HIGHWAYMAN'S NAME BELIEVED TO BE HULL

Dead Negro Made Few Friends Among His Own Color.

The police have been unable as yet to establish the identity of the negro highwayman who was killed Wednesday night in a revolver duel with Patrolman Charles D. Henson. It has been learned, however, that the man had been a frequenter of some of the northend resorts for several months, though he made no intimate acquaintances, and was regarded with suspicion by men of his own color. Two men have been found who say they believe the man's name was Hull, but beyond this there is no information available that tends to establish his identity.

Patrolman Henson's wound, which is in the fleshy part of the upper right arm, will incapacitate him from active police duty for some time. It is not thought that it will prove serious, aside from the pain caused by inflammation of the wound and the necessity of keeping the limb in antiseptic bandages until the wound begins to heal.

Officer Henson, as well as all other members of the department actively responsible for the capture of the three desperate highwaymen, are given great credit by their superiors, and much commendation by the public at large. Chief of Police Gritzmacher last night addressed the following letter to Captain of Police Bailey, in command of the second night relief:

"It gives me great pleasure to note the splendid work of the officers of your relief directly engaged in the capture of the highwaymen last night. I am also convinced that the success in a great measure is due to your energetic directions and good judgment. Kindly assure the officers of your relief that the police administration is well pleased with their work and give special mention to Acting Sergeant Wendorf and Officers Henson, Vessey, Tenant and Abbott for their splendid work."

At the inquest held yesterday afternoon over the body of the dead highwayman the coroner's jury found that the man came to his death from gunshot wounds inflicted by Patrolman Henson while that officer was in the proper discharge of his duty. The jury held that the officer was fully justified in taking the man's life.

MODERN CONCEPTION OF SHYLOCK PLAY

Leo Cooper, who put on the Greek plays at Stanford university, will appear at Ahavai Sholom synagogue, under the auspices of Theodore Herzel lodge I. O. B. B., next Sunday evening, and deliver a lecture on "A Modern Conception of the Merchant of Venice," with readings from the play. There will be no admission fee, and the Jewish friends of the lecturer have invited the public to come and hear an intellectual interpretation of the story of Shakespeare's great play.

CRISIS IN CHESTER STRIKE COMES TODAY

(United Press Leased Wire.)

Chester, Pa., April 17.—The calm before the storm in the streetcar strike prevails today, and, although the crowds are quiet, they are in an ugly mood.

The crisis is expected before tonight and in anticipation of the most serious trouble four troops of the state constabulary, consisting of 200 men, were brought into the city at noon. Every precaution to suppress violence is being taken and it is felt that if trouble begins the constabulary and police will not be able to cope with it.

Wild Duck Pest in California.

From the Holtville Tribune.

Wild ducks are giving some of our farmers a merry run for their money. On Farmer Coon's place a few days ago thousands of them could have been seen eagerly devouring the new sown grain. The grain growers Silsbee also are complaining.

Mr. Ijams owns something like 200 acres six or eight miles southwest of El Centro. He has irrigated 80 acres of his place and planted barley. Before the brain had hardly sprouted the ravenous and half-starved wary bird was on the scene ready for action. Unless the valley farmers get together and exterminate this pest they might as well cease trying to raise grain.

Hemp Plant Along Gulf Coast.

From the San Antonio Express.

The valuable nature of the work now being carried on in Texas by the United States agricultural department is again shown by the discovery that the "abaco" or hemp plant can be successfully grown in the southwest gulf country. Experiments have been carried on the last year and the horticulturists are convinced that this valuable addition can be made to the list of Texas crops.

It has long been the theory that the hemp plant would not grow successfully in any section of the world except the Philippine islands. Efforts have been made to transplant it to Africa, India and South America, but with little success. Heretofore Manila has had a monopoly of the hemp trade and the finest ropes and cordage come from that city.

The hemp plant is a variety of banana and has exactly the same appearance as the broad-leafed plants found growing in many San Antonio yards. It was quite by accident that the discovery was made that the hemp plant could be successfully grown in Texas.
