been of great assistance to me in determining the best ways of assessing valuations and the procedure of business in my office. His speech before our association in Washington considered one of the best at our meeting, and for that reason I came to Portland to inquire into many details that I did not know about.

"Your Oregon laws are far in advance of the Washington laws on this work. There are 80 many points in your favor that if I started enumerating them my Seattle friends would think I had lost my mind in a short time." "While Oregon has taken the lead in the matter of assessing railroads and personal property, we are learning and doing to equal you in a short time." "For instance, when I raised the assessment of the Seattle Electric from $60,000 to more than $5,000,000, the officials thought they were terribly abused, but the company's property is worth many millions more than it has been assessed as I can assure you. I expect to be assessed for the balance of the year in a short time. It is holding us back in Seattle, but only to determine the best methods of fixing valuations."

Mr. Parrish left last night for Seattle after spending several days in the Rose City.

FINDS OREGON COUNTRY RICHEST IN AMERICA

After a week of traveling through western Oregon on his way home from southern California, Manager Tom Richardson of the Portland Commercial Club is enthusiastic over the prospects of development work. He said the last week was the most encouraging period he had ever spent in Oregon Development work.

Richardson visited Ashland, Medford, Grants Pass, Roseburg, Albany, Stayton and other points. The Roseburg people are taking up the work of advertising and developing the Umpqua valley along the same lines that the Rogue River valley has one of the finest fruit regions of the world. Mr. Richardson's stay in southern California convinced him more firmly than ever that Oregon is the best situated and the richest country in America. Conditions here are much better than any other part of the coast.

EASTERN CAPITAL TO DEVELOP GOLD MINES

Josephine county property of the Alameda Consolidated Mines company, of which O. M. Crouch of Portland is president, will be developed by the Michigan capital. A smelter will be installed and in operation with a capacity of 100 tons daily by May 15, according to statements made by the investors. The sum of $500,000 has been invested in the stock of the company by a syndicate, including J. H. Edwards, J. D. Detweiler, Walter Payne and A. F. Towner of Toledo, C. C. Aler of Columbus, Miss. E. B. Smith of Chicago, and Bacon of Wyandotte, Michigan. O. M. Crouch is said to be enough rich ore in sight to run a 100-ton smelter more than 200 years. The mine has been fully developed by Portland capital, and about $250,000 has been expended in opening tunnels and crosscuts.

BAUER AND KREISLER CONCERT TOMORROW

A very brilliant and representative audience will greet tomorrow evening at the Helig theatre the two famous artists who will give a concert under the direction of Lois Steers-Wynne. It is particularly interesting to stand near the crowded box office for a few minutes and hear the people as they buy tickets. One can tell instantly which of the great artists is the attraction, for one person will lean anxiously over the chair and point to seats for the "Kreisler" recital, while another, just as eager, will inquire for special location in order to watch Bauer's hands while he plays. The coming of these two men is one of the finest musical events ever offered the local music public. The seats for the joint recital are now selling at the Helig box office, and the concert will begin promptly at a quarter past 8 o'clock.

LOOKS LIKE HAMMER MADE BY INDIANS

Philip Francis of Bend, while excavating for a house on Sellwood street near Williams avenue in Albina, picked up a peculiar shaped stone he believes is part of a weapon used by the Indians in their warfare and in hunting for game. The stone is hard and very regularly shaped with a groove for the things that bound it to the handle. The stone is oval in shape with pointed ends. It was taken by Mr. Francis to the city hall, where it will be left as a part of the collection of Indian souvenirs owned by the Oregon Historical society.
