GERMAN REPORTERS'

Von Bulow has settled the "reporters' strike" in the German reichstag.

Herr Groeber has said he was sorry he called the press representatives "swine" and everybody except Herr Groeber, is satisfied.

Silverstein will be able to identify Berkman by the latter's voice. A card on the bomb thrower's person bore Berkman's name and it is the theory of the police that the youth received his inspiration for Saturday's act from the anarchist leader.

Today the anarchists and socialists are clampring for the resignation of Groeber, is satisfied. Chancellor Von Chancellor Von Bulow's colonial speech was all ready and he wanted to make it without loss of time. He to make it without loss of time. He cared a good deal more, however, about having the country know what he said than he did for the reichstag's views. So he brought all kinds of pressure to bear on Centrist Leader Groeber to force an apology to the press and the latter finally succumbed. The apology was read, the newspaper men reported it satisfactorily and the reporters returned to work.

LEGACY MIGHT REVEAL DEGENERACY

(United Press Leased Wire.) Paris, March 30 .- The French academy has turned down the $20,000 legacy left in the will of Miss LeClere, a New York woman of French parentage, New York woman of French parentage, who specified that the money was to be devoted to the 'moralization of the women of the French streets.

The reason assigned by the academy officials of this is that the acceptance of the money would be the acknowledgment of the existence of a national outrage and condition of degeneracy.

Today the anarchists and socialists are clamoring for the resignation of Commissioner Bingham. They insist Saturday's trouble was the result of an attempt by the police to apply St. Petersburg tactics to New York men. Violent speeches in half a dozen halls yesterday denounced the attempt to stifle "free speech," and declarations were heard on every side that a repetition of General Binglam's tactics of Saturday would result in further bloodshed.

Grace Brown lived 20 years, and the No words could exaggerate this indifference.

Grace Brown lived 20 years, a farmer's daughter who became a worker in a little factory town, one of 60 or 70 girls in one of the many thousands of factories. Among the millions of humble workers who earn their bread by their hands, none was more obscure by their hands, none was more obscure than she.

Grace Brown died. The world that cared nothing about her living became concerned in her death, or rather in the manner of it. Had she died from what the law is pleased to call natural causes the world would have been as indifferent to her dying as it was to her living. But she was believed to have been murdered; wherefore the world took cognizance of it.

Newspapers of large circulation have found that murder has commercial value when exploited as news. These printed much about the death of the young girl. The law and the reporters, moving swiftly, had disclosed to the world that Grace Brown had a sweetheart—a man with little green eyes—Chester Gillette, who had lived some 23 obscure, unimportant years, who was placed under arrest, charged with murdering her. It was spread broadcast that the girl was facing the deepest disgrace she could have endured.

With the Green Eyes" Admits Having Murdered His Former Sweetheart.

(United Press Leased Wire.) Auburn, N. Y., March 30 .- Chester Gillette, the young slayer of Grace Brown, the sweetheart whom he betrayed and deserted, paid the penalty of his act in the death chamber at the state prison here this morning.

Almost with his last breath the boy confessed to the Rev. Henry Mcworld beyond her own narrow circle. Illvarey, his spiritual advisor, and to had not the slightest interest in her ex- Prison Chaplain Herrick that he was guilty of the crime.

Rev. McIllravey refused to give the details of the confession which was an oral one, but he admitted that it bore out practically every contention of the prosecution during the trial.

As the youtn sat strapped in the chair he called the Rev. McIllravey to his side, and the executioners stepped "Tell mother I am prepared to meet my God," he said in a calm voice. "And that not a single act now stands between me and him. Tell her I have no hard feelings against anyone, but am hard feelings against anyone, but am only filled with sorrow for the pain, anguish and sorrow I have brought upon her and others. Good bye."

Gillette entered the death house at 6:13 a. m. His face was ashen, but he showed no sign of emotion and walked unassisted to the chair, settling down in a comfortable posture with just the faintest trace of a sigh of relief. Bows His Head.

Bows Eis Read.

He was attended by two clergymen, and after the preliminaries had been arranged, Chaplain Herrick recited the Twenty-third Psalm. Gillette sat quietly with bowed head and at its conclusion made his statement to the Rev. McIllravey. The cap was adjusted. The switch was turned and a seven and a half ampere current of 1.800 volts applied for 30 seconds. Only one contact was made, and at 6.20 Prison Physician Gerin pronounced the boy dead.

During the execution the father, mother, two sisters and a brother of Gillette were waiting at the Salvation Army headquarters. When informed that it was all over, Mrs. Gillette, who has spent months in a vain endeavor to save her son, uttered a sharp cry and fell forward in her husband's arms in a state of complete collapse. Her condition is critical and she is today in the care of a physician.

Following an official post mortem the body of the executed youth will be turned over to his parents for burial. Gillette passed a calm night in conversation with his spiritual advisers and in the preparation of a statement which was given out by the prison warden today. It reads:

Valley of Death.

Valley of Death.

"I am entering the shadow of the valley of death, and it is my desire to do everything to remove the slightest deubt of my finding Christ. My one regret in this sad moment is that I did not give him preeminence in my life while I had the opportunity. If I could only say something in these few moments left me that would draw young ments left me that would draw young men to him, I would deem it the greatest privilege ever granted me. There is not one thing that I have left undone which would bar me from facing flod and knowing that my sins will have been forgiven. My task is done; my victory won."

Today an official signed statement was given out by the Rev. McIllravey and Prison Chaplain Herrick which was sfollows:
"Because of our privileged relations."

and Prison Chaplain Herrick which was as follows:

"Because of our privileged relation with Chaster Gillette, we deem it us wise to make any detailed statement to what we learned from our talks within, but we simply wish to say for the benefit of the public mind, that no less mistake was made in the carrying ou of the ends of justice."

And so ends the pitiful tragedy of pallid, cowering youth, and a simple country girl, who loved unwisely be with pathetic constancy—a story in relifie that might have come from the imaginative pen of a Hawhors.

The story of the murder of Greek Brown, or "Billie" Brown, her friend called her, by Chaster Gillette, closely Big Mooss lake, under the free cold blooded.
