Motable Absences.

An interesting fact in connection with the names submitted by the West Portland team is the notable absence of Joe Fay, Andy Anderson and others whom the fans were led to believe would be members of the West Portland bunch this season.

Andersen is prohibited from playing by a clause in the by-laws which bars any player under contract to be reany player under contract to be re-served or owned by any minor or major organized baseball league. Anderson is under contract to Aberdeen, where he played last year. This was inserted to prevent managers of losing teams strengthening up in the last few games and making a garrison finish for the pennant, which is regarded as mahi-festly unfair. pennant, which is regarded as mai festly unfair. Asher Houston, the third baseman,

Asher Houston, the third baseman, is not found among the names eligible for the opening games. President Whitemore said this morning that Houston would not be permitted to play unless the two managers claiming him—Whitehead of West Portland and Helser of Vancouver—got together and settled their differences over the ownership of the youngster. Whitemore holds that it is none of his business, and that it would be rank favoritism if he should arbitrarily award Houston to either of arbitrarily award Houston to either of the clubs. COLUMBIA TEAM LINES

IP WITH WEST SIDERS

The West Side High and Columbia university baseball teams will take a fling at each other tomorrow afternoon at the Vaughn street grounds.

This is Columbia's initial appearance on the diamond this season, but with their winter practice in the "gym" they feel fairly strong. Their squad of 15 was recently weeded for the purpose of selecting the regular team and in Wednesday's game Gleason will catch instead of Ennis, who hurt his hand in the last week of practice. Locke and Weisgerber will pitch, Captain Dockstader will beat his old position on first, George Dooley, a new man, will play second, with Campbell of last year at short and Davis on third. O'Brien, McDonald and Vaughan Perkins, a new man, will be in the field.

Paris, April 6 .- Finding that the continued opposition of the senate to the workmen's old age pension bill, passed by the chamber in 1906, promised to postpone indefinitely the realization of this social reform which the radical wing of the French Republicans has been promising for years, the chamber of deputies has finally consented to the principle of a compromise and voted a straint. been promising for years, the chamber of deputies has finally consented to the principle of a compromise and voted a resolution serving notice on the govern-ment and the senate that this com-promise must become law before the expiration of the present year.

Workmen's pensions is one of the cardinal principles of French socialism. Like the German scheme, it is based upon the theory that improvidence is a so-cial evil and that the state should compel the workmen to put aside part of their earnings to provide for their old age. responsibility of the state toward the old and decrepit was recognized in the law of 1905, providing for aid to persons over 70 who are infirm, incapacitated or incurable.

More than $50,000 persons benefited from this law last year, receiving about $12,000,000. By the terms of the bill, workmen contribute 2 per cent of their wages and the employers a like percentage during a period of 30 years, thus cre-ating a fund from which the workman thereafter is to receive an annual min-imum pension of $72. The state is to contribute only when the forced savings of the workmen do not create a fund large enough to furnish a pension of that amount.

Upon the promulgation of the law, it is proposed to grant annual pensions to all workmen more than 60, who have worked 30 years. The number of persons who would be entitled to pensions the first year varies according to the estimates from 1,054,000 to 2,000,000.

PENINSULA PROMOTERS PUT IN WRONG LIGHT

The last sentence in the above does a gross injustice to the real promoters of the upbuilding of the peninsula, who are to a man against the proposed improvement of Portsmouth avenue.

That proposed improvement was inspired by the Standard Oil company and was planned and pushed by two of the paid employees of that company, whose in sames are J. C. Houston and T. A. Ketchum.

Rapidly Reproducing Customs of Monarchical Society of Old World.

London, April 7.-This morning's Daily Chronicle contains an article by Bydney Brooks entitled "Monarchical America," in which the author makes some interesting remarks about the growth of etiquette in Washington. In the course of his article he says:

"The beautiful and spacious city on the banks of the Potomac is unlike any capital in Europe, or any of its sister cities in America. It is an American community, doing un-American things, leading an un-American life. It lives simply for two things society and politics. It neither talks business nor thinks it; the word conveys no more than a remote and abstract meaning to its mind. Commerce and all its banalities are refreshingly, delightfully absent. There is serenity, almost benignity, in its ordering of the routine of life. Nobody hustles' in Washington. It is the one city on the continent where America is really at lefaure.

