

TOWER "IN BAD" WITH GERMANY

American Ambassador Asked to Explain Why He Misrepresented Kaiser.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Berlin, March 27.—In American slang the situation resulting from the objection sent to Washington to the appointment of Dr. David Jayne Hill as ambassador to Germany is now "up to Ambassador Tower."

Following a semi-official denial by the state department yesterday, that the German government had objected to Mr. Hill, and following a report that the reichstag proposed to censure the kaiser if it was shown that he had objected to the American for purely personal reasons, an official statement from the emperor himself was issued today by the foreign office.

The state declared flatly that the kaiser never said or wrote a word that might be construed by anyone as an objection to Mr. Hill's appointment. On the contrary, it is stated that as late as last November, the kaiser expressed his warm approval of the Hill appointment and since then has had no occasion to change his views. It is denied that there is a statement apropos of the matter on route to Washington.

The kaiser's action completely ends the matter so far as the German government is concerned. It removes the last shadow of doubt that Washington was misinformed. Just where the misinformation came from will now have to be explained by Ambassador Tower.

As a result of the controversy, it is said that the kaiser who has heretofore been on the most friendly terms with both the American ambassador and his wife, is now quite piqued at both of them, and unless Mr. Tower withdraws very speedily of his own volition, it is probable that Washington will receive an intimation that its ambassador has become persona non grata.

The afternoon press is full of the various phases of the Tower-Hill controversy and the opinion is that Ambassador Tower is entirely to blame for the confusion.

Die Morgen Post declares that Ambassador Tower is not only unfriendly to his successor but that he displays the same animus to his predecessor. The paper attributes Tower's dislike to Dr. Hill to an old enmity of their wives and brands the controversy as a "pettycoast crisis."

The Post declares that the only peg on which Ambassador Tower is hanging an explanation is a jesting remark made by the kaiser recently—what the Americans call a "jolly"—in which he laughingly said in the presence of the Ambassador, "I don't think I can forgive my friend, Mr. Roosevelt, if he recalls Ambassador Tower." The explanation is that Dr. Hill will be appointed.

Ambassador Tower gave out an authentic statement late this afternoon in which he stated that he had definitely decided to retire in a few months. He would not intimate the date.

Pretty Woman "Tries Again"

Miss Alexandra Carlisle.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
London, March 27.—Charles Frohman certainly has the courage of his convictions. The news that he has engaged Miss Alexandra Carlisle, the young and beautiful English actress, for a joint starring tour in the United States with Joseph Coyne, no doubt caused a whole lot of heart-burning and regret among the London managerial corps. For Miss Carlisle has been "tripe or pickings" for some time past but while the London managers footed about, hesitated and delayed for an "opportunity" of utilizing her undoubted ability, the American "Napoleon of the drama," stepped in and carried her off before their very eyes.

Those who follow the news closely and are blessed with a good memory will recall Miss Carlisle, for she has made a previous but unsuccessful attempt to exhibit her talents in the United States. It seems that Miss Carlisle's first acquaintance with fame was obtained as leading lady in London for Nat Goodwin. He took her from a small part in "The Voyage Inheritance," one of the Vedrenne-Barker productions at the Court theatre. So well did Miss Carlisle stand the test of this sudden jump into prominence, supporting the American comedian in "A Gilded Fool" and "An American Citizen" at the Shaftesbury, that he decided to take her to America as his leading lady.

When he came to this decision, Mr. Goodwin wrote to the United States, feeling about his "find" expanding on her beauty and talents. The photographs that reached New York certainly demonstrated that the young actress merited the reputation which she had gained during her short career of being one of the most beautiful women on the English stage.

STANFORD STUDENTS

If they put in their names. For all the personal injuries, if any, the men who took part in the parade apologized. And also for any breach of the university discipline. As a result the committee has put 41 men out of college and deducted sufficient credits from 97 others to cause them to practically remain in college another semester. It is the opinion of most of the student body and many members of the faculty that the committee has acted contrary to all rules of justice in handling the matter. A conciliatory move on the part of the committee, at half a dozen intervals in the process, which could have smoothed the whole matter.

By Lane Goodsell.

(Second 'Varsity Pitcher.)

The breach between the faculty and students is wider today than ever before, and I believe that cordial relations could have been preserved by the interference of those higher in the administration of the university. If the apologies had been met half way we and Stanford would have been a great deal better off.

