WEATHER REPORT

A disturbance of decided character is central this morning over Colorado. A rather weak high pressure area overlies the north Pacific states. Another high pressure area is central north of the great lakes and the barometer continues high over the south Atlantic states. Light rain has fallen in Arizona, and rain or snow has fallen in northern New Mexico, western Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, Montana, eastern Oregon, eastern Washington, the Dakotas and the Canadian northwest. Unusually low temperatures prevail on the Pacific slope, and heavy frosts occurred this morning in Washington, Idaho and eastern Oregon.

The indications are for fair weather in this district tonight and Saturday, with frost tonight in western Oregon and western Washington, and with freezing temperatures east of the Cascade mountains.