"That indeed is its great attraction. That, together with the lure and glitter of the diplomatic corps, is the reason why Washington steadily tends to become the center of American fashion and the haunt of the nouveaux riches. "The beautiful and spacious city on

City of Leisure.

Being a city of leisure, Washington must have something to amuse itself with. Being also the headquarters of officialdom, the seat of government, and the center of diplomacy, it is natural that it should amuse itself with the problems of a Republican court and the minutiae of precedence. I sometimes doubt whether any capital, even Vienna or Madrid, troubles itself so much about these questions as Washington. They are debated with a heat, an ingenuousness, and a bitterness that can hardly be matched anywhere.

an ingenuousness, and a bitterness that can hardly be matched anywhere. "It is not however, all chaos. Certain rules have been evolved and certain customs established, which serve to guide each successive occupant of the White House. Thus the number of state dinners and receptions that the president has to give is now definitely fixed. Thus, too, it is now pretty well understood that an invitation to lunch or dinner at the White House is the equivalent of a command. Thus, also, it is now accepted that the president should on all occasions go in first, that nobody should sit down until he has taken his place, that he should always haw; M. A. A. "But beyond this narrow region there is a whole wilderness still to be surveyed and staked out. Should senators, for instance, be given the pass over cabinet ministers? Does the admiral of the navy rank above the secretary of the navy? What is the relative posi-tion of the speakers and of the secre-tary of state? The vice president be-ing a sort of heir apparent, ought am-hassadors to follow or precede him? What is the exact place of the judiciary in the scale of precedence? If two senators were elected on the same day, which of them should make the first advance? And what about the status of the unmarried daughters of the great officials?

Embryo Society.

"These and a hundred similar conundrums are debated in Washington with a more than monarchical fervor. The mere fact that they can be propounded shows that the American eapital is still in the embryonic stage of social development. But the intensity of emotion devoted to their discussion shows also that Washington when it finally evolves a protocol will set an inordinate value upon it. Indeed, wherever a point in the code is definitely established it is adhered to with an almost comical tenacity. Etiquette, for in-WORKMEN'S PENSIONS comical tenacity. Etiquette, for instance, prescribes calls as the first of social duties, and calling is indulged in by the Washingtonians on a scale that puts Londoners and Parisians, who pay their calls not in person but by post, becausely to shame.

"Just as the tumult of the White House has been reduced to dignity, just as the old type of presidential receptions at which all were welcome who chose to come is giving way before the principle of selection, so Washington in time will abandon its indiscriminate calling habits and will reproduce one by one the outward forms and customs and ways of doing things that distinguish the monarchical and aristocratic societies of the old world." straint.

QUEEN OF ENGLAND BREAKS THE LAW

Also the Empress Dowager of Rus sia and Ex-Queen Margherita of Italy.

London, April 6.-There have been some notable lawbreakers recently. In the first place, the British revenue laws have been broken by no less personages than the queen of England and sonages than the queen of England and the empress dowager of Russia, who visiting the Union Jack club, March 17, were so pleased with the neat little noggins in which whiskey is put up for soldier and sallor members of the club that they insisted on buying one each. The secretary of the club begged them to accept the noggins as a present, but the royal visitors insisted on paying their "tuppences," as did also the Princess Victoria. The club, of course, risks immediate closure for selling intoxicants to non-members, but the intoxicants to non-members, but the in-land revenue authorities have up to the present taken no proceedings. the present taken no proceedings.

The next illustrious lawbreaker was ex-Queen Margherita, of Italy. The story goes that the duke of Aosta, who is the possessor of one of the finest picture galleries in the world, was temporarily embarrassed for cash and determined to dispose of two of his canvases. As is well known, the sale of art treasures outside of Italy is forbidden by law, but as Margherita was about to visit France in an automobile, the duke conceived the happy idea of hiding the masterpieces in her car, confident that the French customs officers would not search it. The queen's serwould not search it. The queen's servants were, of course, in the secret. Thus a Raphael, a Titian and a Velasquez safely reached Paris.

Rt. Hon. Herbert Asquith, chancellor of the exchequer and acting prime minister of England, is next on the list. His chauffeur was summoned and pleaded guilty of speeding beyond the legal 10 miles an hour, in St. James Park, but that his master, who was in the car, was privileged in the royal parks as he was acting prime minister. The magistrate did not see it in this light. "He is not the prime minister," he said, "but the chancellor of the exwould not search it. The queen's ser-vants were, of course, in the secret
