WEATHER REPORT

A new high pressure area has made its appearance over Alberta and a new low presure area has developed over Utah and Nevada. The British Columbia disturbance is now central over northern Minnesota and a large high pressure area overlies the Atlantic states. During the last 24 hours light rain has fallen in Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, and at widely scattered places along the Atlantic coast. Moderately heavy snow has fallen in Alberta. It is much colder in British Columbia and in the middle Atlantic states, and correspondingly warmer in the lower Missouri and upper Mississippi valleys. The weather is cloudy along the Pacific coast from the mouth of the Columbia river to Los Angeles.

The indications are for fair weather in this district tonight and Wednesday, except in southern Idaho, where showers will likely occur either tonight or Wednesday. Frosts are also indicated for tonight in Oregon, Washington and northern Idaho.