By A. A. Murphy.

(President of Students' Body.)

I would like to correct a false impression which is entertained by many members of the public at large. The students of Stanford are not objecting to the regulations of the faculty and committee in regard to the use of liquor on the campus. The question arose out of a statement in regard to the stand of the faculty on drunkenness, which was out of the latter part of this controversy those regulations have never been the subject of discussion. Twelve men were suspended from the university, not for participating in the parade as such, but for three incidents which occurred in the demonstration of protest. The first was the use of liquor, which is entirely too severe, and is protesting against the injustice of the act. After having apologized and taken every means to make amends for their acts, the students naturally expected more just treatment from the faculty. They did not get it, however, and now, having exhausted every means at their disposal to obtain this reinstatement, many members of the student body believe that in order to impress upon the public university authorities the injustice of the penalty, nothing is left but to peacefully withdraw from the university. I am not positive whether that course will be followed.

100 Years Ago in Ohio.

From the Ohio Magazine.
Incredible as it seems, Cleveland, the present metropolis of the state and one of the great cities of the country, was not incorporated as a village until 1814, and had then a population of not more than 300 people, though its location made it prominent in a small way. The entire commerce of Lake Erie up to 1812 was carried on by six small schooners. Cincinnati, already important though not yet incorporated, contained about 100 dwellings, a good courthouse and jail, upward of 20 stores, and, as an old description says, "The various branches of mechanism are carried on with spirit, industry of every kind being duly encouraged by the citizens. It is likely to become a considerable manufacturing place." Until 1811, when a steamboat was for the first time launched on the Ohio river, keel boats propelled with poles were used for transportation every four weeks. On account of the Indians and outlaws who incited the banks the trips were dangerous, so the boats were provided with bullet proof covers and carried cannon and small firearms.

ABRUZZI ANGRY AT AMBASSADOR

Blames Italian Diplomat for Divulging Identity in Recent Visit.

(United Press Leased Wire.)

London, March 27.—Duke Abruzzi, reported to be engaged to Miss Katherine Elkins, is said to be prepared to take steps to ask the recall of the Italian ambassador at Washington, because he blames that official for divulging his identity in his recent visit to America. This report was circulated today upon the arrival of the duke at Liverpool. He would not discuss the report, and it is said on what seems to be good authority that he feels that he would have been able to travel incognito had it not been for the interest that the ambassador at Washington had taken in his affair. Another report is that he will carry the matter directly to the king and ask for the diplomat's recall. Abruzzi refused also to say whether or not he was engaged to Miss Elkins.

ALBANY BOOSTERS EXTREMELY BUSY

Organization Is Forming and "More Payrolls" Is the Slogan.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Albany, Or., March 27.—The movement for a greater Albany is progressing satisfactorily. A temporary boost organization has been perfected, with P. A. Young president and Joseph H. Halsey secretary. Committees were appointed to report Monday, March 30, when the permanent organization will be perfected, a plan of action decided upon and an active campaign started for advertising.

A city with a big payroll is desired and it is confidently expected that the promotion of new enterprises will receive the earnest attention of the club and citizens. One subscription has been raised of $5,000 toward a fund of $100,000 for a big sawmill and this has brought into prominence others who believe Albany so located as to be the premier valley city as a manufacturing and shipping center. The timber of the Santiam and the Calapooia districts will be cut in Albany and this is the logical distributing point for all this great wealth of forest products.

COST OF LIVING HAS DECREASED

Price of Many Commodities Said to Have Dropped 12 Per Cent in Year.

(United Press Leased Wire.)

New York, March 27.—The housewife and wage earner will learn with joy that, according to the latest computations of the industrial agencies—just made public, prices of many commodities have decreased in the last year 12 per cent—an average of 1 per cent per month. The cost of living has, therefore, gone down just that much. This decrease, however, is not found in many of the staples which go to prolong life. For instance, while the decreases include live sheep, live hogs, eggs, beef, pork, bacon, ham, lard, butter, macaroni, codfish, coffee, molasses, salt peanuts, lemons, raisins and currants, there is an increase seen in wheat, corn, oats, barley, milk, cheese, sugar, tea, rice, beans, peas, potatoes, apples, cranberries, petroleum and tobacco. The table shows that the low-water mark in prices was reached in 1895.
