WEATHER REPORT

A moderate disturbance is central over British Columbia and a small high pressure area is central over southern Oregon. This distribution of pressure has caused steep gradients for southerly winds and a maximum wind velocity of 36 miles occurred early this morning at Seattle. Light rain has fallen in western Washington in connection with the British Columbia disturbance. A trough of low pressure extends from Lake Superior south to Louisiana. No rain or snow of consequence has fallen in the northern states under the influence of this trough of low pressure but in the southern states the rainfall has been heavy, especially in Alabama and Georgia. It is warmer in Oregon, Idaho and northern Nevada and the temperatures in all the northern states are above normal.

The indications are for showers in this district tonight and Tuesday, with no marked changes in temperatures.
