Salem and Stayton to Be Connected—Oregon Electric to Albany.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Salem, Or., March 30.—Delegates representing the commercial organizations of this city went to Stayton to boost for the construction of an electric line of railway from that live city on the Santiam to the capital of the state. They report a plan of financing the road agreed upon and a committee appointed consisting of George Brown and Willis Caldwell, prominent manufacturers of that city, to act with a like committee of Salem business men who will promote the enterprise.

Enthusiasm rose so high Saturday night that the Stayton business men expressed themselves as willing to subscribe for a large block of stock on the spot.

The committee of five trustees, consisting of two from the commercial bodies of each city and one county official yet to be named, will have entire charge of the disbursements and construction of the line. It is expected that Salem business men will get together and act this week and the subscription will be opened within a week and the road will be built this summer. The line is badly needed for the electric road, as Salem and Stayton are separated by a large body of water and the construction of a bridge is estimated to cost at least 50,000 cords of wood a year and the line will run through large bodies of fuel timber.

The plan of construction agreed upon is to be carried out entirely with home capital, as all efforts to interest eastern capitalists have so far failed.

Salem to Albany.

The Oregon Electric company has placed a force of surveyors in the field to extend its line from Stayton through to Albany. One line has been surveyed on the west side of the Southern Pacific and near the site of the Peble Minded institute south of this city. It passes through the Myers gap, and still Turner on almost a direct line from this city.

Another survey leaves the city south via the slough road to Croston and Sidney, following the east bank of the Willamette to Albany.

The Oregon Electric and the Welsh systems are racing with each other to connect Salem and Albany, the next link in the valley system.

The visitors today are being given a welcome by the local teachers and local commercial organizations. Miss Fannie Belle Curtis, president of the union, will not be a candidate for reelection on account of illness.

It is not thought that many other changes will be made among the officers.

COTTON WORKERS' WAGES REDUCED

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Lowell, Mass., March 30.—Men and women to the number of 20,000 are affected by the action of the cotton mills of Lowell in putting in effect today a reduction of 10 per cent in their wages.

Throughout New England it is expected that similar action will be taken by the owners of mills if conditions do not change. As a result of the reduction in Lowell the manufacturers say there is a depression in the cloth market and that the cost of cotton is higher. In New England the cotton mills number 240 out of 1,000 in the United States and employ about 165,000 men and women.
