WHEAT CROP INCREASED

Estimated That 2,500 Acres Have Been Sown to Fall and Winter Seed.

Table with 2 columns: Crop, Area (Acres), and Yield (Bushels). Rows include Oregon, Washington, Idaho, and Total.

By Hyman H. Cohen. The Pacific northwest will produce a larger amount of wheat this year than in its history this year—even surpassing the record yield of a year ago. This is the present indication from a report of the acreage of the three states.

Practically all the seeding is completed in Oregon and the Palouse country in Washington remains to be put in before the entire northwest will be covered with seed.

There has been a deficiency in the rainfall all through the three states thus far this season, the seeding never done under more favorable circumstances than during the present operations.

Considering the conditions that ruled a year ago, the Pacific northwest is due to produce 3,500,000 bushels of wheat this summer.

Wheat men say they never had such encouraging reports of the crop in this season. The crop has never had a single setback since being sown and the progress of the plant has been making every better progress than the fields which were in better shape during the freeze.

One of the features of the special report of correspondents just tabulated is the fact that a large per cent of the increased acreage will be in bluestem or in other hard wheats. This is believed to be caused by the greater demand for this grade of wheat.

Butter market is weaker. The creamery butter market is weaker because of the greater output and flush of season. It is not very far away now.

Fish of all kinds was rather scarce the past week. Dressed veal is weaker owing to larger supplies. Prices hold well on dressed hogs.
